Ontario Title for Riley's Rink

The rink, consisting of Riley, Vaughan Storey vice, Bill Spinelli, lead and Chris Glibbery second, captured the Ontario honors with a-perfect seven wins in the competition.

Going into yesterday's two matches the Belleville rink had been tied with Cornwall in first place with a 5-0 record.

Thursday at 9:30 am the Riley rink drew their first game against the Cornwall unit.

"We knew we were going to have to curl against them sometime," said Riley, "but we were ready for them. All four of us were really up for it."

It's a good thing the Quinte rink was up, because after the regulation number of ends, the two teams proved it was going to be a battle of the champions.

"We were one up coming home and they (Cornwall) tied it up," said vice Vaughan Storey," but Bill came through with an excellent shot in the extra end and we won. I guess that's why he's the skip. He can make that all important final shot when we need it."

Both Riley and Spinelli have been with the Quinte Curling Club since its' opening and are charter members.

Storey and Glibbero joined the Club two years ago after moving from their respective houses in Winnipeg Manitoba and Lachine Quebec.

In the final match of the rink's seven games, the locals made no mistakes about demonstrating they were Number 1, beating Brantford 13-3, taking six of those 13 in the third, to ensure victory early.

Riley and his Belleville rink travel to St. John's, New Brufiwick on February 17 for the Canadian Senior Curling finals. There they will meet rinks from each of the other nine provinces and one from the Northwest Territories.

Home and Away Series for Cats

The Belleville Bobcats will get an opportunity to regain some lost ground this weekend when they play back to back games with sixth place Peterborough Lions.

Since the Pickering Panthers won their game against Etobicoke last night the Cats have dropped six points behind the league leading Panthers.

Tonight, the Cats play host to the Lions in the Belleville Memorial Arena. Game time is slated for 8 p.m.

On Sunday, Belleville will reverse its role and travel to Peterborough for an 8 o' clock encounter.

The Bobcat Booster Club is providing a bus for the game Sunday and tickets are on sale at McKnight's Variety on Front St. for $1. each. The price of the ticket does not include admission to the game.

Plans were also finalized, at last night's Booster meeting, for the Bobcats' annual "Meet the Players Night."

Friday, February 1, any spectators wishing to meet the members of the local Junior B team may do so at the Knights of Columbus Hall. Admission to the event is 75 cents for Booster Club members and $1. for non-members. Entertainment and refreshments will be available.

The hall will be open at 19 p.m. but since the Cats play Markham at the Memorial Arena that night the players will not be there until later.

Saturday Tournament At Loyalist College

Ontario Colleges Athletic Association badminton competition is in the spotlight, at Loyalist College, Saturday.

It's a preview of the Eastern Regional Badminton Tournament, also slated to be held at Loyalist, February 22-23.

In Saturday's event, Loyalist badminton enthusiasts, coached by athletics officer Sherry Cornell, will be meeting competitors from St. Lawrence College, Kingston; St. Lawrence, Cornwall; Sir Sandford Fleming, Peterborough, and Sir Sandford Fleming,...Lindsay, Algonquin of Ottawa, Eastern Regional champion in 1973, will not be represented.

Loyalist placed third in the regional event last year and coach Cornell is aiming to improve on that performance, this February. The coach expects Algonquin to supply stiff competition again this time around. In fact, she can't see a weak spot in any of the opposing teams.

Saturday's Invitational tournament runs from 12 noon to 6 p.m. It's open to the public.

Clark Signed

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Bengals of the National Football League Thursday signed quarterback Wayne Clark on an undisclosed sum, the team reported. Clark, 24, was obtained recently from San Diego Chargers on a trade for Virgil Carter.

Aldermen Jean Smith throws the first rock to mark the official opening of the 12th Annual Quinte Mixed Bonspiel last night. Immediately to her left are Murray Johnson, director of publicity for the four-day event, and Doug McClean, chairman of the Bonspiel. The official opening ceremony took place at the Quinte Curling Club with simultaneous openings at the CFB and Trenton Curling Clubs where the 48 rink event is also being held.

Belvedere, Reid's Move Up

Belvedere Hotel and Reid's Dairy both gained ground in standings at Memorial Arena Thursday night. And they had to do it against some tough opposition.

As the result of its narrow 5-3 win over league leading Stinson Construction, Belvedere took over sole possession of second place, just three points out of first. Stinson has 20 points and Belvedere, 17.

The Dairy team scored an impressive 6-0 win over Cornerstone Engineering and showed signs of challenging for the third place slot. Reid's now has 12 points, three fewer than Cornerstone which is third.

Dalton Rambert's goal with 10 minutes remaining in the game snapped a 5-5 tie and gave the Hotelmen their win. Bob Henderson and Larry Marshall each potted a pair and Gene Francis had the other Belvedere counter.

Kevin Allen was the top p r o d u c e r for Stinson's rattling home a brace of goals. The other marksmen were Greg Duffy, Bill Goodfellow and Andy Prudden.

The winners also finished on top in the penalty department. That was strictly no contest. Belvedere players picked up nine minors, including a pair to goalie Claude Carr. According to the game report, the losers did not receive a penalty.

Reid's John Gunter closed the door on the Cornerstone shooters. He got plenty of support from Ted Waite who fired two goals. Singles went to Mike Brant, Bob Reid, Paul Zakes and Ron Pointer.

Aaron Wants Big One To Come in Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — Henry Aaron, one home run away from Babe Ruth's record of 714, is prepared to sit out two of Atlanta Braves' three opening games with the Reds in Cincinnati to ensure his record-breaking clout comes at home.

"I hope the public in Atlanta and Cincinnati realize that if I had my wishes I would prefer to hit 714 and 715 in Atlanta which is my home," Aaron said Thursday in an interview.

"If I hit a homer in the opener, I'll sit out the next two games for sure. If I don't, I'll probably play in the second game and if I hit a homer in this one, I'll sit out the third game.

"But there is a matter of integrity involved, too," he said, adding if Cincinnati were to win the Western Division by one game, the Reds will open the opening series might raise some questions.

The Braves open in Cincinnati April 4 and after an open date, play the Reds April 6-7.

Canadians Strike Gold

CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z. (CP) — After a long and fruitless day chasing medals on land, Canada's Commonwealth Games team harvested them in bushes in the pool Friday night. Sixteen-year-old Cindy Shatto of Toronto led a sweep in women's springboard diving with a spectacular display in the final round that consigned defending champion Beverley Boys of Pickering, Ont., to second place. Terri York of Vancouver collected a top score of 83.18 on her final dive to take third place.

Two more Canadians, Gail Amundrud of Ottawa and Judy Wright of Vancouver, were silver and bronze medallists behind favored Sonya Gray of Australia in the 100-metre freestyle, with Anne Jardin of Pointe Claire, Que.; finishing fourth.

All four were clocked in times of less than one minute, a feat accomplished by no Canadian girl until Miss Amundrud recorded 59.8 seconds in the summer.

Miss Gray, a 14-year-old member of Australia's new generation of speedsters, won the race in 59.15, a shade slower than the Games record of 59.07 she set in her heat earlier in the day. Miss Amundrud, 59.36, and Miss Wright, 59.46, also eclipsed the 1962 mark set by Dawn Fraser of Australia. Miss Jardin's fourth-place time was 59.95.

The Canadians took a second gold medal in the men's 400-metre freestyle relay, won by Bruce Robertson and Ian MacKenzie of Vancouver, Gary MacDonald of Mission, B.C., and Brian Phillips of Winnipeg.

Almost simultaneously with the relay's triumph over Australia and England, the first non-aquatic Canadian medal was won by bantamweight weightlifter Yves Carignan of Montreal, who placed second behind Michael Adams of Australia.

England also picked up two gold medals, won by flyweight weightlifter Precious McKenzie and hammer-thrower Ian Chipchase.

The three-country monopoly was broken on the track by Mary Peters of Northern Ireland, a repeat winner in the pentathlon, and Dick Taylor of New Zealand in the 10,000 metres.

"Taylor's victory, enthusiastically greeted by 25,000 of his countrymen, ranked as the upset of the day. David Bedford, who holds the world record for the distance, had set a blistering pace before being overtaken down by a series of shoving matches with three Kenyan runners on the corners.

Taylor and David Black finished one-two with three laps to go and the New Zealander rallied away on the home bend to win in the Games record time of 27 minutes 46.4 seconds.

Bedford finished fourth, just ahead of Dan Shaughnessy of Toronto, with both being given identical times of 28:14.8.

Diane Jones of Saskatoon, rated second in the Commonwealth behind Miss Peters in the pentathlon, was unable to shake off the effects of an ankle injury that interrupted her training for several weeks late last year.

She pulled into second place after three events but lost ground in the last two, finally dropping to 3310.

"I got the cast off my ankle in November and haven't done any hurdling or jumping until this week," Miss Jones said. "The ankle I hurt—I tore the ligaments playing volleyball—is one I take off on in the high jump."

There was promise of better things on the track Saturday as Yvonne Saunders, a transplanted Jamaican who now lives in Guelph, Ont., recorded the fastest times in the heats and semi-finals.

She won her heat in 53 seconds, easing up, and took her semi-final in 52.1. The other semi-final winner, Charlene Rendina of Australia, was timed in 52.8.

Brenda Walsh of Edmonton and Joan Eddy of Dundas, Ont., had first-round casualties, both finishing fifth in their heats. Miss Walsh was timed in 56.1 seconds and Miss Eddy in 57.6.

Both girls started strongly but faded during the last 100 metres.

Canadian track coach Lynn Davies declined to predict a gold medal for Miss Saunders but said she "sure looks like a winner."

The 22-year-old data input typist at the University of Guelph, who sports what she calls a pineapple hairdo, said she would love to run for Jamaica after reaching the semi-finals of the event at the 1972 Olympics for Jamaican colors.

"Don't get me wrong. I like Canada," she said. "But you country is your country."

She expects to become a naturalized Canadian citizen in May.

Marjorie Bailey of Vancouver was the only one of three Canadian sprinters to reach the 100 metres final, winning her heat and placing third in identical times of 11.7.

Patti Lovercock of Vancouver was unlucky, running the same times but finishing a losing fifth in her semi-final. Lyn Kelland of Burlington, Ont., also qualified in 11.7 in the first round but was dead last in her semi-final in 12.1.

Bob Martin of Paris, Ont., was the slowest of 16 qualifiers Saturday's semi-finals of the men's 100, finishing third in his heat in 10.5.

"I got a bad start," he said. "The starter held us a long time between and got me. The start is usually the strong part of my race and getting a bad one didn't help."

Canada's seven-member contingent was cut to three in badminton singles competition. Top-ranked Jamie Paulson of Toronto was the lone survivor in the men's division as Jamie McKee of Toronto and Wayne McDonnell of Vancouver lost their first-round matches.

Nancy McKinley of Toronto and Jane Youngberg won their opening women's singles matches but Judy Rollick and Mimi Nilson were defeated.

Harry Willsey of Montreal, the only Canadian competitor in the skeet competition, was in a three-way tie for second place in the halfway point, just one shot behind the leader.

Canadian lawn bowlers lost five of six matches in two rounds of round-robin play.

Blister Hobbles Dan Shaughnessy

CHRISTCHURCH, N. (CP) — Dan Shaughnessy has a king-sized blister on his left foot today as a memento of his first appearance on the team of Canada's track team at the Commonwealth Games.

"I got that after about two miles," the Toronto runner said after finishing fifth in the 10,000 metres. "I'm pretty pleased with the way things went although I think I could have done better."

He finished in excellent company. Just ahead of him, in the identical time of 28 minutes 14 seconds, was David Bedford, the English pre-race favorite and holder of theworld record for the distance.

Shaughnessy's previous best time was 29:00.8. Bedford's was 27 30.8.

The Englishman had set a killing early pace but ran out of gas after several boiling matches with three Kenyan runners while Shaughnessy hided his time in a group that included eventual winner, Dick Taylor of New Zealand.

Shaughnessy tried to stay with Taylor and David Black of England when they made their move against the tiring leaders but the blister was making its presence felt. He passed two of the tiring runners and barely failed to catch Bedford.

2 Old Rivals Tie for Lead

SAN DIEGO (AP) — "We're good friends," Ben Crenshaw said with a nod toward Tom Kite.

"But we know what competition is. We're gonna try to beat each other's brains in."

Crenshaw and Kite, both residents of Austin, Tex., former teammates at the University of Texas and golfing rivals for a decade, matched sparkling seven-under-par 65s Thursday and tied for the top spot in the first round of the $170,000 San Diego Open golf tournament.

They shared a one-stroke lead over Homero Blancas, Cesar Sanudo and rookie Richard Mast, who took advantage of the bright, warm sunshine to forge 66s, just one stroke back.

Crenshaw, Kite, Blancas and Mast all played the north course at the Torrey Pines Golf Club, the shorter and easier of the two courses being used for the first round of this event, famous played the south courses.

Both are par 72, but the north plays easier. The players will change courses for Friday's round and the last two days they will be over the south course.

Leonard Thompson had a 67 while the group at 68 included Gene Littler, Bobby Mitchell and John Lister of New Zealand.

Defending champion Bob Dickson was well back at 72. Johnny Miller, who swept the first three titles of the year, Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino, Tom Weiskopf and Arnold Palmer are not competing.

Crenshaw, who won his first start last fall after gaining his card as a full-fledged member of the tour, had a spectacular round that included seven birdies and an eagle and one stretch in which he went six under par on a string of five holes.

Blazers Are First At Oshawa

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — Sabretoothed Blazers gained sole possession of first place in Division 1 Thursday while Kingston sat idle during the fourth day of the Canadian midget hockey tournament.

Paced by centre Greg Bolting, who counted twice, the Blazers defeated Calgary Rangers 6-4, to give them a two point edge over Kingston.

In Division II, Quebec's Vadnais Maple Leafs edged Halifax from a three-way tie for first place with an 8-1 swamping. Verdun now shares that spot with Manitoba who defeated host club Oshawa Partners 5-3.

The top two teams in each division meet Sunday to determine the recipients of a trip to the Soviet Union for exhibition games.

In other action Thursday Halifax East Hants Penguins downed Fredericton Red Wings 6-1 and Newfoundland's Clarenville Caribous dumped Vancouver North Shore 5-2.

Cataracts Cured By Two Methods

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have cataracts and it seems I might soon have to have an operation for one.

I read some little time ago in a newspaper there is a new technique which uses a very rapidly vibrating needle-like instrument that liquefies the lens of the eye (the cataract) and it can be sucked out.

The article went on that recovery time is reported to be much shorter but the method is new and being done in a score of cities, and that eye surgeons are still disputing whether it will replace conventional methods.

There is a doctor in my area who is doing such operations, but I have never met or heard of anyone who had this operation and whether it is really good. They only stay in the hospital a two day stay.

Your comments would be appreciated.—B.K.

I cannot give you a rigid yes-or-no answer but will tell you what I can. I rather think that the newspaper article you referred to was one I wrote in this column about a year ago, (Three months.)

The new technique (first tried six years ago) is called phacoemulsification. The "needle" is a probe that vibrates at ultrasonic speed, 40,000 times a second, and after the lens is emulsified, or reduced to extremely fine particles, they are drawn out through a very small (2 mm.) incision.

Under the older method, a larger incision is required, and the lens capsule is taken out whole.

At a recent symposium of the American Academy of Ophthalmology, eye surgeons were still not agreed that there is any reason to switch over to the new method in wholesale fashion; neither did I detect any general condemnation of it.

One authority, thoroughly familiar with cataract surgery both old and new, thinks the new method is "here to stay" but that it will not replace the conventional method—that circumstances in each case will determine which method is better, but there hasn't been sufficient time as yet to learn enough to come to a correct judgment.

Others say that in suitable cases (but not all cases) a patient may be released as early with the old method as with the new, but that you'll be careful after-care is required.

Best figures I have seen indicate the new method has by now been used by surgeons with 3,000 or more patients. That is a tiny number compared to the many thousands of cataracts being removed every year by the conventional methods.

It will take time to find out, in the long run, whether one method is superior to the other in the average case. In a word, the new method is no fly-by-night notion, but precisely how good it is remains to be seen.

Best results are being obtained by surgeons who have done enough of the new operations to be thoroughly familiar with the technique.

My own feeling is that if I were to have the operation I would leave it to the eye surgeon to decide on the method—and I would see to it he was an experienced, qualified surgeon. I would not—at this stage—go off hunting for someone using the new technique. I'd rather wait and be sure. But I certainly cannot condemn the new way, either.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: In regard to your article on steroid shots to correct keloid scars, where could one go for the shots?—Mrs. H.

Probably to your regular doctor, but if he doesn't give such treatment, he surely can refer you to a physician who does. Or if you don't have a regular physician, please call to the county medical society could put you in touch.

High In the Sky

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto psychiatrist is convinced there is a connection between being high on drugs and standing at or near the top of a high building or tower. In a report on the attractions and possible hazards of the 1,800-foot CN Tower, currently under construction here, Dr. Daniel Cappon said visitors to the observation platform, 1,100 feet high, may experience "the breakoff phenomenon," a feeling of depersonalization and sudden deeper emotions about life, conditions similar to those related to the use of certain drugs.

Double Doom

WINNIPEG (CP) — It was a bad time recently for the superstitious here. Winnipeggers scanning the sides for a glimpse of the comet Kahoutek also saw another traditional omen of doom—a partial eclipse of the moon.

BIRTHS

STARKEY — Michael and Susan Starkey of Belleville announce the birth of their daughter, Jennifer Lynn. Proud grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Adam Starkey, Belleville.

IN MEMORIAM

MALCOLM — In sad and ever loving memory of our dear dad, Clay, who passed away January 25, 1971.
In tears we left you, dad, that day,
We watched you fade away.
Our hearts were almost broken,
You fought so hard to stay.
Sadly missed and lovingly remembered.
Our arms had failed to keep you,
God alone knows how we miss you,
As a shadow we walk through life,
Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by daughter-in-law Louise and grandson Darren.

MALCOLM — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather who passed away Jan. 25, 1971.
Gone is the love we loved so dear,
Silent is the voice we loved to hear,
Gone is the hand we loved to hold,
But left we fear for memory to reach;
Sadly to remember him who once was dear to us,
And who, though absent is just as now;
Sadly missed and loved by son Dwight and daughter-in-law Lorna and grandson Andrew.

MALCOLM — In memory of our very dear father, Clarence, who left us Jan. 25, 1971.
We miss you more, more tenderly,
And watched you fade away,
Never knowing why or when,
Or may be your last day.
Dad, we miss you, we miss your guidance,
And those usual words so wise,
Remembrance is the only thing we have to make us smile,
—Gone from us but will never be forgotten by Mom and Gerry, daughter-in-law Carol and three of her loved grandchildren.

MALCOLM — In loving memory of our dear father, Clarence, who left us very suddenly January 25, 1971.
Today and the memory
Of a loved one gone to rest
Is all that we have left today,
And those who loved it best
The flowers we lay upon his grave,
May others smile and pass,
But the love for him who lies beneath
Will never fade away.
—Always remembered by loving son Hazel, Shawna and family.

MALCOLM — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, Clarence, who passed away Jan. 25, 1971.
Softly as softly the bright leaves fall,
Silently
To rest on the earth now covered with snow,
So somewhere a loved voice is hushed in endless calling.
To bring back sweet memories of your long ago,
The winter has come, but spring will follow,
To bring hope and gladness and heal sad the pain,
And perhaps a new life on the wings of the eagle,
Where we all will meet with our loved ones again.
—Sadly missed by Gary, Rusty and family.

MALCOLM — In loving memory of a dear husband, Clarence, (Jack), who passed away January 25, 1971.
Sad is the hour I must remember,
Lonely the days that follow,
But to all there comes a moment,
When the ways of life must cease,
You gave me years of happiness,
You left me memories to treasure,
But you left a heartache that will never pass,
I will treasure through the years,
Sadly missed and loved by wife Hazel.

MALCOLM — In loving memory of a dear husband, Clarence, (Jack), who passed away January 25, 1971.
Sad is such a special word,
A word that brings to mind,
A face we loved, a kindly hand,
A way of being kind,
Devotion to the family,
A word of pleasure and cheer,
"Dad" is such a special word.
—Always remembered, loved, by daughter Sherry and granddaughter Tamara.

VADER — In loving memory of a dear daughter and sister, Wanda Elizabeth who passed away January 25, 1971 at the age of 19 years.
—Sadly missed by mother, brothers and sisters.

Ice Cream Is Kosher

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The rabbi's wife knew what she wanted, so now San Francisco's ice cream-loving Orthodox Jews are finding their favorite confection "strictly kosher."

The Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations has given the kosher seal of approval to 39 flavors available at Uncle Gaylord's Old Fashioned Ice Cream parlors.

"I'm just crazy about it," said Dinah Schick. "I was so frustrated that I kept asking my husband, 'Isn't there a kosher ice cream?'"

Her husband, Rabbi Michael Schick, who certifies products as kosher, told her there was no ice cream in San Francisco that complied with the strict Jewish dietary laws.

To be kosher, meat must be killed in a prescribed fashion and certified by a rabbi.

Undaunted, Mrs. Schick began a search. She hit on Uncle Gaylord's and learned that except for three flavors, his ice cream contains no additives. Rabbi Schick made a thorough inspection.

The verdict: ice cream at Gaylord's is kosher except for rocky road whose marshmallows contain animal derivatives and tutti frutti and chocolate chip which use non-kosher sherry. But no cones or toppings are allowed because they also include non-kosher additives.

Gaylord said the result of the kosher seal has been a five-per-cent increase in business.

Resigns

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — James Chown has resigned as president of Conestoga College. John Goddard, dean of the college's Waterloo Centre, confirmed Thursday.

The resignation came about three weeks before a governing council meeting at which the college's operations was due to report.

Book Rejected

NEW YORK (AP) — Former vice-president Spiro Agnew of fered the outline of a novel he is writing to Random House, but the proposed book was rejected, the president of the publishing firm said Thursday.

"It is absolutely and totally untrue that Random House will publish a novel written by Agnew," Robert Bernstein said in a statement.

Move Closer to Fixing Responsibility

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — An inquest into 23 deaths in Sudbury General Hospital last year is moving closer to finding who is responsible for a crossed connection in medical gas lines at the hospital.

In the last couple of days the five-man jury began hearing details of construction of the hospital's new $4.2-million wing, in which the anesthetic nitrous oxide was present instead of oxygen in some gas lines.

So far, the only death definitely blamed on the gas switch is that of 54-year-old Catharine Dominic last Sept. 7. The cases of the other 22 persons, who were given oxygen in the emergency department between May and September, have not been dealt with in detail.

Construction specialists' testimony began Thursday and was expected to continue until well into next week.

They are being examined by one of the largest arrays of legal talent ever to attend a death inquiry in Ontario. Under a recent amendment to the provincial Coroner's Act, lawyers for interested parties may question inquest witnesses.

Loans Made

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Canadian government Thursday provided Mexico with loans totalling $28.7 million for industrial development.

Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie signed the agreements with Mexican officials on the first of a visit by a Canadian trade mission which Gillespie headed.

More than a dozen lawyers sit beneath the chandeliers of the hotel ballroom where the inquest is being held. Ten of them have been regularly cross-examining the witnesses. Approximately 150 persons have been subpoenaed by Crown attorney John Takach.

Thursday, lawyers questioned James T. Gregg, Toronto consulting engineer, who was one of the government-retained experts.

Ross Smiley of Toronto, lawyer for Reid, Crowther and Partners, the mechanical engineering firm which designed the gas system, managed to get Mr. Gregg to agree at one point that Canadian Liquid Air Ltd., the gas equipment supplier, had a responsibility to test the system.

But Mr. Gregg later hedged on this by saying he did not think the supplier "in isolation would be responsible for those tests."

Still later, though he emphasized this was not a legal opinion, he expressed the view that as a rule the general contractor is responsible for "complete compliance with the plans and specifications."

During this exchange, Robert P. Armstrong of Toronto, counsel for Canadian Liquid Air, drew a barb at the Reid, Crowther firm by reminding Mr. Gregg that its blueprint for the gas system showed what has been called a "misnomer" in the labelling of oxygen and nitrous lines in one section of the working drawings.

On behalf of general contractor Ellis-Don Ltd. of London, Ont., lawyer Donald Lilly managed to extract from Gordon Machum, chairman of the hospital board, some highly complimentary words about the company's work.

"I'd have liked the opportunity for a commercial, but I'll bypass it," said Mr. Armstrong when his turn came to question the chairman.

In his testimony, Mr. Gregg told the inquest that he and the other investigating experts planned to recommend later in the hearing that government regulations be established for the installation of medical gas lines in hospitals.

At present, Ontario has no standards for this type of work. Mr. Gregg said provincial health authorities rely on construction personnel for inspection.

No Orders From Nixon Says Krogh

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egil Krogh says he received no orders from President Nixon to seal burglars into the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist and that he has no information that might implicate the president.

But Krogh, sentenced Thursday to six months in prison for his role in the break-in, avoided the question of where the orders originated because the matter will come before the courts.

"I would simply say that I considered that a break-in was within the authority of the unit ..."

Asked if he had information that would implicate John Ehrlichman, his former boss and one-time top aide to Nixon, Krogh replied: "I don't know."

Ehrlichman had given the unit, known as the plumbers, authority to engage in covert activity to obtain information on Ellsberg, then identified as responsible for the leak of the Pentagon papers.

Ehrlichman has pleaded not guilty to a California indictment charging conspiracy, burglary and perjury in the case. He is scheduled for trial in April along with David Young and Gordon Liddy.

Krogh had pleaded guilty to one count of conspiring to violate the rights of Lewis Fielding, Ellsberg's psychiatrist, whose files were ripped Sept. 3, 1971. He could have been sentenced to 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

But Judge Gerhard Gesell said "apart from this offense" Krogh's public service was exceptional and that he had been assigned "the most grave and delicate, legal task ... by higher authority."

WOODSTOCK, Ont. (CP) — Fire Chief William Martin said Thursday a fire that destroyed the Royal Hotel Christmas Eve was deliberately set.

It had been flown Jan. 22 for a number of years.

Wants Books

TORONTO (CP) — State Secretary Hugh Faulkner urged Canadian book publishers Thursday to resist a powerful invasion of the paperback market and help distribute books of Canadian books.

He also told the annual meeting of the Canadian Book Publishers Council that the government "will not tolerate the major segment of the publishing industry in Canada should be owned by Canadians."

"Canadian books and magazines are too important to the cultural and intellectual life of this country to be allowed to come completely under foreign control, however sympathetic or benign," he said.

Big Oil Profits Spark Many Bills To Reduce Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reports of record oil-company profits have prompted an outcry and bills aimed at rolling back the price of domestic crude oil in the United States and taking away some of the oil industry's tax breaks.

Senator Henry Jackson (Dem.Wash.) predicted Thursday that the Senate next week will pass the emergency energy bill authorizing President Nixon to order gasoline rationing.

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield (Dem.-Mont.) filed a cloture petition Thursday aimed at thwarting the threat of a filibuster. Republicans and oil-state Democrats object to a provision in the bill that would restrict excess profits earned by the oil industry as result of fuel shortages. A vote on the debate-ending petition is scheduled for Monday.

The bill's controversial excess-profits provision would authorize the president to set prices on petroleum products that would prevent windfall profits by the oil companies.

Three of the largest U.S. oil companies reported Thursday large profit increases in 1973.

Mobil Oil Co., the second largest U.S. oil company, reported a 47-per-cent profit increase in 1973 compared with 1972, while Texaco, the industry's third largest, announced a 45-per-cent gain, and Shell, seventh in size, said its profits were up by 28 per cent.

Other oil companies have announced similar gains this week, including a 59-per-cent increase by Exxon Corp., the biggest U.S. oil company.

Mansfield told reporters that

Terrorists Sentenced To Death

ATHENS (CP) — Greek troops guarded oil refineries, industrial sites and airports today against possible Arab guerrilla reprisals after two terrorists received death sentences Thursday night for killing five persons during an attack on Athens airport.

Greek authorities were worried that the Black September guerrilla group will strike in an attempt to free the two terrorists or in retaliation for the death sentences.

The Greek government is expected to deport the two terrorists. It has been courting Arab governments to ensure unhindered oil supplies.

A five-man court found Arid el Shafik, 22, and Khantouras Palasi, 21, guilty of premeditated murder of a republican nature" and several other charges, and handed down 25-year prison terms in addition to the sentence of death before a firing squad.

Police sources said it is highly "likely" that the government will hurry them out of the country, just as it did Arab terrorists given prison terms in two previous trials.

Legal experts said the Greek president, Gen.' Phaedon Gizikis, may ask that the two be pardoned.

The two men were arrested by police after they burned a transit lounge of Athens airport when a stun grenade they used as a slaughterhouse. They pleaded guilty and said they were acting on Black September orders and wanted to liberate Palestine.

Five persons died and 45 were wounded when Palestinian guerrillas tossed hand grenades and sprayed machine-gun fire into a group of New York-bound passengers they had mistaken for Israeli migrants leaving for Tel Aviv.

Ask Tax

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP) — The Kent County Beef Improvement Association has urged the federal government to retain export charges imposed on carcass beef and cattle imported from the United States.

In a telegram to federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan, the association asked for retention of the remaining two per cent export charge on U.S. beef.

The federal government imposed a three-cent-a-pound surcharge last fall, but the surcharge was reduced by one cent two weeks ago.

Canadian cattle producers have asked for the removal of the export charge on U.S. beef.

No More Bodies

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Assault charges against two RCMP constables were dismissed Wednesday for the second time after a two-day trial.

Constables P. G. Sharpe and C. J. Allen were charged jointly with assaulting Joseph Mark Carrington of Banff March 17, 1973.

Pact Needed

TORONTO (CP) — Before even considering a Mackenzie Valley natural-gas pipeline, governments of Canada and the United States must work out an agreement for security of supply, William Wilder, chairman of Trans Canada Pipe Line Study Ltd., said Thursday.

"There must be recognition that the interests of each nation are best served by mutual trust and confidence," he told a luncheon of the Empire Club of Toronto.

Impose Levy

WASHINGTON (CP) — By a vote of 4 to 0 with two commissioners not participating, the United States Tariff Commission said Thursday that anti-dumping duties be imposed on Canadian horseshoes imported from Canada.

The case, involving sales of about $130,000 a year, is one of the smallest anti-dumping actions against Canadian product in recent years.

Plans to Sue

TORONTO (CP) — Lawyer and author Richard Rohmer said Thursday he has informed Toronto Sun that he will lead a writ against the magazine unless it publishes a promised list of best-selling Canadian books in its Canadian edition by Jan 28.

Stephen LaRue, Time Canada president, said earlier this week that the magazine, after pressure from Mr. Rohmer, whose novel Ultimatum is on Canadian best-selling lists, will begin Feb. 4 to label the current list in the magazine U.S. Best Sellers.

U.S. Energy Boss Tough Politician

WASHINGTON (CP) — Energy Minister Donald Macdonald, when he comes here for Canada-U.S. energy discussions Jan. 31, will meet a somewhat less table from a tall, tough administrator who makes his points in a booming voice.

William Simon, head of the federal energy office, has gained political stature and identification in little more than a month.

To the public, the "man from New Jersey" is best known as the "energy czar"—both terms have been applied to him in print—and Simon has not set up a gas-rationing system to ease the need for one arises.

Ironically, it was a behind-the-scenes dispute over just that question which put Simon through it. And where he is now is by a long detour in his march toward where he would like to be.

Simon, 46, was head of the bonds division of a Wall Street firm when he was picked to become deputy secretary of the treasury under George Shultz. The appointment was no surprise to insiders. Simon was once-treasurer of New Jersey chapter of the Young Republicans and is reported to have donated $15,000 to the Committee for the Re-election of the President and to have raised a lot more among his friends.

He is bespectacled, square-jawed and thin-lipped. One of his colleagues said his toughness concerns how he demonstrated it to an underling—with an sweep of the arm—how to clear off a cluttered desk.

Shultz, one of the most respected veterans of the early Nixon cabinet, is reported to have hand-picked Simon with a view to the younger man possibly taking over the treasury department. Observers say Shultz will be top dog after five years in high cabinet posts.

Shultz advised President Nixon that the energy program was foundering under former Colorado governor John Love and recommended that Simon head a new federal energy administration.

Experts here described this as an "end run" around Love, who promptly resigned. Love said he was frustrated by "too small a staff and by the inaccessibility of the president. He also cited disagreements with Shultz and Simon.

At the time, Love said he had been offered the post of ambassador to Canada, but rejected it. The post later went to William J. Porter, then No. 3 man in the state department.

Shultz and Simon were known to feel that Love's office and other agencies—including the senior departmental aides, secretary Rogers Morton—had not adequately explained the options and appeared to be falling back on gas rationing as the only means to solve the energy crisis.

Just as the interior department was planning to set up mandatory allocation programs for heating oil, jet fuel and kerosene, the job went to the treasury department over Shultz and Simon.

The reason given was that treasury was already collecting gasoline taxes and had a background knowledge of the problem.

Simon is reported to have tried to give up the treasury energy job when Love was named presidential energy adviser, instead, nine months later his office issued a new release with recommendations on ways Americans could conserve energy.

The implication was that the U.S., by following a tough conservation program, could temporarily do without Arab oil. But the action was seen by Love's office as undercutting Love's programs.

Within days, the policy committee post was transferred from Simon to Love.

Then came the push by Shultz and Simon was named to head the energy office and, when Love quit, to take on the added responsibility of presidential energy adviser.

Simon is described on Capitol Hill as "a very ambitious guy" who has made his money and now is concentrating on what appears to be a bright political future.

Bou..lters James Bay Plan

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa has unveiled a $100 million compromise to end Indian and Eskimo opposition to the James Bay hydroelectric project and representatives of the native people in the area are crying foul.

The compromise, filled with concessions designed to head off a virtually certain Supreme Court of Canada confrontation on the issue of native rights, has everything from straight cash to massive changes in construction plans to a Noah-like scheme to rescue game in the bay area.

No sooner had the premier announced details of the proposal at a news conference Friday than lawyers for both Indians and Eskimos were on the muskie-and-bass, claiming Mr. Bourassa had violated an agreement to keep the negotiations secret.

Robert Litvack, a lawyer for the James Bay Eskimos, brushed the compromise aside as "playing to the galleries."

The Bourassa scheme, he said, is "a bikini" proposal which exists a lot but hides the essentials."

Lawyer Max Bernard was even harsher, stressing that there had been an agreement to keep the proposals first introduced to the native opponents in November—a year.

"If he (Bourassa) speaks for the province, then it appears that the province has been broken by the province."

The lawyer, however, had little to say on the ingredients of the proposal.

A "talk paper," Mr. Litvack said, and one that is "very far from the threshold of an agreement."

Contentious or not, the offer shows a definite effort on the part of the provincial government to soothe the fears of its opponents.

It offers $100 million in compensation to the Indians and Eskimos—without Mr. Bourassa said Friday, adding anything to the cost of the $6 billion project.

It also offers many details of the development;

• a special plan was to divert three rivers into the La Grande basin now the government is willing to drop two of the proposed rivers, from the scheme and replace them with a less disturbing diversion.

The change, Mr. Bourassa said, would allow the natives of Fort George at the mouth of the La Grande River to "continue their traditional hunting and fishing along the Kanaaupscow River."

The government also would create spawning grounds and arrange fishing in the reservoirs.

Where moose, beaver, caribou and other game are disturbed by rising water, the government would follow the trail of Noah and relocate the animals..

And in the end, Mr. Bourassa said, the result of the compromise moves might even be an increase in the amount of electricity produced.

Mr. Bourassa urged acceptance of the compromise, calling attention to it in terms of the world energy crisis.

If the compromise is not accepted and the James Bay project founders, the alternative, he said, would be to construct a string of nuclear power plants along the St. Lawrence Valley.

The government, he said, believes this would have a far greater effect on the provincial environment.

Mr. Bourassa emphasized that the proposal is not a final one and that the government is ready to listen to a counter-proposal from the Indians and Eskimos.

Whether or not there is a counter-proposal, or acceptance, depends on how the compromise measures up in terms of the Indian and Eskimo stand that the project would literally damage the environment on which they depend and would take away land that is theirs.

That stand has already brought the native people into court to fight the government.

Most of the fight has revolved around the land rights retained by the native people when the 1912 Quebec Boundary Extension Act transferred jurisdiction over the area from the federal government to Quebec.

The act states that no development can take place before the provincial government has negotiated surrender of the native rights to the territory.

The first round of the fight was won by the native people when Mr. Justice Albert Malouf of Quebec Superior Court issued a temporary injunction Nov. 15 halting the project until the native-rights question had been settled in court or otherwise.

That injunction was overturned by the Quebec Court of Appeal in six days and an attempt by the Indians and Eskimo to take that ruling to the Supreme Court of Canada failed.

But still outstanding is a native request for permanent injunction to halt the project.

"If there is an agreement reached with the Indians, I don't see why the court proceedings should continue," Mr. Bourassa said Friday.

The native people, responded one of their lawyers, are "not inclined to sell the future of their rivers, trees and land -for money."

The next move comes from the north.

Ministers Stalemate

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal and provincial finance ministers have reached a standoff on provincial demands for federal equalization payments to reflect Alberta's rising oil royalties and its share of the oil export tax.

Finance Minister John Turner told reporters Friday after the two-day ministerial meeting that the issue "is closed for the moment," -but acknowledged it will form part of the federal-provincial negotiations on future oil pricing policies.

Oil Policy Possible

OTTAWA (CP) — Although the federal government's present new oil-pricing policy appeared to be shot down in flames by provincial premiers a few days ago, officials here are surprisingly confident that it will yet form the basis of a long-term agreement.

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald, with little warning, placed his complex proposals before provincial premiers here last Tuesday and, obviously hoping for a miracle, asked for agreement on the package. It didn't come.

Anne Begins Visit

PRINCESS ANNE

OTTAWA (CP) — A radiant Princess Anne and her square-shouldered cavalry-officer husband arrived here Friday for an informal weekend visit.

The 23-year-old princess and Capt. Mark Phillips were met by Gov.-Gen. Jules Leger and Mme. Leger in-one of the first formal functions performed by the Legers since the new governor-general was installed two weeks ago.

Princess Anne, wrapped in a full-length mink coat against a chill, damp breeze, chatted briefly with Mr. and Mrs. Leger before climbing into a limousine with the governor-general for the short ride to Government House. Capt. Phillips rode in a second car with Mme. Leger.

It was the first visit to Canada for the princess since she attended British Columbia's centennial celebrations in 1971.

She and Capt. Phillips have been travelling almost continually since their pageantry-filled wedding in Westminster Abbey Nov. 14.

The royal couple spent Friday night resting at Government House after their flight from London aboard a regular Canadian forces DC 8 at that stops at London en route from Lahr, West Germany. Although the aircraft also carried 119 servicemen and dependents, the princess and Capt. Phillips shared a closed-off forward compartment and didn't visit with the other passengers.

Also aboard the aircraft were Brig.-Gen. D. S. Nicholson, the returning commander of the Canadian contingent in the United Nations Emergency Force in the Middle East and some other UNEF soldiers returning home.

Turkish Crash Kills 60

IZMIR, Turkey (AP) — A twin-engine Turkish jetliner with 7 persons aboard crashed and exploded into flames today shortly after takeoff from Izmir's military airport. Sixty persons were killed, the airline reported.

Earlier, the airline said 70 persons were killed, but later issued an official correction.

News reports from Instanbul said the victims included four foreigners, including three Americans.

Of the 13 survivors, most were in critical condition, the airline said. An infant boy, wrapped in a blanket, survived the crash and the blaze with minor scratches, airport police said.

The crash was the worst disaster in the history of Turkish civil aviation and the airline, which has been noted for its good safety record.

Cuba Wants Cars

DETROIT (AP) — The Big Three United States auto-makers have confirmed reports their Argentine subsidiaries have supplied quotations to Cuba on the possible sale of thousands of cars and trucks.

Sources estimate the deals may be worth as much as $130 million. But the proposed sales hinge upon approval in Washington since United States regulations currently forbid trade with Cuba.

One automotive spokesman said Friday the sale could technically be made part of a large trade agreement between the governments of Cuba and Argentina. But the American subsidiaries would still need the approval of both the U.S. state department and the U.S. treasury department.

The Argentine government extended a $1.2 billion credit to Cuba last year, three months after re-establishing relations with Fidel Castro's government.

The auto spokesman said the Argentine government has indicated it considers the auto-makers' participation to be vital to Argentina's export drive.

Judge Wants Nixon to Give Better Reason for Holding Tapes

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge has asked President Nixon to state publicly why he opposes turning over five subpoenaed tapes to the Senate Watergate committee.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell ruled Friday that Nixon's claim of executive privilege is too general and is outdated by court rulings that led to surrender of most of the same tapes to the Watergate prosecution.

Gesell also threw out a subpoena the committee issued for all documents of 23 White House and Nixon re-election aides bearing on Watergate matters.

The judge said the subpoena for the documents "is too vague and conclusory to permit a meaningful response . . . and is wholly inappropriate given the stringent requirements applicable where a claim of executive privilege has been raised."

Gesell said Nixon to submit before Feb. 6 a statement "indicating whether he still wishes to invoke executive privilege as to these tapes" and the reasons that disclosure to the committee would not be in the public interest.

"This statement must be signed by the president, for only he can invoke the privilege at issue," Gesell ruled. He said the statement would be made part of the judge's record.

The committee issued its original subpoenas at about the same time that the special Watergate prosecutor demanded tapes of nine meetings in response to both the prosecutor and the committee. Nixon claimed executive privilege, arguing that turning over the tapes and documents would invade presidential confidentiality.

The executive-privilege issue was decided in favor of the prosecutor and the tapes were turned over. Four of the tapes sought by the committee are among the ones given to the prosecutor.

Meanwhile, the Justice department said another claim of executive privilege still applies in certain White House documents in the milk case.

Government lawyers presented that argument in asking a federal judge to reject a motion for immediate production of documents Nixon referred to in a presidential statement issued Jan. 8.

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader asked for the documents in his suit against the administration, Nader contends a milk subsidy increase was approved because of political contributions from dairymen.

Government lawyers argued: "Merely because the White House has acknowledged (in the presidential statement) that one subject was discussed in these documents in no way suggests that the remainder of these internal documents should be disclosed."

If education in the 1970s is to live up to the "open door" of the big switch" would be applicable.

Belleville decade has been marked by student and citizen participation unprecedented in the past.

It began years ago with a few - keyed teacher exchange between Canada and the United Kingdom. Every year, local boards approve the exchange of a few teachers with the England. A Belleville teachers seldom find anyone to switch with them. The UK teachers want to position to recreation centres - placing they've heard about. Who, over there, has heard of Belleville?

The interprovincial exchange of French Canadian and Ontario students has also operated for years. Most suddenly, in the 1970s, nothing but room-oceanic exchanges would do. Rotary was the first to bring students to Belleville. Over

Historic Pond Will Be Tourist Attraction

Old Mill Pond to Be Restored

CONSECON—Restoration of this hamlet's featured tourist attraction and potential beauty spot is to become a reality after years of expectations.

The old mill dam and its water storage pond on Consecon Creek are in process of being restored.

The township's of Ameliasburgh and Hillier and the Ontario Water Resources Commission are co-ordinating efforts to restore what is seen as an historic, picturesque landmark in an area already attracting much tourism.

The mill, now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Richard Baldwin, who are now in their 25th year of residence on the mill site.

The mill is the second structure of its kind. The original dating back to the 18th century was burned down years ago.

Now the Baldwins use its replacement - - a metal and frame building - - for grinding feed. When they first started - - in 1940 - - they used traditional water power as an energy source.

Now their machinery is driven by electricity.

The couple own the water rights around the dam.

But, as a community gesture they are transferring these to the townships which in turn are in turn the rights over to the OWRC.

Work now is planned this fall, - - when water levels are lowest - - - on restoring on the old dam.

Later, when water backs up to refill the old pond area, this hamlet will again have enough stored water for adequate fire protection, says an Ameliasburgh official. Subsequent rise in water tables will also improve wells servicing homes in much of the community.

Plans also are for improving the scenic appearance of both banks of the creek to provide a public park around the pond.

Reason for involvement of both townships is that Consecon, once a pioneer Prince Edward County settlement, eventually spread across local government boundaries. However, in 1897 it was registered as a separate hamlet. Today, it has a population of about 358.

It's name is widely known as a centre for sportsfishing, a reputation that dates back to the 1930s.

Like many a rural Quinte community, it has new sectors serving in latter years. People retiring from larger centres have found it an ideal haven.

Harvey: Now It's Picton's Turn

By MARGARET HAYLOCK

PICTON — The late Harvey J. McFarland was a philanthropist who donated thousands of dollars to community projects as mayor but there is no public building, no street or park that carries his name.

There is the Angus Lelieup Field Athletic Field in Picton named in honor of a deceased town foreman.

Benson Park, site of Picton's recreation and parks offices, recalls a Prince Edward canning factory magnate, William Benson.

Anglican church rector, Reverend William Macaulay is still remembered through the Macaulay Mountain ski club and conservation area.

Harvey McFarland contributed unstintingly to his town and county, sometimes publicly, more often privately. His interest in this small town of less than 5,000 reached far beyond any hope of personal recognition or gain.

A giant of a man, he found it not at all unusual to adopt a town and as a "foster parent", put Picton on the map with pride.

It's time for the town to remember this benefactor with a lasting salute to a self-made man who urged unity of purpose for Picton and Prince Edward.

Service clubs, community groups, church organizations and private citizens should pool ideas to create a public monument for H. J. McFarland.

In Picton, the Queen Elizabeth Park, overlooking the harbor, operates far below potential. It could be greatly beautified by additional nursery trees and more attractive fencing.

Since it bears no sign to declare its name perhaps it would not seem a disrespect to the monarchy to re-christen it "McFarland Park."

Possibly swings, slides and other playground equipment could be placed there for youngsters. Although the park is close to a steep embankment, children do play there and these suggested activities might divert them from dangerous exploration of the high cliff. Low fencing at the bank's edge could be considered as a safety measure.

There are probably numerous other sites in Picton that could be developed for recreation or public benefit as a tribute to the late mayor.

Naturally, ratepayers may ask, "Who will foot the bill for such a project?"

The answer is obvious. It is now the taxpayer's turn to take one small step toward repayment of a large debt to a man who always had time, money and concern for Picton.

When former mayor Margaret Ackerman headed Picton's administration friends bought her a chain of office and campaigned to pay for it through public subscription. The chain was to belong to all of Picton's mayors in the years ahead.

To chart the progress of the purchase, a large thermometer was erected at the town hall and ratepayers "clicked on" to buy the chain.

There must be hundreds of Picton residents who would like to express gratitude to the late Mr. McFarland and what better way than through a contribution to a project in his memory.

If the town coffers lack funds to develop a park or some other type of memorial to "H.J." then let the tribute come slowly in nickels and dimes from the people he served for more than two decades.

This would be fitting proof that, not only did he adopt Picton but also that Picton adopted him.

Martin Halloran Liberal Leader

Martin Halloran, vice-principal of Brighton's East Northumberland Secondary School, was named president of the Prince Edward Hastings Liberal Association in Batawa last night.

Other members of the executive committee for the riding association are vice-president Mrs. Bessie Dulmage; secretary, Mrs. A.M. Pringle; treasurer Mel Boulton and directors Hugh O'Neil, Tony Dalcar (retiring president) and Willard Begg.

Girl Found

TWEED (Special) — A 14-year-old Crookston girl, missing since Jan. 12, was found in a house in Marlbank 16 miles east of Tweed Thursday. She was unharmed.

She was last seen walking carrying a pair of skates. Madoc provincial police carried out an extensive search of the Tweed area following her disappearance.

The girl was found about 1 p.m. Thursday by Constables R. S. Lawrenson and Bill Haggerty of the Madoc detachment. They said she had not been kept against her will.

Liberals Confer

Brighton high school vice-principal Martin Halloran (centre) was named last night president of the Prince Edward Hastings Liberal Association. Discussing growth plans for the riding are Napanee's Barry Young, left, and eastern Ontario Liberal field worker Derek McLean. Liberals last night in Batawa predict June or early fall for a federal contest.

Liberals Predict Vote Soon

TRENTON—Some will tell you June and others, in the fall, but any local Liberal will tell you there'll be an election soon.

At the annual meeting of the Prince Edward-Hastings Liberal Association meeting last night, past Liberal candidate George Cunningham predicted upcoming budgetary discussions would stalemate Parliament Hill, bringing on a federal election.

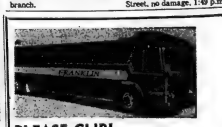
"I don't know what the particular financial issue will be but I have a feeling this budget will be the bone that both Conservatives and Liberals will fight over," said Mr. Cunningham.

Restating a promise he made at the last annual meeting, "I'm not discouraged. I'm ready to run again."

Mr. Cunningham was the Liberals' unlikely Conservative George Hees in the last federal election - - an election loss Cunningham is the first to describe as "staggering."

While Mr. Cunningham is betting on a June election, meeting keynote speaker Barry Young of Napanee forcast the fall.

Rather than a budget issue, Mr. Young, vice-president of the provincess Eastern Region of the Liberal Party, sees the energy crisis as the route of the election. He predicts a major confrontation between the have and have-not provinces and debate on which governments (provincial or federal) will dominate Canada's political scene.



Counting on an election, party workers are beginning to set up election machinery, though not yet on a broad scale.

Retiring president of the riding association, Tony Dalcar called for increased momentum in membership drives, a bigger push to organize a young Liberal organization and concentration on a women's branch.

Far — and Near

Some years ago the now defunct Life Magazine ran a picture article about New Zealand entitled "Lovely Land Too Far Away."

It was an apt description of a country which nevertheless is now a little closer — actually no farther away than the living room — through the medium of television and the Commonwealth Games.

The opening ceremonies of such an event, as in the case of the Olympics, is always an occasion of great interest and Wednesday night, after a heavy dose of the energy conference in Ottawa, was no exception when the scene shifted to Christchurch, N.Z.

Even if the sound had something of the quality of a long-distance telephone call, a situation aggravated perhaps by the breeze coursing through the stadium (the temperature was only about 60 degrees), the picture was perfect as the bands (including the world champion N.Z. national band which appeared at the CNE a few years ago) massed choirs, and school kids did their thing.

Then came the teams, Canada's large contingent included, as well as the exotically clad men and women from the African countries, and each team led by a miniskirted Newzealander, holding aloft a sign bearing the country's name.

It was a colorful scene, with something for everyone. What military man, for instance, would not have been moved by the superb drill of the New Zealand army men, and all made possible by the extraordinary marvel of satellite transmission on television.

And much better timed too, come to think of it, than was Princess Anne's wedding from much closer range. This time it was Wednesday night in Canada and Thursday afternoon in New Zealand. Yes there was something for everyone — it was also an excellent lesson in geography and time zone phenomena for the youngsters in school, if they were waiting up for it, that is, and let's hope many of them were.

Growing Hazard

Quite apart from the nuisance qualities of snowmobiles as they affect the rights of non-users, what must surely rouse the public and the authorities from their current mood of apathy is the growing menace to life and limb that these machines represent.

'In The Globe and Mail of Monday, January 21, it was reported that five persons lost their lives in Ontario in weekend snowmobile accidents in Ontario. Three of the tragedies occurred in the Peterborough area.

But that's not all. As of that date the Ontario toll since November stood at 26, or half the total for the whole of Canada.

Increasingly there are calls for government action to bar the machines from even the shoulders of highways where at present they are permitted to operate, to get them off the roads altogether other than at crossing points.

The Globe and Mail, calling for separation of the snowmobile "problem" from normal traffic had this to say about government policy to-date: "After endless study of the matter, the government made its big move in snowmobile reform — it banned from some provincial highways. Most of the accidents evidently occur on the back roads, left, but the government is standing pat, seemingly terrified that the snowmobile lobby (We demand the right to break our necks — and our kids' necks) will come roaring up the Parliament Hill driveway in the dead of night, mayhem in their eyes. Leaving 26 corpses in the snow behind them."

Even more so, it would seem, than the average motorist, the snowmobiler believes it won't happen to him. But the growing accident rate suggests otherwise. There is increasing concern also about youngsters operating snowmobiles.

As things stand now, the law as it applies is clearly insufficient to prevent further accident and deaths. Perhaps if a start were made by banning the machines from roads altogether, we might see some reduction in the number of fatalities and injuries.

Even Manpower Minister Sees Faults in UIC System

Opposition MP Wants Tax Exemption for People Who 'Work'

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — "We have to admit that there is something awfully wrong when, month after month, we see those high unemployment figures and also see employers across the country report they can't find the workers they need."

Who said that?

Some Opposition MP — both Conservatives and New Democrats have said that and more — or some outraged taxpayer who feels that the compulsory Unemployment Insurance deduction from his salary is really a tax ripoff for something he isn't probably never need?

Neither.

The quote belongs to Manpower Minister Robert Andras and it is there on the written record for all to read.

And to more than read — indeed to believe — since Mr. Andras more and more is sounding like he means every word of it and its those nearly nine the Liberal Government in the last election, and for getting the party in such peril, Bryce Mackasey, then the Manpower minister, was sacked.

But that has not taken the pressure off the Government nor the heat off Mr. Andras who was assigned to clean house.

Just the other day, Lethbridge Conservative MP Ken Hurlburt, only one of a succession of Tories and Tory hopes to attack the UIC abuse, moved this motion in the Commons.

"In view of the widespread and deep resentment of the majority of Canadians of the Unemployment Insurance ripoff whereby benefits induce people not to search for work, I propose consideration of the feasibility of a work incentive, such as an increase in the personal tax exemption of $1 for every month for every person working more than six months of the year."

The nervous Liberals looked that one over — and some agreed the idea did have merit — but backed away from it in the hope that Robert Andras can bring order out of chaos.

And chaos it has to be with such a small "i" Liberals as Waterloo New Democratic MP Max Saltsman publicly branding that Unemployment Insurance program as "fundamentally rotten."

More specifically he says it is socially, morally and economically all wrong.

Wrong, he insists, because the worker gets soaked to support the slacker.

It has become routine, he relates, for a person to take a job, work for 20 weeks, contribute, at most, $30 in UIC pay deductions, and then collect benefits as high as $1,200.

Robert Andras is not going that far.

But he is going quite a distance when he publicly concedes that something is awfully wrong" with his UIC.

So, what is he doing about it? Two things.

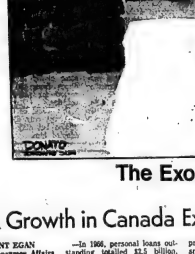
Cracking down on ripoff artists and stepping up job help for the man honestly looking for work.

"UIC benefits are not intended to be any kind of vacation pay," he says. "They are not meant to enable anyone to take a sabbatical from the old nine-to-five routine.

They are not fellowships for fooling around or grants for goofing off.

They are meant only to tide the man over while he is trying for a new job.

"And let me insist on this point—for only as long as he is trying actively for work, is he entitled to benefits — and anyone who stops trying is in my respect to stop getting benefits.



"We now have all the administrative levers we need to apply the rules firmly and make them stick. We have those levers and we intend using them."

That is the crackdown on the cheats, but what about the helping hand for the honest Joes?

Robert Andras and his staff are mulling red tape, wastebasketing a lot of the paper-work, scrapping much of the time-wasting interviews with job applicants and setting up "work banks" in local unemployment offices.

Jobs are listed in these "work banks," the man searching for one can look them over, make a choice of those he thinks he can handle and then marching up to talk to the prospective employers. No long interviews, no tiresome paper work, no red tape, no time wasted.

Robert Andras says this direct approach could be the turnaround.

The Exorcist

Bank Growth in Canada Exceeds That of Economy

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

When you think of dynamic growth businesses in Canada, one that may not immediately spring to mind, is banking.

Yet those good, grey institutions have been expanding their activities at a remarkable rate since 1967—a rate that far exceeds the growth rate for the economy as a whole.

It was in 1967 that the Bank Act had its most recent revision—an up-dating that the law requires every 10 years.

The 1967 revision of the Bank Act followed the monumental study of Canadian banking that had been carried out in the mid-1950s by a royal commission under the late Dana Porter, a former chief justice of Ontario.

It eliminated some restrictions that the banks had long been chafing under—such as the nominal ceiling of six per cent interest on loans—and gave the banks the power to offer a much wider range of services.

Since then, the banks have, been quick to move into new or expanded fields of profitable operation.

Here are some examples:

—In 1966, business loans outstanding at Canadian banks amounted to $6.2 billion. At Oct. 31, 1973 (the end of the bank's fiscal year) the total was $16.5 billion, in the same period, gross national product—the value of all goods and services produced in Canada—approximately doubled.

—In 1966, personal loans outstanding totalled $2.5 billion. Seven years later, personal loans had grown to $5 billion. Much of the banks' expansion in this area has come at the expense of finance companies, who had relatively little room for action in the small-loans field prior to 1967.

—In 1967, the banks had only $782 million outstanding in mortgage loans guaranteed under the National Housing Act. By the end of the 1973 fiscal year, the total had grown to $2.8 billion.

Before 1967, the banks made no conventional mortgage loans. At last count, they had $1.5 billion outstanding in conventional mortgages.

Today the banks account for about 30 per cent of the mortgage loans made in Canada. This mortgage interest rates apparently on a one-way escalator, business has proved to be a significant contributor to the rapid rise in banks' earnings.

The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, in fact, claims that it—directly and through a subsidiary—has become the largest of all mortgage lenders in Canada by 1972.

In some ways, the accelerated growth of Canadian banks over the past seven years has been easy for Canadians to see. New branches seem to spring up everywhere (one bank alone has 1,375 of them in Canada) and new banks have emerged for the first time in decades — The Bank of British Columbia has made rapid strides in that province, while the newer and smaller Unity Bank of Canada is in its second year of operation with branches concentrated in Toronto and other Ontario centres, and outposts at Winnipeg and Vancouver.

But less visible to Canadians is the growth of the banks' international business. Canadian banks have always played dominant part in the business of some foreign areas — especially the Caribbean — and they have been steadily expanding their horizons.

With 320 offices in 42 foreign countries, our banks held $22 billion—29 per cent of their assets—in foreign currencies at 1973 fiscal year-end, up sharply from $4.2 billion or 19 per cent a decade earlier

"Our greatest growth has been in Europe, and especially in Eurocurrency transactions," says A. F. R. Wadsworth, chairman and chief executive officer of the Commerce-Imperial.

His bank recently named a vice-president to be based in London, in recognition of the growing importance of the bank's European and Middle Eastern operations. Other areas of foreign growth cited by Wadsworth are the Pacific Basin, the Bahamas, California, and the cities of Portland (Ore), and Seattle.

The opposite side of that particular coin is the increasing competition that Canadian banks are facing here at home, from foreign financial institutions.

"Large foreign banks are now operating in Canada through subsidiary companies or representative offices, and are directly engaging in business such as lease financing," says the Commerce-Imperial chairman.

"According to the latest figures, 40 foreign banks now have some form of an office in Canada."

Canadian banks hesitate to complain too loudly about the foreign competition in Canada, since their complaints could be used as ammunition against their own foreign operations, in the United States and elsewhere.

But they argue that the largely informal nature of foreign banks' Canadian operations should be more formally regulated, so that all banking and near-banking activities in Canada would be guided by similar ground rules.

The future appears to hold still more competition in store for Canadian banking. The federal government committed itself to the concept of provincial participation in the banking business at last July's Western Economic Opportunities Conference in Calgary—much to the satisfaction of the provincial governments.

The proposal, as put forward by Finance Minister John Turner, is that any provincial government may help to launch a new bank by putting up 25 per cent of the initial capital. Its share of the bank's ownership would have to be reduced to 10 per cent—the limit for any single shareholder under the Bank Act—over a period of time that has not yet been established.

Another proposal, made at the same time, is that banks be created by letters patent, just as other businesses are—rather than by the more tedious method of obtaining a charter from Parliament.

These proposals, and the spirit in which the federal government made them, indicate that Canada's banking system during the next generation is likely to evolve into a much more open and competitive business that will hardly be recognized by the banks of today. But the near-cartel financial system that an older generation of Canadians knew, is gone.

Representation Issue Being Revived Throughout Canada

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — "Rep by Pop," the battle cry is being heard again across Canada.

As governments across the country consider, or as in the case of the federal government and Ontario are actually proceeding with, redistribution, the cities are crying.

They suffer in our parliaments, they say, through lack of representation as compared to the rural areas.

It's a cry that's been heard in Canada for more than 100 years. In the U.K. since at least the early 1800s and in the U.S. since 1600.

Equality of representation! It's a cry that's a constant irritant with some people, and is always heard on occasions such as the present decennial census redistribution period and at election times.

It's a cry that has never been well answered—though the U.S. has come close in its system for the House of Representatives, and also a cry that probably never will be well answered.

There are so many considerations it appears very evident there will never be perfection or even near perfection.

Here are some of the factors involved:

In physical size rural ridings are much larger than urban ones and their representatives have a much harder job keeping in touch with the views of their constituents.

Rural and semi-rural seats normally don't have the government offices that city ridings have and which can service many of the needs of the citizens. The rural member therefore must shoulder many more problems than the city member.

But the city member, particularly in the downtown areas has to handle problems which seldom reach the rural member: problems that can even be federal, provincial or municipal such as welfare, unemployment insurance and even street-cleaning.

Then the city members are more accessible. In Toronto, of course, they are likely to bump at home while rural members are away from their ridings and there tend to be ethnic and other groupings which have their own problems and require separate service.

And a new problem is arising in that, with the explosive growth of suburbia the inner cities which require a lot of service are losing seats to the suburbs which with their middle-income populations require relatively little attention.

It is generally agreed that rural members have special problems, that it is desirable, if possible, to keep riding boundaries and particularly their names and identities as recently unchanged as can be, and that there are special problems such as ethnic groupings, even in the urban ridings.

But in Ontario, at least, the city members argue that while the urban population is not proportionately far bigger than the rural, the legislature is dominated by rural members.

The government in its redistribution resolution has allowed for the addition of ridings by providing that the commission in charge shall take an average figure for the ridings across the province by dividing the total number of ridings they decide there shall be—there now are 117 and the resolution allows for a new limit of 25—and then can use a tolerance of 25 per cent either way to arrive at the new electoral map.

(For Southern Ontario, which is recognized as a special situation, this is large population over a sparse area, it is provided that at least its present 15 seats must be retained.)

But this does not satisfy the city members. They claim that it will still mean a rural domination, particularly as there is a further provision which allows the commission to break the limits under special circumstances.

They want a tolerance of 15 per cent.

They won't get it, however, by the redistribution resolution is the demand for the universal vote, which, of course, eventually came.

Dr. Kissinger's Diplomacy Bears Fruit in Middle East

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst Thomson News Service

As indicated in this column a few days ago, the efforts by Henry Kissinger to ameliorate Arab-Israeli truce and ceasefire has been the most heartening international event of the New Year, 1974.

These efforts have become fact in the announced permanent ceasefire and troop withdraws agreed to by Egypt and Israel after the peripatetic travels of Dr. Henry Kissinger, U.S. secretary of state between Tel Aviv and Cairo, Jan. 12 to 18.

As a result, not only has Dr. Kissinger's reputation reached even greater heights of accomplishment, but both Premier Golda Meir and Egypt's President Anwar Sadat deserve credit for getting to the fixed military conditions when the guns stopped firing in October.

The Israeli pull-back from the east bank of the Suez Canal means that the canal may well open again after seven years of non-use. And the Egyptian bridgehead on the east bank of the canal which represents a military inflict on on Israel by an Egyptian army, will be reduced in the number of men it must contain and the size and kind of its armaments.

The Israeli army will hold the Mitla Pass, the key to the entire Sinai region and which controlled in the Six Day War after inflicting massive armor and troop losses on the Egyptians. If the Egyptians at any future time took the offensive again they would be hardpressed looked to capture the Pass from such a strong contender who knows it is the gateway to southern Israel.

The most hopeful news for the long-term peace overture anticipates is a U.S. promise to loan Egypt some of the funds needed to open the canal. This includes reconstruction of towns along the canal which were cleared destroyed in 1967 and since then by shelling from the Israeli side as well as by dredging and modernization.

The Egyptians for their part have agreed to let ships use the Suez Canal with cargos bound for Israel, but as yet Israel flag ships themselves.

Altogether the progress look good and the next stage, an Israeli agreement to start negotiating for a face-to-face meeting at a peace table, has been promised again to Dr. Kissinger and Egyptian President Sadat.

At the same time there are many unhappy people in high places in both countries. The Israeli hawks who broke the Egyptian offensive on the Suez Canal and Golan Heights, have already resigned from the army in protest.

The Syrians who have adamantly refused to sit with Israel and again during the Geneva discussions which came to nothing after signatures at Kilometre 101, now insisted to terminate diplomatic relations with Egypt, a fellow Arab state.

Writing Obituaries Can Be a Reporter's Toughest Assignment

By MAURICE SWITZER.
Managing Editor.

One of the first chores cub reporters are saddled with is that of writing obituaries.

Some businesses apprentice their novices as coffee boys or messengers. But many an illustrious newspaper career has been launched with the words: "In failing health for the past few months, ..."

Weeks of this may pass before an editor feels his fledgling reporter is accomplished enough at writing about dead people to try his hand with live ones.

It would not surprise me if 50 per cent of those who can't wait that long abandon journalism for undertaking.

Not that obituary writing is difficult; there are standard forms for reporters to take information from morticians, much as are used for wedding and engagement notices. It's just that one begins to wonder about job security, what with all those subscribers passing away.

About the only time an obituary is really difficult to compose is when it's about someone you have known. Only then does the eulogy somehow seem more than mere words.

One person who would understand that more than most was Enid Gill. Her job was to operate a machine, similar to a typewriter, that produced perforated tape, the first step in the production of the newspaper type you are now reading.

Almost daily Enid would perforate stories that contained names of people she knew. The stories could be happy or sad, achievements or tragedies.

This week, Enid's name appeared in print. It wouldn't have been the first time -- there were the births of four children -- but it would be the last.

Enid fared her fate with great dignity, with no malice toward the world that was being taken away from her. She once told a co-worker the only thing that bothered her about her illness was the worry it caused the husband she loved so dearly.

"Much love to all you wonderful people and the best of holiday seasons," she wrote on a Christmas card to some of her friends at work. The card's cover was captioned: "How to have a Merry Christmas 23 different ways" and, when opened, confronted the reader with that merry cocktail recipes.

"My thanks for your kindness and generosity to me," Enid concluded, acknowledging the usual flower and candy hospital gifts.

It says a great deal about her that she used some of her precious time to send that card.

Troubador Offers Ballad of B and C (In Nothing Flat)

I've never penned a letter
To a newspaper before,
But now is the time to drop a line
About two men that make me sore.

"Picky! Picky! Picky!"
Almost every night the same;
If it isn't Bill, it's Clarence
With letter that complain.

First this, then that, and the other thing,
And now the C of C.
I can hardly wait until they find
Some dirty stuff on me.

Oh! what raptures when they find out
About the awful things I've done,
How they've belted her, they'd shout
And have such lovely fun.

Their letters to the Editor,
Let's face it, are well meant
So c'mon fellas let's have more
But with less discontent.

Let's hear about folks who have done well,
And have kept their closets clean,
After all "The Friendly City,"
Isn't all that mean.

For instance, those who work so hard
With our young folks that abound,
Teaching skills, and a way of life
To keep them fit and sound.

I could, of course, go on and in
About the good that people do,
But I'll leave it up to both you guys
To pen a note or two.

So let's all cheer for these two men
Who make our lives so bright,
With their "Picky! Picky!" letters
In the "Intell" almost every night.

I dare not sign my real name,
So please, sir, call me "Sam,"
And I'll have our two in circles
Trying to find out who I am.

Bravos and Boos

A military BRAVO to Sgt. Wally Dance for being inauborndate to a superior. Sgt. Dance said new Middleton Park Mayor Captain Mike Barbeau was "absolutely ridiculous" in moving to enlarge the size of the council representing 9,000 CFB Trenton citizens from 15 to 30 members.

A healthy BOO to Frances Lehntinen, president of the Belleville General Hospital Nurses' Association for calling hospital salary schedules "chauvinistic." We'll bet Mrs. Lehntinen makes as much as any male nurse.

In another vein, pints of BRAVOS to the 446 donors who made Belleville's Jan. 17 blood clinic this city's most successful since World War II.

BOO to the debut of Prince Edward County welfare administrator Evelyn Beaumont for launching her term in office by saying she deplores the term "welfare bums", then proceeding to note that there are "four or five" of them in her country.

No, they're not professional models. But then, neither are most of the hats made professionally. Only the top hat, the biconn, and the coolie's hat, are manufactured. The remainder have all been put together from bits of satin and feather, and paper mache. For example, the wig was plied high with foam and wool and a lot of time-consuming, laborious stitching by Belleville Theatre Guild members.

Costly Show Goes On

By VERNA PATTERSON
President, Theatre Guild

The Pinnacle Playhouse is the scene of enthusiastic involvement by ever-increasing numbers of theatre lovers.

With hard work and dedication, the Belleville Theatre Guild has managed to draw from the community's talent all its directors and technical people and to elicit good response from its audiences.

Behind the scenes, however, the Executive is engaged in a marathon struggle to find ways to get the ratier expensive season onto the stage.

Predicament Number One is, and probably always will be, how to stretch limited financial resources to meet rising production costs. We have only two sources of revenue: subscription sales, and ticket sales at the door.

Each year, the spiralling cost of heating fuel, electricity, building materials, labor, and even scripts, have made it very difficult to keep expenditures down.

What corners can be cut, without jeopardizing the artistic whole, we do cut. We borrow, sometimes shamelessly, from friends, relatives, and casts (Rental for a single costume recently cost us $3.00!)

We remake, repaint, or renovate what we already have. In this area, local artists and carpenters, under the guidance of professional designer Jeffrey Sisco, have been invaluable to us this season. Mr. Sisco's services were made available to us thro' a Theatre Ontario Training Grant.

Using platforms, pegboard, paint, glue, sawdust and scraps of rugging he has helped us completely transform the "Midsummer Nink" set to suit the quite different needs of "The Anniversary".

It is much more difficult to cut corners an our final production. Maintenance, royalty, script and music scores will cost us over $1000. Set, costumes, props, make-up, lighting and sound must be added to that.

By the time we add publicity, programs and posters to the list, unless we are very careful, the cost could almost double. We shall have to press into service our most experienced scrimpers and scrouwers".

The budget for "Oliver" brought us face to face with Predicament Number Two (only brother of Predicament One). Assuming we can stretch our resources to meet production costs, how can we be sure we have not compromised the production artistically? At a recent executive meeting, we decided that we would not take that chance.

Our subscribers were safe; they paid for their seats last fall. Individual ticket buyers, were a little more vulnerable.

The people behind the scenes, who grapple all year long with Predicament One and Predicament Two, voted almost unanimously to let them help us give Belleville an "Oliver" to remember, by paying an extra 25 cents for their tickets at the door.

To get my mind off money problems, I put my feet up and listen to my record of "Oliver". After struggling with budget(s) for eight months, my favorite song is, "You've got To Pick a Pocket or Two".

Seat Poses Problem

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

For several months now, I've been preoccupied with a crisis-type activity: accumulating, cheque booktoting, near single-minded search in the antique mills and auction barns of Quinte.

For chairs. Not dining room chairs — Queen Anne, Chippendale, Duncan Phyfe; the Louis's — just plain, ordinary kitchen chairs, affectionately known as poverty furniture.

Besides discovering an increasing number of people are buying press-backs, one learns that they're no longer quite as ordinary as they once were.

Two or three years ago, you could have picked them up at an auction for a dollar a chair. Recently, a battered set of four ran at $32 in a Belleville dealer's shop. A refinished, matched set of four can now cost $25 apiece.

Call me cheapo. But I can't see paying an astronomical sum for the chairs themselves, then the refinishing.

Meat people, after paying rent and buying food, find their wallets become a mite lean. The problem is compounded for an apartment for the first time someone who is pulling together. After all, one does need furniture. You can't sit on the floor, even though it is carpeted.

So, are there press-backs to be found at the innumerable auctions in the Quinte countryside? No.

One Trenton dealer speculates their growth in popularity can be attributed to the sameness of reasonably priced modern furniture and the stereotyping of apartments this furniture seems to cause. Yes, press-backs are much more interesting.

But where to go, what to do, who to tell? It seems there is no solution, other than persistance, or luck, and a firm hold on my wallet.

Or if all else fails, I just might have to bend my niggardly principles and pull out.

Heaven forbid!

Could We Use Another Holiday in Winter?

BRUCE ALEXANDER

Bruce Alexander runs the Muffi Store downtown and also thinks it's a good idea to have another holiday.

"Probably in February is a good time to have it. It's good to have one holiday in between (New Year's and Good Friday). After all, January seems so long and this would break it up."

JOANNE ANTONUCCI

Joanne Antonucci runs the Door in the Wall shop on the Footbridge and has her own holiday choice.

"It should be in February and be a national holiday. If they had it in the beginning of April, they could call it First Fool's Day.

But actually February would be the best month," she said.

JERRY QUINN

Jerry Quinn, 67, is retired now but just the same would like to see a day off in the mid-winter.

"Why don't they call it Love Day. People don't love each other enough. But you would have to have a weekend for it and not just a day," he said.

"Yes, they could have a weekend dedicated to love, trust and consideration."

L. V. SMITH

L. V. Smith of Coleman Street also thinks the idea to have a holiday then is a sound one.

"I guess it's a good idea. But I don't know what you'd call it. It would be good to have it in March" he said after some thought.

"But why don't we have it on Flag Day. I can't see why not."

JACK WHITLEY

Jack Whitley who manages the Quinte Sportsmen thinks its a good idea to have a holiday in the mid-winter.

"I'm all in favor of having a holiday anytime," he quipped. "Maybe they could call it something like the first holiday of the year," he laughed.

"Or the winter blues holiday. That sounds good. But it would have to be on a Monday so every one would have a long weekend."

Women Depicted Much Like Cattle

SHARON AIRHART

You walk into a downtown Belleville meat market and there's a poster on the wall. It's a photograph of a beautiful young woman wearing a cowboy hat. Her back is to the camera and, apart from that hat, she's naked. On her body are black lines; the areas they delineate are marked "rump roast" and the like.

Find that offensive?

If you do, you're a supporter of that vague, complex and grossly misunderstood phenomenon known variously as feminism, women's liberation or "those mouthy broads."

Surprised? You shouldn't be. Had you been listening all along you'd know that one of the basic beliefs of persons advocating equality of human beings is that women aren't commodities. They're not meat offered for sale and "purchased" on the basis of tenderness and plumpness in the right places. They're dignified human beings; their value isn't dependent on physical attributes.

Anne Smith has been employed by a local firm for 10 years; she's an accountant. She's trying to plan ahead and provide for her retirement years by joining the company pension plan. She's not allowed to join. Women aren't. Everyone knows that they all just go off and get married or pregnant.

Find that unfair?

If you think it is, you're still supporting women's liberation. Because another basic tenet is that members of the work force should be treated equally. If you do the job you should get the benefits, no matter what your sex.

Linda, Joan and Patricia walk into one of the city's better restaurants. It's a week night and the room is virtually empty. After cooling their heels in the vestibule for a time, a maitre'd saunters over. He seats them immediately adjacent to the kitchen door. The wine steward doesn't put in an appearance. The waiter is brusque and bored. After all, everyone knows women don't tip well.

If that would make you mad, guess what? You're a women's libbers — and most persons who support these ideas hate that kind of thing — believe that social stereotypes are crippling and unfair.

A Belleville woman telephones Women's Manpower. She wants to be retrained so that she can join the work force; wants to learn a trade that will be lucrative. The counsellor advises her that Manpower retraining courses "for women" are generally in the secretarial field or the "assistant"

SHARON AIRHART

The housewife who wants to protect her family is more or less told that her job has no value: that her efforts to raise a family and run a home are financially worthless and her contribution to the family is less than the price of a new car.

These are the basic things that women's liberation -- call it people liberation -- is about. About dignity, about responsibility, about human value.

It's not about hating men or pushing mothers away from their children or forcing perfectly content people -- men or women -- to change their way of life.

It's about people choosing their own way of life -- men and women -- without being expected or forced to behave in a particular way because of their sex.

It's simply about people treating people like people.

School Kids Learn Pioneering Spirit

Story and Photos by Sharon Airhart

David Swift works hard at grinding wheat into flour for bread.

David Swift is grinding wheat for flour. Jon Swatuk is peeling apples to be hung and dried. Lisa Rowbothom is busy dipping string into melted wax to make candles.

It's not a pioneer household but a classroom.

The "pioneers" are grades one to three students at Queen Elizabeth public school where, in their combined open classroom, they are studying early Canada with teachers Nan Petto and Jan Kriticos.

For two weeks, pioneering has been the focus of an exercise in theme teaching for the 60 students.

It began with a visit to Glanmore House's Simpson Kitchen and a look at early farm equipment.

Then the students heard stories about pioneers and made a list of 30 question they wanted answered ("What did they do when they got sick?")

From there, the work progressed to wheat grinding and bread making, peeling, slicing and drying apples, dipping candles and molding candles, making butter and tasting its by-product, buttermilk, and making soap.

All area of learning are related to pioneers.

Printing and coloring are carried out in innumerable exercises about pioneer life, reading is learned as the children talk about the pioneers and their own words are recorded on display boards.

"I believe children want to read what they speak," Mrs. Petto says. "We believe in basic skills," she adds but the teaching team doesn't concentrate on reading books.

"We use a language approach. Kids just aren't interested in 'See Jack. See Jack run'," she says.

They are, however, encouraged to find books on the current subject of study in a special library set up in the classroom on each theme.

Math is studied in the "pioneers" unit as the children measure out flour and other ingredients for bread.

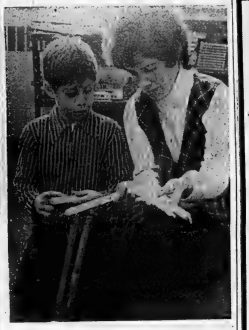
They are introduced to maps as they talk about how the pioneers came to Canada and travelled across the country. Creative writing plays a big role as the children write stories.

That this kind of teaching is involved is obvious: Mrs. Petto says, for example, that with another unit recently, the pair prepared more than 200 separate pieces of work for the children.

Then, too, units cannot be repeated until the children currently in grade one are out of grade three.

The rewards are there, Mrs. Petto says in the high motivation and interest the children exhibit. And there's a bonus.

"I'm learning things, too."



Lisa Rowbothom dips string into melted wax to make candles.

Teacher Nan Petto and Jane Cowan sample the butter they made.

German Students Address Women

German exchange students were special guests last week at the University Women's Club.

Panelists Barbel Sheider, Erhard Lamparter, Doris Schmalzhaf, Ulrich Zweig, Jurgen Frank, Barbara Berne, Reinhard Bar and Hymo Kurz were introduced by Ann Rose.

The students spoke of their schooling in Lahr and in Belleville.

Jurgen Frank showed slides of the Black Forest Region in Germany and of the city of Lahr, Belleville's twin city.

The students told the women that the drinking age in Lahr is 16 and there are discotheques, beer gardens, coffee houses and a dancing school for young persons. Also available for Lahr teen-agers are tennis, horseback riding, hiking, skiing and swimming, they said.

The students told the university women's group that in Lahr, which is a city about the size of Belleville, they can choose from three streams of education after four years of primary school.

They said the decision is made by their parents after the students write tests.

The students can complete their education at nine years, move on to secondary school or attend university, the said.

Old, New Blend at Glanmore

The new will blend with the old at Glanmore House next month.

The Quinte area council of Beta Sigma Phi will sponsor a fashion show that features contemporary European fashions in a late Victorian setting the Tuesday before Valentine's Day, February 12.

The sorority, which has sponsored and maintained the library in the Hastings County Museum, hopes to raise enough money from the one-night fashion display to buy new draperies for their room in the museum.

The fashion show, scheduled to begin at 8 p.m., will feature 36 different outfits from the Shana Fashion Boutique in the Belleville Plaza.

Tickets are on sale at the Shana Boutique. All proceeds from the show will be donated to the museum.

Grow Your Food Save Your Cash

If you've been gardening for years or know just what Saturday you go to the Market for your year's supply of peaches, this column will bore you.

On the other hand, if you're desperate for ways to cut your food bill or have been considering burying a freezer-up vacuum over, if a garden is really worth the effort, you may be interested in some of these figures.

Last spring, when food prices were already starting to climb — even the optimistic looking grocery — we decided to do two things: buy a freezer and order some day-old chicks.

Object: the introduction of one to the other in the fall.

We also planned our annual garden and resolved that come harvest time, we'd buy as much produce in bulk as we could afford.

Just to be sure all this was really going to save money, we also decided to keep track of what we spent. We did, faithfully, and the results are that we believe we have not only paid for our freezer in one year but have saved more than $250. on food too.

Here's the way it works out.

The freezer itself, bought at a major retailer on sale, cost approximately $225, including tax. It's a large one, about 21 cubic feet.

The day old chicks, bless their little huge hearts, were $12. Their train fare from the hatchery in Elmira, Ontario, was $7. They ate about $111 worth of feed over the summer. By the time they were ready for the freezer, we had nearly 300 pounds of meat including giblets. Total cost was about $130.

We bought about $10 worth of vegetable seeds by mail order. With a lot of help from some friends we had a good big garden and processed and froze more than 300 family-sized packages of vegetables. We made pickles, too, and stored a big basket of squash.

As for buying produce, we did a lot of shopping on the Market. We also took advantage of some nice summer days for family outings: one fine day we picked raspberries for 50 cents a quart; another we drove to buy pails of cherries. Altogether we spent just under $60 in this way: strawberries, $8.40; cherries, $10.00 raspberries, $3.50; plums $3.00; peaches, $22.07; green peppers $3.00; corn $2.50; melons, $2.20; pears $2.00; tomatoes, $1.75.

I might point out that we froze many of the above but also canned tomatoes (some bought, some our own) and the peaches. We also canned upwards of 40 quarts of applesauce from our own tree.

We invested about $25 in jars and strainers and other canning equipment. Included in the cost of plastic bags for freezing is also included.

Not everything has been a success, of course. Our corn died young and we had to buy some. The plums I bought were lousy.

Before the final computation, I want to add that no matter what you saved it wouldn't be worth it if you didn't get satisfaction from gardening or processing food. Then, too, not everyone can raise chickens in their backyard. Or even wants to. But apart from these considerations, our experiment has convinced me that doing your own can save money.

It's not an exaggeration. I think to assume that a small family -- two adults and a toddler -- would spend about $25 a week on food. In a year, that's $1,300.00.

With our vegetables in the freezer and our chicken and general corner cutting (bulk chops, not centre cut for supper) we're spending about $50 per month for food. If I may extrapolate for the next five months -- based on the last seven -- we'll spend about $600 in the grocery store in the one year term of our experiment.

60 produce
130 chickens
10 seed
225 freezer
25 canning equipment

$1,050 total food cost

Thus in a year we will have saved more than $240 on food as well as bought a freezer.

We're ordering our seeds -- and chicks -- next week.

Eating Habits Tied To Emotional Health

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Why did you tell Fighting So Fat at 104 that she is probably the envy of her friends and is go ahead and enjoy an extra piece of fudge cake? Chances are she can't. She is physical or emotional. Her capacity for food is probably limited, which is one of the reasons she is fighting to stay at 104.

Don't you realize it's just as rude to tell a thin person, "Eat more, you need it," as to say to a fat person, "Don't eat anymore, you don't need it!" Eating disorders are second only to sex when it comes to being tied in with one's emotional health. Overeaters and undereaters are that way for a reason. And it's bad manners to comment on the eating procedures of others, either way. I'm surprised you didn't know this.—Denver

Dear Dee: Of course you are right. And I did know it...but like most people, there's a little crazy somewhere in my ankles and I don't always come up with the best response every time. Thanks for a useful comment.

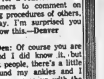
Dear Ann Landers: From time to time you have spoken out against injustices in a wide variety of areas. Will you please say something about archaic laws that are a part of city ordinances?

Would you believe that there existed on the books until recently an ordinance that said, "No person who is diseased, maimed, or mutilated or in any way deformed so as to be disunsightly or disgusting object shall appear in public." This ordinance was passed in 1939 in your own Chicago. Under that law, President Roosevelt would have been banned from appearing in public. As a polio victim he could have been considered "maimed."

How such a law got passed in the first place is beyond me. Why they continue to sit on the books is another mystery. What's the answer?—Windy City Wonderer

Dear W.C.W.: Inertia. Nobody bothered (until recently) to look into the old codes and do something about them. Incidentally, I am told it is still unlawful in Chicago to sleep in a bakery or wear a hatpin whose point protrudes not more than half-an-inch or let a pigeon fly over the 7th Ward.

Dear Ann Landers: I got mad when I read the letter from the barber who didn't know how to cut that kid's hair. The boy called, "Not much off the sides." His old man yelled, "Cut it off every so he looks like a boy and being instead of an and a girl." The barber was in the middle.



Here's how I handle those arguments. Whoever is paying for the haircut gets his way. But he'd better be there. It's no good to send a kid over with instructions and money.

If there's an argument in my shop between two people I ask someone to be better than a simple question—"Who is paying for this haircut?" And that settles it.—Tony, The Best Damned Barber This Side of Saigon

Dear Tony Thanks for the short course. P.S., folks—this isn't my advice. It's Tony's. And he ought to know.

Confidential to What's The Attraction?—It's been said that all the world loves a lover, but they identify with the losers. Add to this the eternal verity that most folks have to have someone to be better than.

More on Kindness Club

That man I honor and revere
Who, without favour,
without fear,
In the great city dares to stand
The friend of every friendless beast.

—Motto of The Kindness Club

From time to time you will notice I mention The Kindness Club, started in 1959 by a sympathetic and dynamic woman, Mrs. Hugh John Flemming, wife of a former premier of New Brunswick.

Within 15 years the Club spread to 26 countries -- on every continent and as far away as Australia, Brazil, South Africa, New Guinea.

The World Federation for the Protection of Animals (Headquarters in Switzerland) has appointed Mrs. Sophie Zeldenrust of Holland to organize more Kindness Clubs in Africa. Mrs. Zeldenrust once lived in Cairo and while there she brought about a program in the schools of that city about how to be humane to animals. Her ideas were based on Kindness Club manual.

In India there are Kindness Clubs for all 56 of the Jobs and go by the Kindness Club manual "How To Be Kind" which has been translated into the language of.

Two wonderful things happened on July 10, 1960 just 10 years after the beginning of Kindness Club: (1) A man took his first steps on the moon, and, (2) The Humane Society of the United States agreed to administer The Kindness Club for all 50 of the United States, contacts already having been set up by Mrs. Flemming's executive in Fredericton. This was an unforgettable day.

Dr. Albert Schweitzer is Honorary President of The Kindness Club, and the philosophy of reverence for life is spreading far and wide.

The Club has twin objectives: To free animals from unnecessary suffering, and to help children develop into compassionate human beings. In this violent world of ours we badly need People Who Care. And we can grow them if we give enough heart as well as to that of the mind in those early years.

No more tin cans tied to puppy dogs' tails! No more unhumane "sport", un humane trapping.

The youngster who learns kindness to animals will also be learning that kindness and love are responsibilities of every human being to every living being, human and otherwise.

The movement has been organized, but as it broadens there couldn't be just how many members were now enrolled in branch efforts. But we do know that in New Brunswick alone there are more than a thousand members; the village in Ghana, the Chief of which is considered a Kindness training is important that he has made every one of the 500 souls under his jurisdiction, a member.

Bitterness Grows Over Divorce Referendum

'Almost Nobody Wants'

ROME (Reuter) — A bitter political campaign over Italy's divorce laws is about to engulf the country as the deadline approaches for a referendum which almost nobody wants.

For nearly two years, Italian political leaders have succeeded in delaying the poll, fearing that it will polarize the nation into Roman Catholic and non-Catholic factions.

Almost everyone agrees that the referendum will benefit no one except staunchly right-wing Catholics who reelected more than 1,300,000 signatures to set the wheels in motion for the poll.

Their aim is to overturn the country's three-year-old divorce law—still restrictive by standards of most European nations but total anathema to traditionalist-minded Catholics who view marriage as a sacrament which may be voided only under any circumstances.

For models, political leaders have been searching for a constitutional way to get members of the Vatican State to appear to be running scared and the referendum is scheduled to be held some time between mid-April and late May.

Main stumbling-block to a referendum agreement is the Christian Democratic party, main partner in Italy's four-party coalition government.

The Christian Democrats are still viewed in some quarters as the "political arm" of the Catholic Church, and three years ago they voted against the law which legalized divorce in Italy for the first time.

But with the exception of a small right-wing group led by former premier Giuseppe Andreotti, not even the Christian Democrats welcome the referendum. They believe it would play into the hands of the neo-Fascists, who try to present themselves as the only supporters of the nation's traditional Catholic views.

There are two overriding fears: That the poll will prove deeply divisive to the nation and that confrontations between the Christian Democrats and their coalition partners may bring down the 25th of Italy's short-lived post-war governments.

The vatican has steered clear of a formal call for the referendum question, although it is believed to be anxious to avoid the poll.

Its opposition to divorce itself, of course, remains firm but there have been persistent reports of intensive negotiations between Vatican officials and the secretary-general of the Christian Democrats, Amintore Fanfani, on ways of getting round the referendum.

The principals, however, have denied these reports, and last weekend Fanfani indicated that the Christian Democrats would not support efforts to stop the referendum.

Women Need Aggression To Rise in Civil Service

OTTAWA (CP) — There are still not enough women in high places in the federal civil service, and it's partly their own fault.

That was the view of most speakers Thursday at a first, ever conference of the role of women in the public service.

But men in high places also came in for a share of the blame at the first session of the two-day meeting, about 40 per cent of the 185 delegates were men.

One speaker, Marina Robillard, a director in the Indian affairs department, said executives should look more closely at their "attractive and competent clerks"—"they may be potential executives."

"Women have proved their ability in public relations, management, programming and their husbands' social obligations yet there is only two high level women information officers.

Denise Monction of treasury board said she is disappointed secretaries do not react more vocally to their new category classification which remains basically unchanged."

Public service secretaries are classified according to their bosses' rank, rather than by their own experience and ability. This could easily be changed, she said, with enough pressure.

Carol Lutes, an adviser in the regional economic expansion department, said women public servants must keep themselves informed of career upgrading programs and be aggressive in their pursuit of better job opportunities.

Jean Charron, director-general of the staffing branch of the public service commission, outlined some career development programs within the service but passed the mandate of implementing them to the women themselves.

Taking external factors into account, Mr. Charron said women must stop stereotyping men's pictures their careers as located solely in beautifully-furnished bedrooms or government typing pools.

Rosa Addecott, director of the public service commission's anti-discrimination branch, said discrimination against women still exists despite new government policy in effect since 1970.

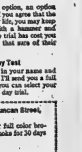
TRY THIS NEW PIPE FOR 30 DAYS.

So different that it's patented by the CANADIAN GOVERNMENT patent number 800357



This top grade Mediterranean briar incorporates a sensational invention that's unlike any pipe you've ever had about pipe smoking. It completely eliminates breaking-in, tars, sludge, bite, and bitterness never reach your mouth. You get cleaner, cooler, tastier, moisture-free thoroughly enjoyable smoking.

E. A. Carey

It's the first pipe in the world that's guaranteed to give unadulterated pleasure to smokers. You get the best smoke of your life or it won't cost you a cent.

Give it 30 days—

No cigarette, no cigar, nor any other pipe can give you the full rich flavor, aroma, deep down satisfaction, enjoyment, and peace of mind that you get from a Carey Pipe.

You may be a pipe smoker with a rack full of pipes and still searching for the ideal smoke, or perhaps you would like to switch to a pipe to cut down on cigarette or expensive cigars.

The Carey Pipe may look like any ordinary pipe, but it's a lot different! In fact, there's nothing like it in the whole world. The Carey Pipe is made of the finest, aged Mediterranean briar—but, in big secret lies in the exclusive patented "MAGIC INCH," cleverly concealed in a bite proof nylon stem.

It's Not a Filter

The "Magic Inch" is not a trap collecting moisture that gurgles with every draw. It is not a trap that must be cleaned after every smoke.

It's Not a Trap

The "Magic Inch" is not a trap collecting moisture that gurgles with every draw. It is not a trap that must be cleaned after every smoke.

It's Almost Magic

Not my magic but NATURE'S OWN MAGIC. Warm smoke gets all the moisture it's vaporous friend the ocean, lakes, rivers, and streams, 321 it high into the atmosphere where the cooler upper air squeezes it into drops of water that fall back to earth in its moisture-free state of purity. Just as the coldest upper air of the atmosphere causes rain, the cool air entering the "Magic Inch" chamber through the special louvers of the patented Carey stem, causes immediate condensation of the moisture in the smoke where it drops to the bottom of the chamber, is absorbed by the natural fiber sleeve of the "Magic Inch," and in turn, is evaporated into the outside air. No accumulation ever remains to form sludge or trap of bitter tasting goo. The "Magic Inch" also mixes purifying oxygen with the smoke from the tobacco, in perfectly controlled proportions, cooling the smoke, eliminating all unpure bite, and creating MILD, LOWNESS, RELIEFUL, and SWEETNESS that was never before enjoyed in pipe smoking.

Today, over one hundred and fifty thousand pipe smokers smoke Carey Pipes almost exclusively. They will get started by accepting my most unusual offer to test a Carey Pipe for 30 days, without any risk on their part whatsoever.

They ways all granted the same option, an option which is yours also. After 30 days, if you agree that the Carey Pipe is the best smoke of your life, you may keep it. If you don't agree, return it with a banner and return the broken pieces to me. The trial has cost you nothing! How many businesses are that sure of their product?

Make Your Own 30 Day Test

Clip out the coupon below. Fill in your name and address and send it to me TODAY. I'll send you a full sized bowlpipe, absolutely free, so you can select your favorite style and shape for your 30 day trial.

E. A. Carey, Dept. 0288, 28 Duncan Street, Toronto, Ont., 642A.

Okay Mr. Carey. Send me your full color brochure so I can select a pipe to smoke for 30 days on trial basis.

Bible Has Faced Persecution In Times Ancient and Modern

This fourth instalment of a five-part series on the Bible deals with its translation through the centuries.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

No other human possession has been so cherished and condemned as the Bible. It has been ridiculed, banned and burned. But it also has been treasured and safeguarded. And it has endured.

Many have died defending it. Others have kept it hidden to prevent its seizure by police. Men have been executed for translating it into common languages. Jurists have debated it, scholars argued over it, atheists scorned it.

About two centuries ago Voltaire predicted: "One hundred years from my day there will not be a Bible on earth except one that is looked upon by an antiquarian curiously-seeker."

But today, more new copies are in circulation than ever before.

Struggles still go on in the United States over its use in public schools and in Communist countries where its printing is prohibited.

But it survived there, too, slipped in to the people by individual travellers.

Before the birth of Jesus there were repeated attempts to stamp out the Jewish Scriptures.

One of the early attacks came in 164 BC, when a Syrian conqueror of Israel, the tyrant Antiochus IV, ordered the Scriptures torn to pieces and burned and anyone found possessing them condemned to death.

Shortly after the writings about Jesus began to circulate, they became dangerous contraband in the Roman Empire. Even verbal exchanges about the faith became risky.

The suppression reached its worst point in 303 AD when Emperor Diocletian ordered churches and Scriptures burned throughout the empire.

However, in the first three centuries after Jesus, the Scriptures were reproduced in many languages to accommodate dispersed communities of Jews and Christians.

The great classical scholar Jerome spent 25 years in Bethlehem at the turn of the fourth century producing the eventually dominant version of the Bible known as the Vulgate, a rendering in the common "vulgar" Latin of the day.

It became the basis for the first Bibles in English.

Translations of Bibles had ceased under the edict of tolerance proclaimed in 313 AD by Emperor Constantine, a Christian convert.

But churchmen itself, allied with government, became a restrictive guardian of the Bible, limiting it to official Latin after that language ceased to be spoken, fearing misinterpretation if Scriptures were in the common tongue and possession of the people.

From the 9th to the 15th century, the only vernacular translations in the Western world were Greek translations.

The Waldensians, followers of Peter Waldo beginning in 1179 in southern France and northern Italy, suffered severe massacres for independent teachings from the Bible in provincial languages.

Although parts of the Bible were translated in English from the seventh century onward, the first complete Bible in the English was translated from the Vulgate by John Wycliffe in 1382.

Handwritten copies of his translation became popular, although he himself banned it and ordered all copies burned.

The Church imposed excommunication on anyone reading the Bible in the vernacular. The Council of Constance in 1415 ordered Wycliffe's body dug up and burned. His associates were imprisoned for life.

By order of the council, a Czech defender of Wycliffe's writings, Jan Hus, was burned at the stake.

Aside from official opposition, the laborious task of hand-copying Bibles made them expensive and scarce, them expensive and scarce.

However, in Germany, Johann Gutenberg's invention of movable type signalled a revolution in the process. The first printed book—turned out in 1456—was a Latin version of the Bible. About 40 copies exist.

The Protestant Reformation was started in 1517 by Martin Luther, who produced a Bible in the German tongue of the before his excommunication. people.

A leading English translator of the time, William Tyndale, was forced by clerical opposition to go to Germany to do his work, which was published in 1526. About 6,000 copies were smuggled to England, but most were seized and burned.

Rival agents in the reign of Henry VIII, who had broken with the Roman church, captured Tyndale in Antwerp and in 1536 he was strangled, then burned at the stake.

But state repression eased and within a year complete English translations appeared with royal approval, including the Coverdale Bible of 1537 and the Great Bible, "great" in page size, in 1539.

However, Bible printing and reading were banned on pain of death in the brief reign of Henry's elder daughter, Mary Tudor, a Catholic queen who restored Roman Catholicism and became known as Bloody Mary for her persecution of dissenters.

In that period, exiles to Switzerland turned over the Geneva Bible, the first to arrange the text in verses.

When Elizabeth took the throne in 1558, production and distribution of the Bible flourished once more. She called it "the jewel I love best."

Meanwhile, Roman Catholic scholars, fleeing persecution under Elizabeth's Protestant regime, went to the Continent where they produced the Rheims-Douay version in 1610. With some revisions, it remained the main English Catholic Bible in English until the recent new translations.

Among Protestants, the King James version of 1611, commissioned by King James I, remained the principal translation until recent times.

Consequently, for about 350 years both Protestants and Catholics used Bibles of 17th-century vintage, including hundreds of words which had changed entirely in meaning, such as "prevent" to mean "precede," "wealth" to mean "wellbeing" and "commend" to mean "convene."

Now, new translations have moved to the fore, including the Protestant-sponsored Revised Standard Version of 1952 and Catholic-sponsored New American Bible of 1970.

The book has drawn more study and analysis, occupied more scholars through the ages and filled more bookshelves with commentaries and interpretations than any other composition on earth.

In the inquiries into its construction, scholars work on two levels, the so-called "lower criticism," which is concerned with perfecting the wording to conform to ancient texts, and "higher criticism," determining the dates, authorship and setting, sources and objectives of the Biblical books.

What is called "exegesis" is the phrase-by-phrase examination of the text to delineate its background, references, interconnections and linguistic usages, while "hermeneutics" is the theory of interpreting the meaning of the Scriptures.

Today, the investigations still ripple with a sense of discovery, and crusades of zeal, sparked partly by the tide of ancient evidence out of the Near East.

Portions of the Bible have been translated into 1,500 languages, embracing 97 per cent of the world's population.

The new translations, drawing on manuscripts closer to the originals as well as on increased knowledge of ancient cultures, now make the Bible available in words conveying today what they meant when written.

Prodigal Son's Story Intriguing Suggestive

By DR. GORDON C. SMYTH

A whole series could be written on the immortal Parable of the Prodigal Son (Luke 15: 11-32). However, I find the phrase, "when he came to himself", especially intriguing and suggestive.

The far country was more attractive at a distance than in reality. The son did not belong there. He had been "beside himself" to leave his kind of home. As the father said of him, he "was dead, and is alive again."

How does this shed any dour understanding of human nature! Never before was the lustful, greedy, alcoholic, cynical, blister or fighting self is the real self. Your true potential is the potential in you. Never believe that the latest bad news about the world situation is the final report. It is inconceivable that man is more influential than God.

No doubt the thought of his real self appalled him and he had a lot to do with the prodigal's change of attitude. Feeding pigs was a degrading task for a Jew. He must have sunk pretty low except the job. It was not until he was in a state of complete destitution that the prodigal decided to return home. He was down and out before he came to himself. We have always reached that juncture in the world. The same may be the case with some members of this column. If that spells tragedy, it also spells hope.

Here is the connection between religion and conduct. Your self-discovery is the yearning that only God can satisfy. Your true self is his son. How natural it all is!

An infinite law of love at the heart of the universe — that is the centre of theology. A world that permits mortal alienation through the free will of man — that is the challenge to philosophy. He "came to himself" — that is the c ure of ethics. "I will arise and go to my father" — that is the soul of religion.

The late John Baillie, Scottish theologian, wrote wise words about the Parable of the Prodigal Son. "When, a few years afterwards, Peter and Paul and John went about the world to prove that same redemptive love of God, they were able to preach a better sermon and to announce a fuller Christianity than even the Master Himself had been able to do."

What did Dr. Baillie mean? He meant the timeless and ever timely story about the Teller of this parable. He meant the matchless story of Jesus and his love.

Efficiency of Hospital Increased in 1973

Belleville General Hospital's patient caseload continues to increase.

But the patients are using hospital facilities for shorter periods - - except those in need of nursing home beds, still in short supply in Hastings County.

In 1973 10,843 adults and children were admitted to active-treatment bed care. This was a marginal 59 more than the 10,783 the year before.

However, the average length of stay was down from 8.37 days to 8.03 - - a total saving of almost 5,000 days, executive director Philip Rickard noted in his year-end report.

But fewer chronic patients accounted for more cave. Some 479 chronic were admitted, compared to 480 in 1972. The number of patient days required jumped from 18,641 to 25,251.

Reason for the big increase is "probably due the lack of nursing home facilities in the area," reported Mr. Rickard.

A board committee already is studying the shortage of nursing home beds in the area and is consulting with the provincial health ministry on the situation.

Meantime, the Queen's Self-Care Unit also had more occupants, but cut their residency in the same period.

The unit - - designed to provide alternative to general hospital facilities for patients in long-stay rehabilitation or convalescence - - treated 1,706 people during 1973, an increase of 250. The average length of stay dropped from 9.11 days to 8.42 days.

The increased caseload with reduced lengths-of-stay was chieved while staff numbers remained unchanged, Mr. Rickard told the board.

"Despite the fact there has been no increase in staffing for the past two years, the workload had increased in every area," he said.

Family Counselling Survey Prepared

Working toward a brief to be submitted to various private and governmental funding sources, the Belleville Family Counselling Service's (BFCS) steering committee Tuesday composed a questionaire it will send to 10 groups involved with marital or family counselling in the city.

The questionnaire, accompanied by a covering letter, is aimed at unearthing the number of cases involving marital problems, each group would have referred to BFCS if the organization had been functioning.

Formation of BFCS is currently under way following concern expressed by officials of city social welfare organizations that marital counselling in Belleville is being neglected.

At present, the steering committee is undertaking a campaign to gauge the need, statistically, for such a marital counselling service. Once the brief is completed, the committee will make submissions to agencies it hopes will be able to fund its operation.

Each questionnaire will request information on behalf of an agency, such as Family and Children's services or the Children's Aid, to enable the committee to avoid duplication.

"In order to reflect a true picture of the need," said Norman Sherman, committee chairman, "The more information we get, the more we can rule out duplication.

"If you can't back up the fact that people will use your service, you're way out in left field," he said, referring to the need for documentation.

Each agency polled will be asked how many people with marital problems are processed or turned away due to lack of facilities or referred to another organization. The survey will end April 1973.

At a meeting earlier this month, the committee estimated that a possible 45 couple with marital problems could have been referred to BFCS from the Quinte Tri - Township city churches could refer 10 clients per month. The Belleville General Hospital medical staff could have referred 40 cases during the period May 1-Dec. 31.

At present, the committee is in the process of incorporation. Thursday, a proposed $22,000 budget for its first year of operation was brought down, with some discussion about sharing office space with another social service organization downtown.

Sitting In

John Legate, vice - chairman, Belleville General Hospital's board of governors, will sit in as chairman until Carl Bateman, Hastings County administrator, can resume his duties. Mr. Bateman, named board chairman Friday, is currently recuperating from spinal surgery.

Bateman Named BGH Chairman

Carl Bateman, Hastings County's administrator and top civil servant, is new chairman of the Belleville General Hospital board of governors.

His selection came in absentia at the board's inaugural meeting Friday.

Mr. Bateman is recuperating in a Toronto hospital where he underwent major spinal surgery three weeks ago.

He has been a member of the hospital board for the past six years and has directed the administrative branch of county government for 12 years.

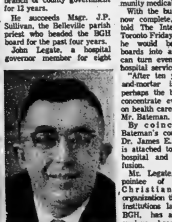
He succeeds Magr. J.P. Sullivan, the Belleville parish priest who headed the BGH board for the past four years.

John Legate, a hospital governor member for eight years, has been named vice-chairman and will substitute for Mr. Bateman until the new chairman is fully active.

Mr. Bateman, underwent spinal fusion at Toronto's Orthopaedic and Arthritic Hospital and it may be several weeks before he can resume full business activity.

He has served on various BGH board committees - including they post of treasurer - - during a time when the hospital was undergoing much of the expansion which transformed it into today's modern community medical complex.

With the building evolution now complete, Mr. Bateman told The Intelligencer in a Toronto Friday night he hoped he would be leading the boards into a time when it can turn even more fully to hospital services.



"After ten years of brick-and-mortar plans I hope perhaps the board can now concentrate even more fully on health care delivery," said Mr. Bateman.

By coincidence, Mr. Bateman's cousin is surgeon Dr. James E. Bateman, who is attached to the Belleville hospital and performed the fusion.

Mr. Legate, a board appointee of the Women's Christian Association, the organization that founded the institutions that to become BGH, has also served on various board committees including chairmanship of planning, property and personnel. A former plant manager until 1968 - - of the now closed Canada Cement-Lafarge Point Anne plant, he now is a technology master at Loyalist College.

City Councillor Alderman J.B. Corke was renamed to another term as board treasurer.

Other committee chairmen: Gerald Joyce, planning and property; Mr. Legate, personnel; Mrs. J.E. Marsh, public relations.

Budget Under Negotiation

Belleville General Hospital is still negotiating with Ontario health ministry officials on the hospital's operating budget and "some decision" may be expected "in the near future," Philip Rickard, hospital executive director said Friday.

Hospital Workload Growing

The number of people using Belleville General Hospital's emergency unit services continues to climb.

In 1973 they totalled 44,150, up from 39,500 the year before.

The statistics are contained in the year-end report tabled by Rickard, BGH executive director, given the hospital board Friday.

During the year BGH became the busiest in the 1,174 Quinte area bloss--up slightly from 1,113 in 1972.

Almost 3,800 operations were performed, compared to 3,777 in year before.

There was a sharp increase in use of physiotherapy and occupational therapy services. In-patient visits for physiotherapy totalled almost 22,000 compared to 15,000; outpatients 12,800 against 11,256. Occupational therapy recorded 7,100 in-patient visits against almost 5,000, although outpatients dropped from 918 in 1972 to 721.

Other statistics with 1972 comparisons in brackets: Nuclear medicine — Inpatients, 2,376 (2,177); outpatients, 3,065 (2,305).

Electrocardiographs — Inpatients 8,162 (7,677); outpatients 2,538 (2,304).

BGH Contracts Coming Due

Labor negotiations will be a recurring sequence at Belleville General Hospital this year, the hospital's board of governors was told Friday.

Already the hospital's 280 nurses have called for arbitration, after a conciliation meeting failed.

Feb. 1, negotiations begin with clerical workers of Local 663, Service Employees International Union.

Feb. 28, talks start with the Local 683's technicians' section.

September sees negotiations commence with stationary engineers, members of the International Union of Operating Engineers.

October will probably see talks with the big Local 183 of the SEIU which includes maintenance, supply and household staffs whose recent arbitration award ends in December.

"It looks like a long negotiating year," commented Mr. Rickard.

Superintendent Appointed

A new superintendent of building services has been appointed for Belleville General Hospital.

He is John Cyr, now employed in Ottawa, who will assume his post March 4, Phillip Rickard, BGH executive director told the hospital's board of governors Friday.

Mr. Cyr succeeds Walter Todd, who resigned late last year to take up a new hospital's building services department.

Board member Enos David told the governors he had talked with Mr. Todd since the resignation and the superintendent had expressed dissatisfaction with communication with the hospital's top administrative level.

"It is well known to the board," commented Mr. Rickard.

Carnival Queen Contestants

Papineau Lake Plan Opposed

Members of the Papineau Lake Cottage Owners' Association are strongly opposed to the Ontario government's decision to develop a 1,000 acre camping site at the North Hastings lake.

Harold Carruthers of Belleville, past president of the association, who has owned a cottage on the lake for the past 22 years, says the association hopes to take its opposition directly to Hon. Leo Bernier of the Ministry of Natural Resources.

More than a week ago the ministry announced its intention to develop the Papineau Lake camping site as a measure to relieve congestion at provincial parks at Lake St. Peter and at Carson Lake.

But Mr. Carruthers says that Papineau Lake (about four miles long and something like one half mile wide) is already overdeveloped.

There are already 350 cottages around the lake," Mr. Carruthers told The Intelligencer.

Development of the planned provincial park will include a frontage of over a mile on Papineau Lake would see expropriation of a privately owned 450 acre farm and 100 cottages.

None of the cottagers, many who have been in the lake for 20 years or more, want to sell their holding at any price, Mr. Carruthers says.

Association members agree that the area is best suited for recreation and tourism but feel that this can best be developed by the private sector.

As it is many of the cottagers are not convinced that the provincial camping site is warranted.

They also point to what they call the inconsistencies of ministry intentions.

Mr. Carruthers said that at a meeting last year with ministry of natural resources officials at Bancroft, association members were told that no major park was planned.

Now, he says, the ministry is saying that it wants to hear the ideas of area property owners.

"But it is too late for this," he submits. "The decision has been made and property appraisers are already at work."

One of the reasons given by the ministry for its park proposal is that the 450-acre farm might be sold for a private camping ground.

A municipal bylaw passed in 1971 delignates the farm as restricted agricultural area and the shoreline as seasonal recreational.

Rather than develop more camping grounds which see peak use only two or three weeks out of the year, Mr. Carruthers says the government might encourage spreading of holiday season over a longer period.

But if more camping sites are required, Mr. Carruthers says an alternative would be for the province to develop nearby Echo Lake and Little Papineau Lake which are more accessible than the proposed site with lands already owned by the Crown.

Mr. Carruthers expects his association will receive support from the local municipal council which is also concerned about the proposed development.

Municipal officials point to added road maintenance and the loss of tax revenues from the private sector.

Accompanying Mr. Carruthers in his presentation of the cottagers's brief to the ministry will be this year's association exec- Mrs. Sybil Saylor, who with her husband operates Lakeview on Papineau Lake.

They are also seeking the support of Hastings MPP Clarke T. Rollins in their submission.

"We would appreciate the same kind of support that Prince Edward - Lennox member James Taylor has given owners regarding the proposed government park development at Lake on the Mountain," Mr. Carruthers said.

Manual Promotes Safety For School Children

At first sight it looks like any other teacher's notebook. Once you start to read it, however, you will wonder just how you managed to live past the age of 12.

A group of Belleville - - area school teachers have published a 53-page teaching manual that catalogues more than 375 specific accident hazards that endanger the lives of elementery school children.

The manual, part of a pilot project that may change safety education in Ontario's elementary schools, will be used by teachers in the 16-school Quinte Associated Schools Group to inject safety tips into regular academic courses.

Ontario Provincial Police safety officer, Brian Turner and Belleville Police constable Bob Hall worked with 12 members of the Quinte ASG safety committee for nearly three months to develop the new safety program. They describe it as an exciting and innovative project that will help both teachers and students become more aware of the hazards they face every day.

"Safety is an attitude of mind," Constable Turner said." It's having the self-discipline to stop, before you do something and ask yourself whether or not it's safe. We can't teach school children that when we visit a police only two or three times a year. It is something that has to be taught very carefully over a long period of time. It's a form of brain washing really."

"However, if you are going to make children conscious of safety, you can't preach at them. I don't think any child would want to sit through a safety lesson in a number of subjects every day. Therefore, what we have done with the manual we drew up for the teachers, is suggest ways in which they can bring safety to the foreground as often as possible when teaching the regular academic subjects."

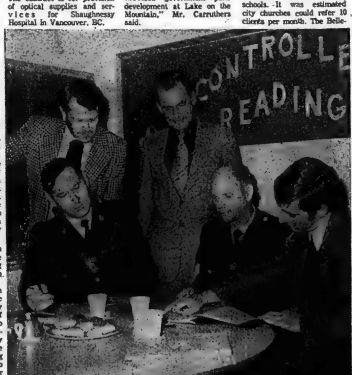
The manual, Danger - - Life Ahead, was published and distributed to the teachers earlier this month. It concentrates on five general aspects of a child's life - - the home, school, in transit between' home and school, festive and holiday seasons and recreation - - and presents, in point form, specific safety hazards a child may encounter in each situation.

The specific causes of harm people encounter in each category are subdivided and listed under nine comprehensive headings - - falls, fire, burns, electricity, poisons, cuts and wounds, electricity, firearms, missiles and explosives, and gas.

By reading and studying the manual, a teacher can determine just what hazards a child might face in any given situation and will be teacher wants to incorporate safety tips into a lesson, he can use the safety tips or the information sources listed in the manual to draw up a program that is designed to meet the needs of his class.

"One of the exciting features of the manual is its adaptability says Bob Horwood a superintendent with the Hastings County Board of Education and one of the members of the safety committee. "The manual can be used differently in different schools to meet particular needs. The whole programme is wide open for interpretation. The teachers can develop the idea of safety on their own in any way they want."

"We are not saying to them 'This is what you have to handle it.' We're saying 'Here is the information. Do what you want with it'!



At present, the teachers in the Quinte school group are setting up their own safety programs. With the help of the manual and a teacher who serves as a safety coordinator in each school, they will try to create imaginative projects that continually bring the safety message to students during their regular class work.

Already, the interest shown by other school groups in the program has been so great, that in the two weeks following publication, the Quinte school group has run out of manuals. Teachers from other schools have been grabbing up copies for use in their own classrooms.

"The interest in the program is indicative of the importance of safety among school children," constable Turner said," More children between the ages of five and 14 die from accidents than from all nine major childhood diseases combined."

AOCO Awarded Federal Job

A Belleville firm, Acco Ltd., has been awarded an $18,000 federal government contract. The contract is for provision of optical supplies and services for Shaughnessy Hospital in Vancouver, BC.

Danger - - Life Ahead

School and police safety officials gathered at Harmony Public School in Corbyville yesterday to explain the new elementary school safety program they are instituting in the Quinte Associated School Group this year. From left to right are Murray Sommerville, PC Brian Turner of the OPP, Bob Horwood, Sgt. Bob Hall of Belleville, and John Emerson. The five men were members of the Quinte group's safety committee, which published a 53-page teaching manual that will help teachers incorporate safety lessons into their regular class work.

Medal Harvest Continues

CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z. (CP) — The medal-hungry Canadian team continued to erode traditional Australian supremacy in the Commonwealth Games pool and established a headlock on women's track and field today.

Canadians won five of the 18 events decided on the second day of competition after picking up two Friday.

Today's winners in the pool were Leslie Cliff of Vancouver in the women's 200-metre individual medley and the team of Gail Amundrud of Gilawa, Becky Smith of Edmonton, Anne Jardin of Pointe Claire, Que., and Judy Wright of Vancouver in the 400-metre freestyle relay.

It was the second medal of the night for Becky, who picked up a second-place silver in the individual medley.

Yvonne Saunders of Guelph, Ont., won the 400 metres and Jane Haist of Thornhill, Ont., captured the women's discus.

Harry Willis of Montreal, captain of the Canadian shooting team, accounted for the other goal medal in the sheet competition.

Don Quarrie of Jamaica and Raelene Boyle of Australia maintained the status quo for recapturing the sprint titles they won at the 1970 British Commonwealth Games at Edinburgh.

But the big surprise in men's track was the Kenyan team which took three gold medals. Ben Jipcho, the latest to succeed in the 3,000-metre steeplechase, Chris Asal defended his title in the 800 metres and Fatwell Kimaiyo took th 110-metre hurdles.

To the delight of the home crowd, New Zealand's Dick Tayler, the attack on the vaunted Australian swimmers as Jaynie Parkhouse nipped Jenny Turrall, the 13-year-old Aussie prodigy, in the women's 400 metres. Mark Treffers won the men's 400 individual medley in which the only Australian finalist finished dead last.

Pat Besford of Wales humbled Dennis Whitfield, the Olympic champion, in the women's 80 breaststroke. Besford's time garnes record the Australian defending champion had set in Edinburgh four years ago.

Redskins Have Rights To Theismann

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington Redskins acquired the rights Friday to quarterback Joe Theismann from Miami Dolphins in return for the Redskins' first-round draft choice in the 1974 National Football League draft.

Theismann, an All-American quarterback at Notre Dame, has played the last three years with Toronto Argonauts in the Canadian Football League. He was the Redskins' first-round draft choice in 1971.

Theismann, whose contract with Toronto has expired, has not been signed by the Redskins, but has thought that Redskins' Coach George Allen would not have made the deal unless the chances of signing Theismann were good. Allen met with Theismann Tuesday.

The quarterback is said to have asked for $75,000 a year to return to Toronto and has also obtained permission to negotiate with the Montreal Alouettes of the CFL.

The only Australian winner in the pool today was Stephen Badger, who squeaked home ahead of Bruce Robertson of Vancouver in the men's 200 freestyle.

The Aussies struck gold elsewhere as Dick Paris and John Nicholson took the top two places in the 1,000-metre time trial, first cycling event of the games, and Yvonne Gowland, the only woman in a field of 27, won the smallbore rifle event. They also got a weightlifting title from featherweight George Vasilakos.

Featherweight Dale Andersen of Rocky Mountain House, Alta., won his first bout of the boxing competition but light heavyweight Tim Taylor was eliminated, both on decisions.

Jamie Parkinson of Toronto stayed alive in the men's badminton singles with a third-round victory and Jane Youngberg of Surrey, B.C., won her second-round match in the women's singles although teammate Nancy McKinley of Toronto was defeated.

Rick Friesen of Saskatoon was the leader after the preliminary round in the men's springboard diving competition with Scott Cranham of Toronto fifth and Ken Armstrong of Woodstock, Ont., seventh.

Interference in international competition took its usual toll of the Canadian lawn bowlers, who were far back in all three classes.

Neil Salkeld of Caledonia, Ont., had one victory in four rounds of round-robin play in the singles, with the Canadian four of George Robbins and Ronald Jones of London, Ont., Graham Jarvis of Vancouver and Bruce Miller of Belleville Ont., having an identical record. The pair of James MacAulay of Lachine, Que., and Edward Franklin, Chateauguay, Que., was winless in four starts.

CLEMENTE HONORED

PHILADELPHIA(AP) — The Hall of Heroes Gold Medal will be presented posthumously Feb. 3 to baseball star Roberto Clemente, who died a year ago while taking aid to earthquake victims in Nicaragua. Clemente, now a member of baseball's Hall of Fame, is only the seventh person to receive the honor in the 20 years since the Chapel of Four Chaplains here has been in existence.

Silver Medalist Can't Eat

CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z. (CP) — Yves Carignan of Montreal, winner of a silver medal in weightlifting at the Commonwealth Games, was so nervous afterwards he couldn't eat.

"I'm still so nervous my stomach couldn't take it," said Carignan today. He won a second in the bantamweight class Friday night.

"But I think I'm beginning to unwind. It's like I have been holding up a great weight for a long time and now it's off me."

"He's just beginning to realize he won something," said Philippe Saint-Cyr, manager of the Canadian weightlifting team.

Carignan and an Indian competitor each hoisted a total of 312.5 kilos—688½ pounds—but the Canadian placed second because he had the lighter bodyweight.

Carignan weighed about 122 for the competition, Saint-Cyr said. "Today, he's down to 115."

The team manager said he expected the 21-year-old Carignan would do well.

"We couldn't really predict a medal, but we knew he should be able to place fairly high."

Carignan's total lift was about 14 pounds better than his previous best.

"We have a good team here," Saint-Cyr said. "It's just too bad we couldn't have the maximum nine men instead of just six.

"Then we could really have shown well.

"As it was, we were allowed to bring seven and then we lost Gary Walt just a week before we left."

Walt, 35-year-old heavyweight, suffered a knee injury in training and had to stay home in Belleville, Ont., with his leg in a cast.

"We stopped to see him on the way here," said Saint-Cyr. "He was in tears. It was so disappointing to go out so close to the Games.

"It's difficult to predict. But I think he would have done very well here."

WORKING WITH YOUR GOALIE

Coaches do not like to see them, but defencemen rarely get by a game without at least a two-on-one or three-on-one situation.

That is why it is helpful to work with your goalie at all times so that if either of these situations occurs there will be no mix-up.

I like goalies who chatter all the time, who tell me whether I am screening them or whether someone is coming behind me when I carry the puck.

You have got to have a goalie yelling at all times, he is like the catcher in baseball because he can see quite a bit more of the play developing.

All right, let's assume one of our defencemen is caught up ice and the opposing team has a two-on-one break. Our goalies know that they are responsible for the puck carrier while I keep my eyes on both men.

On a three-on-one, I try to watch all three attackers while the goaltender once again concentrates on the puck carrier. At all times, it is important for me to stay in the centre of the attackers (see diagram) in case I can make a play on the puck carrier.

Extra Effort Pays Dividends

When Belleville Eagles of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League take to the road tonight for a date in Orillia with the third place Terriers, they'll be taking along the something extra that makes the difference.

Several of the players have been showing large amounts of spirit and desire of late and it's catching.

The club won two of three league starts past weekend and in the process, impressed observers with a demonstration of hustle and try that can only produce satisfactory results.

Earlier in the season, it was customary for some of the players to go for a skate if they were caught up ice. It appears that habit is no longer a trademark of the Eagles.

There is no question the Belleville club has its work cut out for it in its game this weekend. But although there's a large part in the success or failure of teams. And Eagles seem to have found the formula for prosperity.

Following tonight's game in Orillia, coach Walt Gerow brings his team back to Belleville for a Sunday night contest with league leading Barrie Flyers.

There will be an interesting sidelight to that game. Eagles' winger Wayne Weller and Barrie's Corby Adams were one-two in the points race, going into the weekend action.

Wayne's record stood at 19 goals and 8 assists for 30 points while Corby checked in with 49 points (23-26).

Flyers' Doug Acomb was also within striking distance, holding a share of third place with 47 points.

Friday night, Terriers prevented Brantford Foresters from "becoming their first" over Eagles in the fight for fourth place by chalking up a 3-1 win. Brantford has a six-points margin. (22-16). Eagles can make contact one more off that, this weekend.

Shrine Tourney

Don Gavey, busily lining up teams for the annual Shrine Peewee Hockey Tournament, is bubbling over these days.

It finally happened.

He's had confirmation that Brantford Peewee will be one of the 16 entries. Brantford means Wayne Gretsky. And if anyone knows of a more publicized minor hockey player, that's really news.

Young Gretsky has been making the headlines since he first teed on a pair of skates. He'll even draw a crowd when he's attending hockey school.

A prolific scorer the Brantford whiz pots goals by the bunch. According to Gavey, the young man is playing defence and he's accounted for 120 goals for Brantford Peewees who are holding down second place in an Ontario Minor Hockey Association (OMHA) Triple A swagging.

Gavey tried to land Brantford for last year's tournament. He learned Thursday that officials of the club never did receive that invitation.

Rated one of the better teams in the country, Burlington's Peewee squad will not be here for the tourney. The team plays in same grouping with Brantford and is holding down first place.

It is expected Burlington will be involved in OMHA playoffs when the big Belleville event is held March 29-30-31. So there's no way the club can be committed for tourney play.

While his mind is on this year's tournament, Gavey is finding it more and more difficult to keep his attention focused on the present. He's thinking about previous tourney and is very anxious to locate programme from any of the first 13 events staged here.

He'd like to compile a list of tournament players who have gone on professional hockey. To do this, he needs the old programs. If you can help him out, call Don Gavey at 962-0324.

Trojans Win Two

Moira Trojans swept a pair of high School basketball games from Albert College Friday, scoring a 66-52 decision in the senior contest and holding a 68-30 win in the junior match.

Roland Walton led the Trojan seniors with 16 points. Right in step, was Ed Finlan with 14. Dave Hilborn hooped 12, Don McLean 11 and Mike Meagher 10.

Mike Kirby and Alec Olaveson supplied the bulk of the scoring for the Moira juniors. Kirby put up 12 points and Olaveson 11. Checking in with six each were Dan Gutsell, John Lowe and Jim Lowe.

Belleville forward Norm Jones is foiled on his attempt for a hat-trick late in the third period by Peterborough relief goalie Paul Lackey, as defenceman Jake Ayotte looks on. The action took place in Friday night's Metro Junior B Hockey League game at Memorial Arena. Bobcats posted a convincing 11-1 win.

Tarle Posts Shutout

Lancers Down Cornwall

Loyalist College teams won and lost in Ontario Colleges Athletic Association Eastern Division games Friday night.

The Loyalist Lancers hockey team blanked Cornwall that night marking the first shutout of the season for Lancers' goalie Terry Tarle.

"Terry played very well for us," said Loyalist coach Bruce Cameron, "he really worked for that shutout and really deserved it. All my defencemen helped him out quite a bit. I think they wanted him get the shutout as badly as he wanted it."

In Basketball action, the Lancers dropped a tough 53-52 decision to Lindsay.

Reid Mallory, top point getter for the Lancers, paved the way to victory scoring three of the four goals. The hat trick gave Mallory a total of 14 goals in nine games this season and boosted his point total to 25.

He's No. - 4 in the College league.

Barry Roantree tallied the fourth Loyalist goal and added an assist to the marker while Terry Jessup got a pair of assists.

Loyalist outshot the visitors 33-28 and also had the edge by of the penalties. 10 to Cornwall's nine, including the only five minute major, all of which were killed successfully.

The Loyalist basketball team were led in their loss by Jim Sutton with 19 points. Bill Kyle with 16, and Harvey Sharpe with 10.

Tonight, the hockey team takes on St Lawrence of Kingston at 8 p.m. at the Ellis Rink and the Lancers basketball squad plays host to St. Lawrence at 7 p.m. in the college gym.

Cross Country Skiing Catching On Fast

This month, a small group of cross country skiers and families from across the province have formed themselves into an association and are now busy looking for supporters to join with them.

As a non-profit group, dedicated to helping each other, the new association is necessary, with literally thousands of winter sports enthusiasts rushing to outfit their families with equipment.

Many more are seriously considering the ski touring sport but need assistance in selecting equipment, learning to ski quickly, and in locating where those pleasant little trails are hidden.

The new group plans to answer many of these concerns and more as they join together from all across the province and devote their time to such topics as trail locations and trail marking, providing easy-to-ski instructions and even to helping skiers form their own clubs so that many may enjoy the fun of sharing this invigorating winter sport together.

In the Belleville area, the young cross country group wishes to hear from as many country skiers as possible this month. Their province-wide target is to receive 20,000 supporters names to the new association before the end of February.

Skiers are asked to send their name and address on a postcard, this week, to Cross Country Supporters, Box 400, Downsview, Ontario M3M 3A8, and a volunteer will return your postcard with a progress report on all activities.

Bobcats Claw Lions

By MARK BRETT

Size doesn't make a hockey player. That is especially so in the case of Belleville Bobcats forward Mark Coates.

Coates makes up for his lack of weight and height with drive and desire and last night was no exception.

Selected the games's first star as Bobcats crushed Peterborough Lions 11-1 in Metro Junior B Hockey League action at Memorial Arena. Coates supplied three goals while coming up with his usual display of hustle.

"It's too bad there couldn't be more than one first star selected. It was a team effort all the way," said Coates.

Earlier, in the post game analysis of proceedings, Bobcat coach Moe Hunter agreed with Coates' description of the team's formula for success.

Hunter had special praise for goalie Bruce Clark. The coach termed Clark's effort "super".

Solid team efforts win hockey games. And it was the general consensus that it did the trick for Bobcats in this one and in impressive style.

Brian Coates earned second star honors. He also fired three goals for Cats. Norm Jones made it an all Bobcat night when he was chosen the game's third star. Norm was a two-goal man.

The Belleville club did not gain any ground on first place Pickering Panthers. The Pickering team also won last night, shading Wexford Warriors 3-2.

Sunday, Bobcats are in Peterborough for a league game.

Belleville opened the scoring at 7:01 of the first period with two all-stars, Norm Jones and Jim Richardson showing perfect timing as Norm directed the Richardson pass into the net. Later, the game appeared to be going in favor of the Peterborough team but missed opportunities and superb goaltending appeared to be the downfall of the visitors.

The Peterborough goalie continued to be fooled by low shots to the corners. Richardson, Andy Richetta, Coates, with two and Brian Cousins rounded out the scoring for the Bats in first period. The visitors' goalie appeared to be steadier in the second period but Cats were flying.

Peterborough scored what proved to be their only goal of the game early in the second as Steve Casey left all alone in front of the Belleville net, took a pass from Larry Oakley and put a low shot in the stick side of the Belleville goalie who had no chance.

The prettiest goal of the game came at 11:32 of the second as Kevin Joudrey set Cousins up with a perfect pass Cousins moved in, put the perfect move on goalie Bob Duncan and after scoring, went crashing into the boards.

The speedy forward wasn't long getting up however, sporting his well Known "Cousins grin". He added one more and Coates picked up his third of the night to finish up the scoring for the second period.

It was all Cats in the third period again as they moved the puck at their own convenience.

The Cats added two more in the third. Norm Jones got his No. 4 and the final goal came on relief goaltender Paul Lackey's defencemen Tim Yohn beat him with a hard wrist shot.

Belleville fired a total of 33 shots while the visitors fired a total of 28 at Clark in 60 times. Paid attendance was 962.

Kinsmen Get Even

PETERBOROUGH (Special) — The Belleville Kinsmen evened their Ontario Minor Hockey Association Triple A bantam major playoff series with Peterborough at 1-1 here Friday, staging a remarkable comeback to post a 4-3 win.

The Belleville team waited until the final eight minutes of play to launch its drive. Down 3-0 past the halfway mark in the third, Kinsmen rebounded to pull Triple A goals by Paul Hipkin, Bobby Crawford, Mike Bennett and Rick Sprague.

Flyers Pulling Away From Black Hawks

By GLENN COLE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The battle for the final two playoff spots in the National Hockey League's West Division is tightening up these days but Philadelphia Flyers, the division leaders, five opened up an eight-point lead in their battle with second-place Chicago Black Hawks.

The Flyers hammered California Golden Seals 5-0 Friday night to complete a highly successful west coast swing which saw them take five of a possible six points.

Meanwhile, there is only a six-point spread between the next four clubs behind the front runners.

Minnesota North Stars moved into a fifth-place tie with Los Angeles Kings by handing Vancouver Canucks a 5-4 setback in Vancouver while fourth-placed Atlanta battled to a 2-2 tie with Detroit Red Wings.

Boston Bruins still lead the East with 66 points, four more than Montreal Canadiens, who have won three straight since the Bruins crushed them 8-0 last Saturday night.

New York Rangers are third with 54 followed by Toronto Maple Leafs with 50 and Buffalo Sabres with 49.

Flyers 5 Seals 0

The Flyers, who drew a record crowd of 19,040 in Montreal earlier this month, attracted the largest crowd of the season—10,776—to Oakland's arena as they sent the lowly Seals to their 33rd defeat of the season.

Goaltender Bernie Parent kicked out 33 shots to record his 10th shutout of the year, tops in the league.

The Flyers, who finished the season series with the Seals with a 5-0 log, got single goals from Gary Dornhoefer, Rick MacLeish, Terry Crisp, Ross Lonsberry and Dave Schultz.

Flames 2 Red Wings 2

Jim Rutherford continued by Detroit from Pittsburgh last week, kicked out 36 Atlanta shots, including 16 in the final period, to help the Wings tie the Flames.

Mickey Redmond and Marcel Dionne scored for Detroit with Keith McCreary and Jacques Richard replying for the Flames.

Richard's goal at 14:30 of the second period tied the game and it came only 22 seconds after Dionne had given Detroit a 2-1 edge.

North Stars 5 Canucks 4

The North Stars jumped to a 4-1 lead in the first period and stayed off a late, Vancouver rally. Minnesota's first three goals by Bill Goldsworthy, Danny Grant and Gary Bergman came on the North Stars' first four shots on Vancouver netminder Ed Dyck.

Dennis Hextall got the other two Minnesota goals with Don Lever scoring twice for Vancouver and Tracy Pratt and Jocelyn Guevremont for Los Angeles.

Lever's second goal of the game at 15th of the season came with 54 seconds left in the third period and with 1:53 left in the game at 19th of the season came with 54 seconds left in the third period and with 1:53 left in the game at 19th of the season.

Tonight is Henri Richard night in Montreal as the Canadiens salute the 39-year-old team captain. Richard has only agreed to coaching after his team-mates, the visiting Chicago Black Hawks and the management of the Canadiens. He asked that all money be donated to a local orphanage to construct a new gymnasium there and organizers indicated the fund had swelled to about $80,000.

Richard's older brother, Maurice (The Rocket), will be on hand for tonight's festivities.

In other games, Toronto goes to St. Louis, the Islanders are at home to Boston and Los Angeles visits Pittsburgh.

Sunday afternoon, Boston is home to the Flyers while in night games, Toronto visits Atlanta, the Islanders play host to the Kings, the Islanders visit Chicago, Detroit plays host to the Penguins.Vancouver travels to Buffalo and the North Stars continue their west coast trip in Oakland against the Golden Seals.

IN MEMORIAM

WRIGHT — In loving memory of a dear brother, James Nugent, accidentally killed Jan. 26, 1971.
I think how when I awoke that day
The sorrow you would take
The call was sudden,
The shock severe,
To see a brother I loved so dear,
Forever remembered by his sister Rita.

SILLS — In loving memory of our dear aunt Gertrude Sills, who passed away January 26, 1961.
Sweet memories of you we treasure,
Whatever looks we view,
Whatever we do or wherever we go,
We will always think of you.
— Mr. and Mrs. Oliver M. Day, Brimfield, Mass.

PLUMMER — In loving memory of a dear dad and grandfather Dwight Clarke who left us, January 26, 1967.
Left cold and lonely that day,
True quite a while ago,
An angel came and left us,
That you had left this world,
Your loving smile, your gentle touch,
No longer we shall enjoy,
We had to grow accustomed,
To living one by one,
And as the days go by,
We miss you more and more,
The pain is always present,
And I wonder if Dad really
Is not very empty, lonely
Without you.
And I wonder if dad really,
Knows how we all care,
But memories are memories,
And nothing can take them from us,
Our loving remembrance of you,
No eyes can see us weep,
No hands can touch, remembered only by God, dad, son-in-law, Jean and Bob Hodgson, grandchildren, Marilyn, Debbie, Dale and Wanda, Stan and Tim.

HOPKINS — In loving memory of dear father, mother and grandfather, Albert Hopkins, who passed away Jan. 27, 1970.
Sweet memories along life's way,
Silently remembered every day,
No longer in our lives to stay,
But in our hearts he's always with us.
Sadly missed by wife, Ethel Mae Hopkins, daughter Nancy and grandson, daughter Sandra and family.

TOMPKINS — In loving memory of a dear father, husband and grandfather, Albert Knight, who passed away Jan. 27, 1970.
An empty place in our home we fill,
An empty place in our hearts we will,
There will be a vacant chair,
But we couldn't try to do for us it,
Is impossible — missed by wife, Bessie, Kay and family.

THOMPSON — In loving memory of our dear wife and mother, Ethel Mae Thompson, who passed away one year ago, January 26, 1973.
Each evening a prayer,
For one we love and loved you well,
You always will be here,
Your memory is treasured with love, husband, father, mother-in-law, son-in-law, Terence and Reginald, Esther and Jean, granddaughters and great grandchildren.

BAUDRY — In loving memory of a dear brother-in-law, Jim Nugent who died one year ago today, January 26, 1973.
Dear Jim, you left us one year ago today,
When one we loved was called away,
God took him home — it was his will,
But in our hearts he lingers still.
— Sadly missed by Mary Nugent and Rev. Cossebaud and family.

Leaves Composted

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Saved by a pollution probe, city council here has had a change of heart about its dead leaves. In future leaves will be composted, not buried. The city tried composting leaves 15 years ago but the odor proved too strong for local inhabitants. However, the council is trying to encourage the development of backyard gardening and hopes to set an example with its leaves.

Boy Is Allergic To Grannie's Dog

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can I lose something cause an allergy, or does it trigger a reaction to an allergy already present?

Our daughter-in-law understood her doctor to say that our dog, a long-haired cocker spaniel, caused an asthma-like allergy in her son. We have seen this reaction—serious breathing difficulty, tearing eyes and/or runny nose.

Now he visits at our home only in summer when the house is well aired and he can spend most of his time outdoors.

Definitely our grandson is allergic not only to our dog, but to horses and hay as well. But the question is, could our dog (or any other agent) have caused the condition? It makes us feel guilt-ridden thinking our pet was responsible. Mrs. K.L.H.

I cannot see any reason for you to feel guilty. "Caused" and "triggered" are just words. If the boy had never come in contact with a dog—probably any dog, although there might be variations of "allergy"—he would not ever have a dog-dander reaction.

But I'm sure that by this time, he would have had such contact, and would have developed the allergic reaction. He'd have come in contact with "some" dog.

In a concrete sense, I suppose you could stretch a point and say your dog did cause his asthma. But your dog didn't create in the boy the tendency to react to dog danders. So I would say that "trigger" is much closer to the truth.

In any case, he would have shown allergic reaction to other things, such as you mentioned.

For a comparable case, I personally know people who have come from Europe. They never had hay fever in all their years in Europe. But after coming here, and being exposed to ragweed and similar pollens, some of them gradually developed hay fever. Sensitization by the first exposure must come first. After that, depending on the individual, the allergic reaction can become more severe with subsequent exposures. There are others from Europe who do not ever get hay fever of course.

So I think you can put your guilt at rest. Your dog did not cause your grandson's potential for reacting.

As a passing thought, would it be possible for you to put the dog in a boarding kennel when your grandson visits you? It might help. I go only so far as to say "might" because it is also possible that the floors and carpets might have enough dog hairs and flakes of skin to set off a reaction anyway. But you could try it.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband developed pneumonia in the summer. What could possibly cause that? He sat for hours reading with the air-conditioner blowing right at him.—Mrs. W.

The answer is simply that temperature doesn't cause pneumonia. Pneumonia is caused by germs and can occur any time of year.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My grandfather, who is 77 and still somewhat active, has had trouble with his prostate gland for some time, and I am sure he needs some kind of surgery. He has been urinating frequently and after finishing discovers he was not finished after all. He is afraid of the surgery because of his age and fears he will not wake up. He has considerable wears off. What is your opinion?—S.H.

Prostate surgery is being done well into the 80s and 90s, so he is making too much of his age. His symptoms sound typical of prostate trouble. He may tolerate the inconvenience and discomfort for a time, but the risk is that he may obstruct completely and not be able to urinate. And, that, of course, would be an emergency and then immediate surgery.

'True' Movie Said False

OTTAWA (CP) — A movie that resurrects an incident in which Canadians provided German prisoners with guns to shoot two court-martialled fellow prisoners after the end of the Second World War had its North American premier here Thursday night.

Italian-made, The Firing Squad starts out by stating "This story is true."

But a Hamilton man, who witnessed the events depicted, said the story as related by director Giuliano Montaldo in the film is about "fourteen per cent true."

A member of the staff of the armed forces history director said about the only thing true in the picture is the fact that the two men, both alleged deserters, were tried with Canadian supplied weapons.

A release by the distributors of the film, which will be shown across the country, said Montaldo exercised "certain fictional license."

Frank Treml, who was there at the time as a German navy lieutenant, and Philip Chaplin, senior researcher for armed forces director of history, suggest that's an understatement.

For instance, the film made all the German army men look when actually they were navy men and it depicts a Gen. Snow who corresponds to nobody involved in the affair.

Montalde even had the general's car flying the Maple Leaf flag—undreamed of in those days—and carrying four stars, a United States method of indicating the rank of the occupier.

But the essential fact that Canadians, running a camp for surrendering prisoners near Uelzen, the Netherlands, just at the close of the war, provided the guns has never been disputed.

Mr. Treml said he believes the shooting could be classified as a war crime. The film shows all the Germans in the camp supporting the idea of the execution but Mr. Treml said just the contrary was true.

The story, as related by former defence minister Paul Hellyer in the Commons in 1966 and by Mr. Chaplin, is that the Canadians were in charge of the camp for surrendering German naval personnel in May, 1945.

Under surrender orders signed May 5, the German commander was responsible for the discipline of his troops.

The Canadian camp commander permitted a court martial of the two deserters but forbade execution. After the sentence of death was passed the camp commander asked for instruction from headquarters of the 1st Canadian Infantry Division.

The information was passed to a German corps which replied the chief of staff had authorized and approved the sentences.

Mr. Hellyer gave his answer in reply to questions in the Commons from John Diefenbaker (PC—Prince Albert) who was asking about an article on the incident in the West German publication Der Spiegel.

Mr. Hellyer said an order abolishing all German court martials did not reach the camp until after the executions.

THE UNEXPLAINED

by Allen Spraggett

Kreskin Not Amazing

Kreskin, the stage and television mentalist, has written a book called "The Amazing World of Kreskin." I suggest it be retitled, "The Not-So-Amazing World of Kreskin."

It's not so amazing if you know the gimicks that mentalists and other pseudo-psychics use to perform their marvels. Since Kreskin in his book criticizes "mediums," "seers," and other so-called phonies, it is only filling that we should critically examine what he himself and his fellow mentalists do.

In a nutshell: Kreskin is about as psychic as an oyster.

Virtually anybody, with the intelligence of a normal 10 year-old and armed with the necessary tricks purchased from magic supply houses, can do what the Kreskins do. Let's examine a few of his "amazing" feats and see just how amazing they aren't.

Kreskin claims to be able to "read" people's thoughts. He implies that he does it by ESP.

One guest on Kreskin's TV show (which is taped in Ottawa, Ontario) was Dr. William Taylor, director of Canada's National Museum of Man. He was asked to bring to the show, wrapped securely, a sample from the museum. What he brought was a fragment of an ivory comb 6000 years old.

"I didn't tell anybody what I was bringing," he said, "not my wife or my secretary or anybody at the studio. I wanted to fool Kreskin."

He didn't. Kreskin gazed upon Taylor as the box and told him and a suitably astonished audience exactly what was in the box and how old it was. The scientist was convinced Kreskin had read his mind.

However, watching the show, I turned to my wife and said: "The old clipboard trick." Later, a call to Dr. Taylor confirmed my suspicion.

The trick, you see, is simple. You can purchase it from any magic supply shops for $35.00. It consists of an ordinary looking clipboard, such as college students use to take notes in class. On the hard top is carboned and gives the mentalist an exact copy of anything written on the clipboard.

My conversation with Dr. Taylor revealed that yes, Kreskin had asked him to write down the contents of the sealed box before the show, but no, he wasn't suspicious because he kept the piece of paper and Kreskin even left the room while he wrote on it. Of course all the mentalist had to do was return later and retrieve the clipboard for a copy of what had been written.

Kreskin's other wonders can be similarly explained. On one show he had actor William Shatner, once of Star Trek, locked in chains. There were 10 keys, all of which had been tested by members of the studio to show that only one, the last key that was tried, would open the locks. Then the keys were put into a bowl and Kreskin went out of the television studio to a phone booth.

Inside the studio, members of the audience came on stage, took a key each from the bowl and stood in line. From the phone booth outside, Kreskin called and picked a number signifying which one in the line-up had the key that would unlock Shatner's chains. The key opened the lock.

ESP? No, a trick lock.

Kreskin can be purchased from magic supply shops (such as Lou Tannen's in New York, where they told a friend of mine, the Rev. William Rauscher, and myself that Kreskin was a customer) for about $10.00. The key that opens the lock the first time triggers a mechanism in the lock which enables all the other keys to open it. The mentalist can't lose. Later, he resets the lock and it's ready for the stunt to be repeated.

What about predicting the future?

Kreskin claims to have predicted newspaper headlines. The "prediction" is locked in a box, the box is opened 3 hours later and the written headline proves to match the actual headline. Meanwhile the mentalist has had no direct physical contact with the box.

It looks good but the gimmick is the key that opens the box. The key, a large, elaborate affair, is hollow and contains a spring mechanism. The correct prediction written after the newspaper (a published) is loaded into the key and the act of turning it in the lock propels the rolled-up piece of paper inside it into the box.

Mentalism is great fun. As entertainment I love it. But when a mentalist such as Kreskin claims (as he does in his book) that he's using ESP— well, that's something else.

Wells Claims Progress In Teacher Parleys

TORONTO (CP) — Ontari WellesleyFridayhe is optimistic the seven tentative teacher contract disputes will be settled before next Tuesday's threeweek mass resignation deadline.

"There is still good progress ding made . . . ." he told a ws conference. "There is no section that all these people (teachers and schoolboard executives) aretrying to bargain and reach agreement."

The minister said he has been meeting with both sides in several of the disputes since Tuesday and meetings are scheduled up to Sunday night.

Sudbury separate school teachers reached asitentative agreement Thursday with their board, he said, and Perth County secondary school teachers have ratified an agreement.

The remaining disputes involve 3,100 teachers who have 189,000 pupils, he said.

They include secondary school teachers in the boards of York and Prescott-Russell and separate school teachers in KURONPerth and in Windsor.

Ikhe minister and Premier William Davis have said the legislature would be recalled to prevent the resignations, but Mr. Wells said it is too early to tell if it will be needed.

All school boards are in some sort of mediation or talks, he said.

In Sudbury, John Keast, chief negotiator for the Sudbury separate school board, said agreement with teachers was reached after mediation by Mr. Wells.

Mr. Keast said the minister intervened personally in two days of discussions between the board and the Ontario English Catholic Teachers Association (OECTA).

The agreement still must be ratified by the teachers at separate its meeting Monday and by l. 561 teachers who had submitted resignations and who are meeting to vote on the settlement Tuesday.

Former Policeman Jailed 10 Years

WHITBY, Ont. (CP) — Mr. Justice John Osler of the Ontario Supreme court, citing the "particularly gruesome" circumstances surrounding the July 12 shooting death of an Orillia contractor, sentenced former Toronto police officer Merle Smith, 43, to 10 years in prison Friday.

In passing sentence, Mr. Justice Osler said the length of sentence was based on consideration of the deterrent factors to others.

"The circumstances of this crime . were particularly grue-

Bribe Claimed

TORONTO (CP) — A labing union official told the royal commission into violence in the construction industry Friday that the International Laborers' Union was prepared to pay $1 million to have Toronto concrete formers sign with it instead of the International Laborers' Union.

Charles Irvine, Canadian vice-president of the Operative and Cement Masons International Association, told the inquiry he had been informed Local 562, Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' International Union "can be taken care of" if his concrete forming workers signed with the laborers in 1969.

Mr. Irvine said Augustine Simone, business agent for local 562, met with labor union leaders in Chicago in May, 1969, and upon his return to Toronto told Mr. Irvine of the offer.

Mr. Irvine said he told Mr. Simone that he disapproved of the deal and he told Mr. Simone at the time "you tell these men down the river and I'll put you in the same box you put these men's money in."

home," the Judge said. "The public must not be allowed to consider that this kind of crime will be taken lightly."

Smith was originally charged with two counts of non-capital murder in the deaths of Glenrose Chiavalli, 44, and Smith's 40-year-old wife, Agnes, at the Chiavalli cottage near Orillia.

The jury of 10 men and two women found him not guilty on those charges but registered a conviction on the single reduced charge of manslaughter in Chiavalli's death.

Mr. Justice Osler told Smith he was "far from being a violent man," and that he considered guilty finding that the crime was a "spur of the moment event."

"You were tried solely with the death of Mr. Chiavalli and the events that occurred during the crime brought about the death of your wife by your own hand," the Judge said.

The Judge said a report he received Friday from Toronto psychiatrist Dr. Basil Orchard who had examined Smith earlier "confirms my opinion that Smith is normally of a peaceful, law-abiding behavior."

He also recommended that the report be made available to penitentiary authorities.

In his trial, Smith told the court he did not mean to kill his wife, who "just got in the way." When he was trying to shoot Mr. Chiavalli.

He had gone to the cottage to deliver mail to his wife who had left him about two weeks before the shooting, he said. He asked her whether she would return home if they were standing out outside the cottage.

Smith testified he had noticed Chiavalli on the doorstep and that the contractor told Smith he could not attend his wife if she did come back.

Smith said he then started to cry and that was when "I went for the gun."

Seaway Suffers Deficit

OTTAWA (CP) — The St Lawrence Seaway Authority has been hit with its first operating deficit since 1959, underlining urgency to a review of seaway financing, Lands Minister Mandeau, newly-appointed authority president.

The deficit may mean a seaway toll increase within two or three years, Jean-Eudes Mandeau will only say it is a "decision that has to be taken by the cabinet."

A proposal to deal with the authority's rising cash deficit, including interest charges, and operating costs will go to the cabinet in two or three months, he said in an interview.

Previous annual operating profits have never been enough to cover even interest charges and the total debt now is approaching $800 million.

Another question is whether Canada and the United States should spend millions of dollars expanding the seaway to handle a broader variety of products.

Any attempt to expand the Welland Canal, for example, will require years of study and action, he said. This raises questions about competitive capabilities now entirely in Canada.

Mr. Normandeau, 61, said a current financial study of the seaway shows that while record cargo tonnage passed through the seaway, the inland waterway had its first operating deficit since it opened in 1959.

Seaway tolls have been frozen since 1968 but a report prepared for the government in 1971 recommended raising tolls to cover rising costs and debt charges. Faced with strong opposition from shipping companies, western grain farmers and eastern mining interests, the government has not yet acted on the recommendation.

Mr. Normandeau is going to Washington next week to discuss these matters with U.S. officials.

"They are in the same boat," he said.

Life Not so Good Down on the Farm

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Unscrupulous growers carry out sweated-labor policies against Canadian migrant farm workers, mostly our native population, a report presented at a meeting of the Ontario Federation of Labor(OFL) executive council said Friday.

The report by Robert Ward, commissioned by the OFL to inquire into the plight of farm workers in Ontario, was based, in part, on the findings of a government study by the ministry of Manpower and Immigration last August.

It also resulted from material and discussions with representatives of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, the National Farmers Union and others.

The report quoted the finding of the government study of 16 instances of a family of 10 working in the fields for a family wage of $50 to $60 week, while being housed in an old chicken coop without sanitation, and of "job brokers" reaping up to $500 a head for recruiting workers from Mexico and Portugal.

The report said the exploitation and excesses reported by the government study "are reflective of the total stand against our rural working population which denies farm labor minimum employment standards, minimum wages, and the right to organize under protection of a labor act."

It calls for an agricultural agreement which the governments would sign with three Caribbean countries, setting minimum wages, living and working conditions as well as paying a sizeable part of airfare for migrant farm labor from Mexico and Portugal.

Auld Dodges Dump Queries

PORT HOPE, Ont. (CP) — Ontario Environment Minister James Auld took a quick snowbound trip here Friday through the proposed CP Rail landfill site in Hope Township but declined to say whether he would approve the site once the final reports were completed.

Mr. Auld said he could not comment on the proposal to dump garbage from Metropolitan Toronto to the area about 10 miles west of Cobourg because he must act as the final voice appeal for both sides.

However, in an address prepared for a meeting with residents, Mr. Auld said Ontario will never approve a garbage dump or a bad sanitary landfill site to turn Toronto's waste problems.

The text of his address was released in advance but he did not make the speech.

Major communities like Toronto cannot put off recycling and reclamation as something far in the future, and rely on landfill to deal with their waste problems, the address said.

On the other hand, he said in the address, there is no room for "look down our noses" at sanitary landfills as has solved a great many serious waste management problems.

Following the half-hour tour Mr. Auld met with about 300 residents in nearby Welcome Hall where he was confronted with questions and half a dozen briefs.

Mrs. A. K. Scullthorpe, chairman of the Help Oust Pollution Escalation (H.O.P.E.), said the group feels the project should not be approved because Metro Toronto has circumvented the provisions of Bill 161 in acquiring land outside its boundaries.

She quoted the section as stating that no land shall be acquired in a local municipality without the approval of the local municipality.

She questioned the point of the 1972 legislation if Metro Toronto can acquire land for a garbage site from a private company and if that company can also lease government land for the same purpose.

Mr. Auld said he thought garbage problems would have to be solved on an area basis and pointed out that Metro Toronto wasn't the only community with them.

He said his ministry's consulting engineers now are designing a 1½-million-ton recycling plant which has solved a great many serious waste management problems.

General Predicts Peace

OTTAWA (CP) — The man who took the first Canadians to the Middle East has fall re turned Friday night optimistic that peace will eventually come to the area.

Brig.-Gen. Douglas S. Nicholson, M.C., of Cornwall, Ont., said finding agreement will take time but UNEF (United Nations Emergency Force) will be needed for some time yet.

Previous assignment of the commander of Canada's UNEF contingent, which now has reached 1,100 men. He has been replaced by Brig.-Gen. Donald Cameron of Montreal.

Gen. Nicholson arrived on the same plane that brought Princess Anne for a three-day visit. He waited on the plane while the princess received official greetings and got off after the red carpet had been carefully rolled up.

On other matters, the general said UNEF is not getting complete co-operation from the two sides in Egypt. He said there is a firefight almost every day and it is difficult to tell precisely who is responsible.

He said the situation should improve when UNEF moves into the demarcation zone between Egyptian and Israeli troops east of the Suez canal.

France Gets Oil By Weapon Trades

PARIS (AP) — In a bid to get bargain prices for petroleum imports, France is stepping up its campaign to sell arms to the world's oil-producing states, informed sources say.

Deliveries of weapons from Mirage jets to anti-tank rockets are being expanded among Third World countries, especially by the Arabs.

So far, the French government has sold various armaments to half of the 12 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, and it is approaching four others.

"The French need money to pay for oil," one source said. "And the oil-producing countries have money and want arms. It's that simple."

Nixon Preparing Cut In Some Oil Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration appar ently is preparing to require a rollback in the price of propane and some domestically-produced oil, but there is no indication of when or how much.

Federal energy chief William Simon was asked by reporters Friday if a rollback in oil prices is in the prospect. Simon replied: "There sure is," but quickly added he was referring only to so-called "new" oil which has been free of price controls and is selling at $10.35 a barrel.

Also on Friday, Simon told the Senate permanent investigations subcommittee his Federal Energy Office (FEO) soon will publish new regulations for propane which he hopes will bring about a "substantial reduction" in its price.

Propane, used extensively in agriculture, has increased as much as 300 per cent in price in recent months.

Simon gave no indication of how large an oil-price rollback he expect. He has said in past that $7 a barrel would be a reasonable "long-term" price for old but conditioned Friday against speculation that prices would immediately be reduced to that level.

In response to questions from subcommittee Chairman Henry Jackson (Dem. Wash.), Simon said predictions of a 20-per-cent shortage in gasoline are "becoming only too accurate," but declined to make a statement on the likelihood of gasoline rationing.

The Senate is scheduled to vote Tuesday on emergency energy legislation which would give President Nixon authority to order rationing.

Auto Sag Costs Jobs

TORONTO (CP) — Sagging automobile sales, especially in the United States, brought additional layoff notices Friday from Canadian auto makers.

Chrysler Canada Ltd. announced 250 low-seniority workers will be laid off from its engine plant at Windsor, Ont., effective Feb. 1 because of low demand. The plant employs about 2,700.

Ford Motor Co. Ltd. said its Oakville, plut will cut production from Feb. 4, affecting about 3,500 hourly-paid employees.

Ford also placed 46 Oakville employees on indefinite layoff, according to the 9 earlier laid off there along with 175 at St. Thomas, Ont., and 870 at Windsor.

Ford Motor Co. of Detroit announced additional layoff of 1,950 workers Friday, adding to 12,100 given notice earlier.

Oilmen Lap Up Profits
NEW YORK (AP) — Embattled oilmen this week found themselves announcing diversified, fiscally higher profits amid a continuing debate about whether higher earnings might not already be too high.
Exxon Corp., the world's biggest refiner, said its profits were up 19 per cent for both 1973 and the last quarter of the year. Second-ranked Mobil Oil Corp. said it posted a 47-per-cent gain for hte year, third-ranked Texaco said it was up 6 per cent and other major refiners announced similar gains.
Analysts estimated its 1973 profits at a record $2.44 billion and its fourth-quarter earnings at $784 million. But it and others defended the figures.

High Cost Oil Harmful

Price Cut Urged By Saudi Arabia

FROM REUTER — AP

TOKYO — Saudi Arabian oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani reiterated today that Saudi Arabia's want a decrease in the price of crude oil. He added, however, that Saudi Arabia will not lower the price unilaterally, but only in concert with the Persian Gulf states.

"We always try to do things of this kind as a group, not as an individual", he told a news conference here.

He said that the current oil price is a fair one, but that Saudi Arabia wanted it lowered because of the effect of the recent big increases on both developed and underdeveloped countries.

He said the meeting to be held today in Vienna by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) "is to study a pricing system for the future and has nothing to do with the present level of prices and has nothing to do with Saudi Arabia's desire to have a price increase."

He said it is premature to say by how much the price of crude oil might be reduced. This was a matter to be discussed with other OPEC members.

Yamani and Oil Minister Belaid Abdessalam of Algeria are on a tour explaining Arab oil policy.

They also are apparently drumming up barter deals for oil that will bypass the Western countries that heretofore have marketed most or all of the Arab oil.

Cypriot Leader, Gen. Grivas, Dies

LIMASSOL (AP) — Thousands of Greek-Cypriots gathered outside a bumble house in Limassol today to pay their respects to Gen. George Grivas, guerrilla hero of the independence struggle against the British who died Sunday of a heart attack.

The body of the 75-year-old soldier who two years ago launched a new guerrilla movement to fight for Enosis, union with Greece, lay on a simple iron bed, covered with the Greek flag.

Ignoring the underground war he had been waging since 1971 to overthrow President Makarios, the Greek government hailed Grivas as a national hero. And while Makarios had no immediate comment on the death of his old comrade and recent bitter foe, all Greek-Cypriot schools were closed for three days of mourning.

Grivas died and lay in state in the house he used as his headquarters when he led his EOKA army of guerrillas against the British.

There was no immediate indication whether Grivas will be buried in Cyprus, his birthplace, or whether he will be given a state funeral in Greece, where he spent much of his life.

Grivas's aides, in their announcement Sunday night of his death, said before he died he named his successor, and his new EOKA army's struggle for Enosis will continue. But opinion was divided over whether the small band of guerrillas—estimated at only a few hundred men—can survive without the old general's dedicated leadership and mystique.

Queen Calls For Princess

OTTAWA (CP) — Princess Anne and Capt. Mark Phillips ended a fast-paced, informal weekend visit Sunday night, flying with the Queen to Christchurch, New Zealand, seat of the Commonwealth Games.

Crowds applauded the young couple at every stop.

The tour began in earnest Saturday when cheering crowds outside the Parliament Buildings surged around the couple as they made their way to a limousine. A similar welcome awaited them following a tour of the National Arts Centre.

The princess and Capt. Phillips walked a short distance along the Rideau Canal amid a throng of cheering skaters.

Through it all, the princess kept a warm, but shy smile and the couple stopped now and again to chat with children or shake hands with adults.

At the Hull, Que., arena a crowd of hockey fans, gathered for a Kiwanis Club midget tournament, gave the princess a standing ovation as she dropped the puck for the start of a quarter-final game.

She watched the game and presented medallions to the three stars.

Saturday night, the royal couple swooped down a toboggan run at a Government House winter party.

A crowd of people, selected to provide a cross-section of Canadians between the age of 20 and 30, joined in the skating, tobogganing and sleigh rides and then took to the dance floor with the royal couple.

Sunday morning, the princess, Capt. Phillips and the Legers attended a church service at Erskine Presbyterian Church.

The service marked the congregation's 100th anniversary

Rt-Rev. Agnew H. Johnston, moderator of the 98th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, preached a sermon on the importance of established churches and the danger in newer churches that have lost touch with their roots. He also referred to school days, some of which he spent in Lancaster, Ont., as a school-companion of Gov.-Gen. Leger.

The princess and Capt. Phillips spent Sunday afternoon with the Trudeaus at the prime minister's Sussex Drive home. Bad weather forced cancellation of a planned helicopter trip to the prime minister's country residence at Harrington Lake in the Gatineau Hills.

The royal couple then drove to the airport where, with the Trudeaus, the Legers and Gen. Jacques Dextraze chief of the defence staff, they greeted the Queen.

While her aircraft was refueled after the flight from London, the Queen attended a reception at the Canadian forces base officers mess.

There she invested Col. Donald Curtis McKinnon as a Commander of the Royal Victorian Order.

The award, announced in the New Year's honor list, is made for personal service to the Queen—in Col. McKinnon's case, for his services to the Governor-General, the Queen's representative.

After the investiture and brief chats with a handful of invited guests, the royal party boarded the aircraft.

After one last wave from the Queen at the top of the ramp, the British Airways VC-10 left for New Zealand with a short refueling stop in Vancouver.

Israelis Abandon Cairo Road

From AP-REUTER

Israeli forces gave up their positions along the Cairo-Suez road today to end the first phase of their pullback on the Suez front, the Israeli military command announced.

Under the terms of the troop disengagement pact, United Nations peacekeeping troops will hold all evacuated areas for six hours before handing them over to the Egyptians.

Israel's pullback lifted a three-month siege on the city of Suez, at the southern end of the Suez canal, its 15,000 civilian inhabitants and the Egyptian 3rd Army that has been trapped on the southeast bank of the canal since the ceasefire that ended the October war.

Israeli forces were also completing their withdrawal from the ports of Adabiya and Ataka, on the Gulf of Suez, and the high escarpment at Jebel Ataka, the southernmost point of Israel's advance on the western bank of the canal.

Impeachment Unlikely

WASHINGTON (AP) — An impeachment action against President Nixon, especially a bitter, partisan one, would tear the United States apart, says Attorney-General William Saxbe. But, Saxbe said, he expects Congress will not impeach Nixon, but rather will keep the action going. "They'd rather have a crippled Nixon than a healthy, sitting Jerry Ford," Saxbe said in an interview in U.S. News and World Report. Ford is vice-president.

IRA Holds March

LONDONDERRY (AP) — More than 8,000 supporters of the Irish Republican Army marched through Londonderry Sunday with black flags to commemorate the 13 Roman Catholic demonstrators killed by British paratroops on Bloody Sunday two years ago. The marchers massed in the Bogside district below the old city walls and heard speakers attack the moderate Catholic politicians who have joined Protestant moderates in Northern Ireland's first coalition government.

Gas Rationing Possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gasoline rationing may be necessary by spring unless the Arab countries resume oil shipments to the United States, says Senator Henry Jackson, who headed three days of energy-crisis hearings last week. Meanwhile, the Federal Energy Office (FEO) urged utilities to cut power by five per cent below normal next month.

Opium Seized

TORONTO (CP) — RCMP seized 3½ pounds of raw opium in a Toronto apartment Sunday and said it was only the second such seizure in the city in the last 10 years. Kapildev Sharma, 23, and Surinder Pal Singh, 22, were charged with possession of drugs for the purpose of trafficking.

Canada Is Advised Supply Depends On Israel Stand

TORONTO (CP) — An Arab oil official says resumption of crude oil shipments to Canada from the Middle East will depend on clarification of Canada's position toward Israel.

Canada has not taken a stand on Israel's occupation of territory by force or on the rights of Palestinians, Ali Attiga, secretary-general of the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries, said in an interview Saturday.

He was in Toronto for a conference on oil and international politics, sponsored by a graduate school branch of the University of Toronto and the Canadian Institute of International Affairs.

Mr. Attiga disputed the contention of External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp that because Canada has supported United Nations resolutions on the Middle East, it has not taken sides.

Occupation of territory by force contradicts all the civilized principles of the, UN, he said.

Prof. Yunif Sayigh of the American University in Beirut suggested to the conference that the use of oil as a political weapon "will be a brief, passing phase."

But he said eventually Arab states will cut their oil production to slow the depletion rate of their oil reserves and because their vast accumulation of economic assets cannot be absorbed into their domestic economies.

High Winds and Rains Sweep South Ontario

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

High winds and heavy rains combined with mild temperatures in many areas of southern Ontario during the weekend to topple trees, cause power blackouts and force postponement of the Muskoka winter carnival.

The storm began Saturday in the Windsor area and moved east with winds reaching 85 miles an hour in he Kingston area Sunday morning.

At Oshawa, Kay Andringa, 35, died for a walk with her husband, three children and other relatives broke through ice and drowned in rough waters of Lake Ontario Sunday. Police said waves had washed away the undersurface of the ice.

In the Windsor area, winds gusted to 59 miles an hour, three-quarters of an inch of rain fell, numerous windows were broken by tree limbs and several barn roofs in Essex County were damaged.

Lightning knocked down part of a wall at the home of Mrs. Vernon Peach of Windsor and the falling bricks demolished a stored boat valued by its owner at $3,500.

The wind also set a wrecking ball on a crane at a Windsor construction site in motion and three cars were damaged.

On Wolfe Island near Kingston power was off for nine hours Sunday and three sections of the city were without electricity for up to two hours.

Service was off at Kingston General Hospital for 30 minutes but a spokesman said emergency power service cut in immediately for operating rooms, intensive care and coronary care units and recovery rooms.

In the Muskoka area, 12 hours of rain followed by wet snow forced officials to postpone the start of the two-week Muskoka winter carnival. Events scheduled in Bracebridge, Huntsville and Gravenhurst were delayed until, hopefully, the temperature drops and the snow returns.

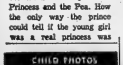
Child Drowns In Sump Well



A three-year-old Belleville girl, Rachel Lynn Clarke, drowned early Sunday afternoon when she fell into a sump pump well while playing in the basement of her Pine Street home.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Clarke, of 231 Pine Street, Rachel was pronounced dead by Dr. J.B. McSherry when she arrived at Belleville General Hospital.

Deputy Police Chief Harold Reid said that he expected an inquest would be held into the young girl's death.

Princess and the Pea

You probably remember the children's story of the Princess and the Pea. How the only way the prince could tell if the young girl was a real princess was to have her sleep on 27 mattresses and still be able to feel a pea placed under the bottom mattress. At the children's section of Corby Library, Saturday, children were read the story and later acted it out. "Princess" Marcie Keast, 8, tries out the mattress that will prove she is really a princess.

Trenton Plant Struck

TRENTON — More than 100 workers walked off their jobs here at midnight, bringing to a head contract disputes between Fabricon Manufacturing and the union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America.

The strike, which began Sunday midnight had been endorsed some two months ago at a union meeting by a vote of 90-1. A subsequent offer by the company Jan. 13 was refused by a unanimous vote and the option to strike today was exercised flowing a 79-8 refusal of the latest company offer made Saturday.

Contract negotiations began in September and since that time disputes have appeared before a provincial conciliation board and company proposals have been rejected three times.

Douglas Tyner, national union representative, outlined demands as wages, fringe benefits, and payment of fringe benefits. The union demands include $1 an hour increase plus a cost of living raise geared to the Dominion Price Index. The union also demands the company pay for OHIP, life insurance and weekly indemnity fringe benefits.

According to the union spokesman, the company is not prepared to meet wage or fringe benefit demands.

Average wage of the 118 affected workers is about $3.15 an hour.

Company president Hanns Allmendinger said negotiators worked though Friday night and into Saturday morning in an attempt to head off strike action.

"We offered the best we could for the company to maintain operation," he said.

How the Consumer Protection Act Works to Protect YOU

Intinerant sellers must be registered

Last fall, I was approached by a painter who wanted to paint my barn for what seemed like a bargain. I paid him $50 in advance and the next day he came with two helpers and completed the job. Everything was fine until the "paint" disappeared with the first rain. The contract we signed only has his signature. Is there any way to get hold of this man?

No. That "contract" you signed is merely a slip of paper. When dealing with unknown salesmen, always check them out. Contact the Ontario Consumer Protection Bureau to make sure they are registered as itinerant sellers, (door-to-door salesmen, selling such items as driveway paving, encyclopedias, magazines, household appliances, aluminium siding and swimming pools, just to name a few), must be registered. The Act allows the Registrar to require the seller to post a $5,000 bond to guarantee service; start proceedings to refuse or revoke registration if the seller is not financially responsible; enter a business premise to investigate a complaint, and prosecute the itinerant seller if he gives false information or refuses to comply with an order. Never give any merchant or seller more than a five percent downpayment. Beware of those wanting large downpayments. Established businessmen rely on mutual honesty and trustworthiness and they don't expect you to subsidize their operations.

Referral Selling

Last week, my wife and I, with three other couples, bought encyclopedia sets for our children from a door-to-door salesman. The salesman offered us a rebate and we $100 off our purchase if our friends decided to buy the same set of books. After thinking things over, we all want to cancel the deal and get our deposit back. Can we do this?

Yes. Salesmen who tell you that you can get an additional discount on goods if you get some of your friends to purchase these goods are using "referral selling" which is prohibited under the Consumer Protection Act. Any contract signed under these conditions is not binding on you. The seller can lose his licence and be fined up to $2,000 if convicted.

Buying on Credit

Three months ago I answered a newspaper ad and signed a contract to rent and eventually purchase a color television. Being a widow on a small pension, I didn't want to spend a lot of money, but the salesman talked me into a 26-inch model for a $30 monthly payment. Although all details weren't worked out, I signed a contract in which the monthly payments were stipulated. I have now received another copy of the contract and it shows that rather than this $30 doesn't just pay for the set, but also pays for a three-year service contract and high monthly finance charges. I was also unaware that I would have to pay for three years. The set will cost me at least twice what it would in a store. Can I cancel the contract and get my money back?

You're in luck. The Consumer Protection Act states that anyone selling merchandise costing more than $50 on credit must provide the purchaser before credit is given, with a clearly written statement showing the total finance charges both in dollars and cents and the annual percentage rate being charged. In this case, the total cost and finance charges were not disclosed, so you can get your money back. You were very foolish to sign what amounted to a "blank" contract.

Hydro Crews Busy

Ontario Hydro work crews spent most of Sunday repairing downed poles and power lines in Picton, Frankford and Tweed after the weekend storm that ripped through the Quinte area.

Jack Muir, Hydro information officer, said all lines downed were low voltage distribution wires strung along rural routes. No serious problems were experienced with the high voltage supply lines.

Mr. Muir expects permanent repairs to be completed by Wednesday this week. Some poles, snapped by the high winds, will have to be replaced by crews.

He estimated that about 200 customers were affected by blackouts.

The Belleville Shrine Club installed its new directorate and committee leaders at a dinner meeting Saturday night.

Suspect Arrested In Hit-run Death

Police officers from the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police arrested a 19-year-old Peterborough man early this morning and charged him with criminal negligence, dangerous driving and failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

David James Ronald Bolton, 19, of 177 Rubidge St., Peterborough, was arrested and charged following an investigation into the hit-and-run accident in Stirling Friday night that claimed the life of 81-year-old Frederick McDonell, of Stirling.

Mr. McDonell was killed around 6:30 p.m. Friday when he was struck by an eastbound car as he walked west along the Towuline Road in Stirling near the Stirling fair grounds.

The police officers who were investigating the fatal accident, PC Fred Hamelink and Cpl. Bill Reid, spent Saturday and Sunday in the Peterborough area before they made their arrest early this morning.

Bolton is being held in custody in Belleville pending the results of a bail hearing later today.

Northwest Power Cut

Belleville escaped major power failures during the high wind and wind storm that lasted most parts of Southern Ontario this weekend.

Approximately 100 Belleville Utilities Commission customers on Bell Blvd., Maple, Lemoine and Tracey Sts. were without power after one of four circuits in the Cascade Road substation was broken. Although the exact cause could not be determined, Mr. Britton reported a gust of wind or a branch may have brushed a wire, causing a circuit breaker to trip, and cut power.

"It didn't get off fairly well," said Mr. Britton.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following calls for assistance during the weekend:

Sunday, Jan. 27, service call to 86 Selina Street, where power blown loose by the wind, no damage, 9 a.m.

Sunday, 9:48 a.m. service call to 181 Hamilton Road, broken Hydro service wire, no damage.

Sunday, 6:33 p.m. service call to 126 North Park Street, outside electric plug broken, no damage.

Fund Drive Chairman Optimistic

Returns from canvassers working during the Ability Fund (March of Dimes) campaign for disabled/adults have been coming in slowly accordine to Vera Moorby, Belleville chairman of the Rehabilitation Foundation for the Disabled.

However, judging from reports received from team captains, the chairman said that more people are giving more mo-

"The returns should definitely be up," she said today. "Just about every area is reporting higher returns."

Mrs. Moorby feels that this year's total collection of $7,800, will be exceeded this year.

Through the week-long campaign that sees an estimated 600 canvassers visit door-to-door in Belleville and rural areas, the Ability Fund, March of Dimes, collects money to help provide artificial limb clinics, physiotherapy, summer camps, job training and placement for handicapped adults.

Today, Mrs. Morphy said total of approximately $3,000 will be deposited in the local Rehabilitation Foundation account. Although the campaign officially closes today, she expects other funds to be coming in tonight and tomorrow.

Last Monday, when the fund drive began, the campaign got off to an unsteady start. Mrs. Morphy was forced to cancel the annual Bibs Night due to a sudden freezing rainstorm that left icy unsupported sidewalks in its wake.

The Belleville drive corresponds to those in approximately 465 other Ontario communities in January.

ANAF Will Sponsor Citizenship Course

Representatives of Ontario's Army, Navy and Air Force veterans units met in Belleville during the weekend and agreed to sponsor a special week-long citizenship training program at the Royal Military College in Kingston this summer.

The 36 men an 100 women who attended the quarterly meeting of the ANAF's Ontario Command unveiled plans to send 100 Grade 11 boys from Ontario to the military college to study the functions and operations of Canadian government.

The citizenship training program, which starts July 28, will give boys an opportunity to study the methods of government by participating in a series of lecture-seminar sessions, mock elections and mock parliamentary sessions during the week they are at RMC.

"The Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans realized that the future of Canada lies in the youth of the country," Alex Paul, chairman of the ANAF's youth committee explained. "Therefore, we have embarked up on a program designed to assist the youth of Canada 'to accept the challenge of leadership. The program we have this task. We plan to set up an objective citizenship training school which the boys will attend. We plan to set up an objective citizenship training school which the boys will attend. We plan to set up an objective citizenship training school which the boys will attend

Empty Coffers

In the matter of equalization payments to the provinces — a prime issue in the federal-provincial energy conference — the federal government has been prone to put on its bleeding heart act and claim it cannot afford any more money than it is currently laying out for this purpose.

Consider the pensioners, to name but one somewhat underprivileged group. Have they not also come by any increases they have had in the last year or two only from a reluctant Ottawa?

Yet everyday we have the evidence of what is surely the most free-spending government in Canadian history, with funds being made available for everything from Canada Council and Opportunities for Youth projects to the junk art that adorns the immediate surrounds of various ministries.

Not a week passes without some reference by Ottawa correspondent Richard Jackson as to the government's latest flights of extravagance. Business and Consumer Affairs analyst Vincent Egan has also noted in recent days that governments "show little or no interest in cutting back on spending. . ."

The inflation thing, if it is not run completely berserk, is firmly in control of our lives — and what is worse, it is in control of governments. The economists say their piece, but with little evidence of knowledge of what the end will bring, and with even less conviction as to what should be done.

Would another government be able to bring some semblance of control to spending, where the present one has failed? For to, say there is no more money for the provinces, and nothing more for the pensioners, is to ignore the huge bureaucratic establishment in Ottawa groaning under the weight of their inflated pay packets. It has got so that a thousand dollars of just about everyone's salary in the federal establishment would go far toward achieving a greater degree of equalization, say for the pensioners, not to mention the provinces as a whole, yet would never be missed by those now earning it.

But this kind of philosophy escapes those in power in Ottawa and while we may go on lamenting the extravagance that almost daily is revealed, we know that nothing will be done about it — at least not by the present government.

Unwelcome Intrusion

The selection of a couple of milk churns laden with explosives for what proved to be an unsuccessful helicopter bomb attack on an Ulster police station is what might be called "very Irish."

If it were not so potentially deadly, that is. But then there is a lot that is deadly in Ireland these days, and the "very Irish" syndrome does not have the "fun" connotation of days past.

The police station was in Strabane (pronounced Stra-baan) and the chopper is believed to have been hijacked across the border in County Donegal, a wild and beautiful corner of Ireland associated more with mountains, dreaming shores, and artists such as Paul Henry and Humbert Craig than with much in the way of industry other than tourism.

There isn't so much as a train running in that part of Ireland anymore, although there once was a network of routes there. Buses yes . . . but helicopters, and this one owned by a private company according to one report, well things must be changing there too.

Canadians remember this lovely unspoiled region from naval service in nearby Londonderry. It is a part of Ireland we would associate more with some bonny lad of ballymacmurt fleet (William Allingham that) with any harsh intrusions of the modern world, let alone bombs in milk cans.

He wrote: "Four dimples on a pond, a grass-land lea, a blue sky of spring, white clouds on the wing; what a little thing to remember for years, to remember with tears."

Public Works Minister Gets The Message

The Junk That Passes For Art And Citizens Pay For

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — When you get around to saying you are going to start work on your income tax — which, as always, will be sooner than you think — remember how the federal Government is spending millions of dollars on huge hunks of scrap metal, enormous lumps of fibre-glass, and great globs of plastic for the ornamentation of new federal buildings.

The stuff is called modern art says Public Works Minister Jean-Eudes Dube, who oversees the spending, and, as he concedes, "very avant garde."

In fact, so far ahead of its time he has discovered to his dismay, that the taxpayers not only don't understand it, but resent their money being "wasted," as scores of them, have told him, on it.

The Public Works rule of spending thumb is that for every $100 going into construction of new federal building, $1 goes into its decoration.

Yl'k Jack, says Northern Ontario Liberal MP Ralph Stewart of Cochrane, "welded scrap metal, fused plastic, twisted fibre glass, and to call it art is to joke."

Last year the Government spent more than $1,000,000 on these way-out works, and this year could be tapping $2,000,000.

Ralph Stewart, a conductor of symphonies and big choral groups, and a man not without artistic sensitivity, publicly has been campaigning about it and since, after all, he is a Liberal — perhaps in doing so against what have been his pretty fair chances to make the cabinet.

For he is more than just another backbench MP.

He is chairman of the Commons Committee on Broadcasting and the Arts, and has some beverage in turning in a report to Parliament that just might turn off funds for this "junk." as he scorns it.

In the design and decoration of government buildings, he argues, the wishes of the majority of taxpayers should prevail.

But they don't.

Instead, he charges, "the kooks and oddballs" have made Public Works authorities captive, and the Government "a fool" in the eyes of the electors.

And since an election is blowing in the winds of Spring, what the electors think is suddenly of some importance.

In between elections, taxpayers, of course, are to be properly ignored, put upon and even put down, and sneered at as being on the federal payroll, might be expected to tell him what he needed to hear.

And he wanted to hear that all that "junk" was fined to haul it away to the scrap metal yard where, she said, it belonged.

"I'll double it," cried another woman, "here's $10."

There were other offers — cash — with the urgent suggestion that a big, heavy, flat-bed truck be hired to transport the thing to the junk yard where old cars are crushed into cubes.

"There's supposed to be a steel shortage," another woman, from External Affairs told him, "and the best thing you could do with that is melt it down ,and have it recast into pots and pans or bumpers and fenders."

And there are costly "things" like this, with $10,000 to $50,000 price tags, all over town.

But stucks, why worry — you've got your income last to think about.

Another Rise In Price Of Food Is Possible

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Remember the big surge in food prices last summer?

The same thing could happen again. Some of the same causes still exist, and there are new inflationary forces as well.

One major factor in last year's worldwide shortage of farm commodities was Washington's 1972 decision to sell to the Soviet Union far more grain than the United States could spare. Some of those export commitments extend through the 1974-75 crop year.

Another was unfavorable growing and harvesting weather in many agricultural areas. The current crop year, in the Southern Hemisphere, may not be much better.

The Australian wheat crop will not be as big as previously thought because of rain problems," according to grain merchants James Richardson and Sons Ltd. of Winnipeg. And the Argentine crop will also be lower than previously estimated because of inclement weather.

The federal government's decision to create a turkey marketing board has prompted the national president of the Consumers Association of Canada to warn food shoppers to expect a rise in the price and a reduction in the supply of turkeys — "one of the few remaining sources of relatively inexpensive protein."

Maryon Brechin fears that the board, which would operate like the national egg marketing board, serve to keep consumer prices high. She says that the end of the original distribution problem that led to the formulating of a marketing board.

That problem, in the case of eggs, was the sharp decline of financial reverses in 1970 and 1971, when very high egg-production levels were maintained. The board was to operate on behalf of Beryl Plumpte's food prices review board.

The board will operate the argument that producers ought to be able to make a good income by selling their eggs at prices higher than are warranted by legitimate production costs.

Producers would defend marketing board prices by increases that those boards can obtain, and would contend—as the oil companies contend their products were under-priced previously.

But consumers must face the painful reality that while the cost of all food items advanced, 'n the latest reported 12-month period, by 17 per cent—which is bad enough for most families—the price of eggs increased an average of 54 per cent.

And it's hard to avoid the suspicion that large numbers of eggs are being down-graded and exported as cheap, defective eggs in a typical bureaucratic manoeuvre designed to maintain high domestic prices on Grade A eggs.

Federal Agriculture Minister Eugene F. Whelan is fond of saying that agriculture is the most important single industry in all of Canada.

Certainly, farmers are entitled to a reasonable return, and price and market stability are desirable up to a point.

But it is not the role of the government, nor of the marketing boards it creates, to manipulate supply and prices to the lasting disadvantage of all consumers.

Interview with Premier Lougheed

Alberta Wants a Fair Price For Its Resources

PREMIER PETER LOUGHEED
BEEB

Q: What do you see as the short-term solution to avoiding, if possible, any energy crisis in Canada? and how about the long-term?

Lougheed: I don't really believe there is a short-term solution, because the energy crisis is really only in the east east of the Ottawa Valley and their problem is a distribution problem. In the absence of a National pipeline, which we've been proposing in Alberta since 1959 and as late again as January, 1973, I don't think we really can meet any . . . shortages to the extent they exist in that area. If we had a Montreal pipeline, as I think we could have had, one perhaps almost by now if they had acceded to our proposal of last January to build it, then I believe Ontario and the Atlantic think we would have been in a area—the Atlantic provinces—could have been served by Venezuelan, Nigerian and other sources.

. . . We've increased the volume of exports to the United States from about 800,000 barrels a day to about a million barrels a day. I think that a certain amount of diversion of that exported crude to Montreal could have been accomplished this year. You only have to go back two years to look at figures of 700,000 to 800,000 barrels a day in the Chicago area and I think that was the position of crude that they were relying upon . . . there could have been that diversion, if the pipeline had been built this summer, of at least 200,000 barrels a day into Montreal, and that would have been far more than I believe the actual shortages really are.

The long-term situation is a combination of three or four different situations. . . . assuring that fair value is obtained and that there's not bargain-basement prices with regard to things like natural gas, and that we put together coal, natural gas, oil, electricity and have a national energy policy that deals with that in a way that we have proper allocation of our available resources. There's just no reason why Canada can't be self-sufficient in energy requirements. That of course involves improvements in the distribution system, better, more realistic pricing and certainly significant incentives to ensure that new discoveries occur.

Q: Do you feel the federal government's would have to assume greater control over energy resources?

Lougheed: We're involved in a federal state. The provinces own the natural resources. It has to be a matter of co-operative federalism and I think that's unequivocal and a clear and specific part of our constitution. It's the same in many other areas. If you're talking about health care in Canada you're not going to have health care appropriately worked out in this nation unless you have co-operation between the 11 governments involved. The same in the energy situation.

Q: Should Eastern Canadians have first call on Alberta's crude oil to the exclusion of all exports to the U.S. in the event of a serious energy pinch in Canada?

Lougheed: I think you can answer that unequivocally yes. But the yes has to be predicated on the fact that if you distrupt, say for example long-term natural gas contracts, with the U.S. as a result of failure of national policy in Canada to utilize those natural resources—the natural gas—in the Eastern Canada, we invite the possibility of retaliatory action by the U.S.

"I don't think there's any way it needs to be necessary. In other words, I think that quite clearly if we're involved in a situation where about 800,000 barrels a day are being imported and there's a problem with about 100,000 barrels a day there's plenty of room for diversion without getting into the area of serious reductions in the area of the mid-western part of the U.S. I think that we may find that the Puget Sound area in terms of market for Alberta crude might be met from Alaska crude from Prudhoe Bay and diversion there may be less of a concern to the U.S. But an extreme amount of diversion from those states who are good friends of Canada in the mid-western states around Chicago can have some adverse impact upon Canada-U.S. trade and would be unnecessary in my view.

Q: Is provincial control and ownership of natural resources in danger in the light of federal moves in recent months in the energy field? Do you foresee such control and ownership ever reverting to Ottawa in the national interest?

Lougheed: The answer to the first question is clearly no. The answer to the second question's already no. Ottawa, when they enter Section 109 (of the British North America Act), rests with the provinces. They can't change the constitution unilaterally. We've got a federal state and it was established on the basis that the provinces control the resources. If you have the federal government in control of the resources, all we'll have happen in my view is that the central region will get richer and the outer regions will get poorer, because the decision will be made on values and not in terms of regional development.

Q: Alberta's position is that it wants a fair price for its natural resources. What constitutes a fair price—for both natural gas and crude oil—on the export and domestic markets. Who should determine the price? What do you think of Ontario's suggested three-price system for crude oil, Canadian, export? Of a two-price system—a world-market price for exports and a lower price for domestic use?

Lougheed: I think you have to look at something like lumber prices. Who determines lumber prices? It's the combination of market forces, of supply and demand. It's a combination of the factors of demand relative to the cost of house building, to the cost to the consumer of Canada in terms of paying a great deal more for the home at the price of lumber goes up. This is the whole nature of Confederation, is that the energy and regions of Canada have been involved in selling their resources, both renewable and non-renewable in terms of a world-market basis, and we certainly think there shouldn't be discrimination against Alberta.

Q: What can be done to revitalize the Canadian coal industry—a major part of which is based in Alberta—to help conserve other sources of energy? There were indications earlier that the provincial government was going to introduce a new coal royalty and new guidelines for production.

Lougheed: One of the most helpful things that could be done for coal industry would be for the federal government to assure that the Canadian transport commission directs the national railways to ship coal at a freight rate cost from Western Canada to Ontario to replace our importing 16 million tons a year from the United States. 15 million tons for electric generation in Ontario by Ontario Hydro. That, in one step, would do quite a bit to revitalize the industry.

Q: What does Alberta hope to gain by establishing a crude oil marketing board?

Lougheed: We don't like to be in the position, because it is so important to Alberta, that the prices for crude oil are set by others. Up to this point, there have been established essentially by the integrated major companies and Imperial Oil in particular. We have as much at stake in terms of it that we feel we have got to be in position as the owner-lessor to establish the prices. . . . Probably it will be extended to synthetic crude oil in the spring and maybe to natural gas. In natural gas there is some complication because you have got long-term contracts. We have to do that and prices to the lasting disadvantage of all consumers.

Bible Digest

by H. S. DEAN

"But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become sons of God, even of the that believe on His name." John 1:12.

Regeneration determines our relationship with Him. All the good things of God are to be found in His Son and every believer is entitled to them. Believe and receive!

provide such access.

3. Industrial, commercial, major institutional and predominantly multiple-family residential uses may have access to Arterial Roads but in each instance an attempt shall be made to group developments, in order to reduce the number of access points which could hinder the movement of traffic. Strip or extended linear development shall be discouraged; where such conditions exist the number of access points shall be reduced wherever possible.
In new developments, intersections of local streets with arterial streets shall be kept where possible.
Access to arterials will generally be from collector streets.

2. COLLECTOR ROADS
Collector roads are existing and proposed roads with a minimum 3-traffic lanes and a right-of-way width of 66 to 86 feet, which are designed to collect and carry medium volumes of local traffic to the Arterial roads or to distribute traffic to the Local roads, as well as to provide access to abutting properties.

3. LOCAL ROADS
Local roads are existing and proposed roads with 2-traffic lanes and a right-of-way width of 66 feet which are designed primarily to provide access to abutting properties. They should be designed so as to discourage the movement of through traffic and function as local distributor of traffic to the local roads, as well as to provide access to abutting properties.
Notwithstanding, all roads serving industrial areas shall have a minimum right-of-way width of 66 feet.

6. ENGINEERING SERVICES
In order to provide for the orderly growth of the residential, commercial and industrial areas within the Planning Area Section, the Services Plan, attached hereto as Schedule F, divides the City into three Service Areas.
The Policy Statement shall be that no new major development or plans of subdivision shall be permitted unless adequate municipal water and sanitary and storm sewer facilities are available to serve such a development.
Service Area 1 includes the present built-up part of the Planning Area Section and such adjacent lands where further development can be permitted with the connection of minor extensions to the existing municipal services.
Development will be permitted in Service Area 1 immediately.
Service Areas 2 and 2A consist of the areas adjacent to Service Area 1, where development is dependent upon the construction of major extensions to the existing systems of municipal services.
Service Area 3 consists of the proposed Industrial Park area in the extreme Section of Belleville. This Area may be developed independently of the other Service Areas in the Planning Area should an acceptable agreement be reached between the City and the proposed industry with regard to sanitary sewer and water supply and storm drainage.
Service Area 2A consists of two sections of the City — the low-lying land in the north of Section III and a small area immediately north-west of the Drive-in Theatre, that adjoins the Exhibition Grounds. The larger section requires a force main and a pumping station plus a storm drainage and the smaller section requires a force main and sewage pumping station to connect with the existing sanitary sewer trunk mains.
For development to proceed in Service Area 2A, force mains and pumping stations will be required to connect with the existing trunk sanitary sewers. In addition, major storm drainage and water main extensions will also be required.
Development will be permitted in Service Area 2A when:
1. The City Council is satisfied that it can reasonably finance and defray the cost of the major extension in Service Area 2 and/or 2A for such development; or
2. The developer is willing to provide the main extensions required in Service Area 2 and/or 2A for such development at no cost to the City.

Service Area 3 consists of the north-west fringe area of the City, where development is dependent upon extension of the sanitary sewer services from Sidney Township and, when available, can provide a sanitary sewerage system within the Potter's Creek drainage system.
Development will be permitted in Service Area 3 when a sanitary sewer service can be provided from Sidney Township.

E. DEVELOPMENT POLICIES
The following development policies that are established in this Plan are in accordance with the wishes of the City of Belleville Council whose desire is to control the future development of the Planning Area Section in an orderly and systematic basis.
For the majority of development activities which may be expected to occur, the Plan should not require amendment. However, proposed land uses that change in land use that is approved shall require an amendment specifying the nature of the development accompanied by supporting data and a report thereon which, as well, a public meeting or meetings shall be held to explain the proposed change in the affected ratepayers.

7. SUBDIVISION AGREEMENT
Prior to the development of any plan of the subdivision, the developer shall enter into a subdivision agreement with the City.

12. DEVELOPMENT STAGING
In order to protect the ratepayers of the Planning Area Section from undue financial hardship, the City Council shall ensure that the timing, location and nature of new residential development are such that the demand for municipal services is not excessive, in relation to the taxable assessment provided. Staging of development will be in accordance with the Municipal Services Policies and new large-scale residential development, which would create an appreciable increase in the demand for municipal services, shall not be permitted unless it can be demonstrated that the overall rate of municipal debt to taxable assessment will not be unduly affected.

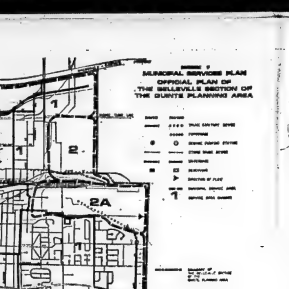
3. SECONDARY PLANS
It is the intent of this Plan that prior to any large-scale development or any major change in individual taking place in any Planning District or Planning Area, Secondary Plans will be reviewed for the Community, or a part thereof, contingent in detail the general location of the major road network required municipal water supply system, sanitary and storm sewer facilities and the general land use areas. At such time as a Secondary Plan is approved by the City of Belleville the Official Plan shall be amended accordingly.

4. OVERALL PLANS
When considering applications for land division the City will require the applicant to cover 5% of the gross area of the subject application for the provision of public open space either in the form of land or of cash in lieu of land.

5. SUBDIVISION OBJECTIVES
When a plan of subdivision is not necessary for the orderly and orderly development of the land, a consent to a land conveyance may be given by the Committee of Adjustment. Such consent will only be given by the Committee upon careful consideration of a number of criteria such as the provision of adequate lots for the severed lot, the compliance with the appropriate zoning by-law or if the consent would create a traffic hazard.

9. HOUSING RENEWAL
MAINTENANCE STANDARDS
It is intended that within the City of Belleville a balanced program of renewal, which would provide for the conservation of areas of good and stable buildings, the rehabilitation of stable buildings which are in need of repair, and the redevelopment of areas which are neither stable nor in good repair, shall be carried out as appropriate. It is further the intention to achieve the conservation and rehabilitation of property throughout the City of Belleville by the passing of a minimum maintenance and occupancy by-law for all types of properties.

I. IMPLEMENTATION
This Official Plan shall be implemented by means of the powers conferred upon the Quinte Planning Board and the Council of the City of Belleville, by the Planning Act, the Municipal Act, and such other statutes as may be applicable. In particular, this Plan shall be implemented by a Restricted Area By-law, legislation pursuant to The Municipal Act and the construction of public works and capital works programs.



1. RESTRICTED AREA BY-LAW
It is intended that a comprehensive Restricted Area By-law shall be brought into effect in accordance with the provisions of the Planning Act, by the Municipal Council. Such a By-Law shall zone land in accordance with the proposals contained within this Plan, and will establish regulations to control the use of land and the character, location and use of buildings and structures in the whole of the Planning Area Section.
It is not intended that all the Residential, Commercial or Industrial areas, as designated on Schedule B, will be zoned for such uses immediately by the implementing Restricted Area By-law. Certain areas designated on this Plan may be zoned elsewhere, under a "Holding" category, in order to delay their development until the designated use until they appear to be ready for such development and until the standards appropriate to the designated use may be attained. Under the "holding" category the lands may be zoned in various "holding" zones or other uses. When Council receives an application for the development of such land and submits a plan of zone and impacts studies on the economic and environmental effects, if provided, have been prepared, and are deemed suitable by the Council and the Planning Board and which is in accordance with the designation and policies of this Plan, the "holding" category may be removed from the implementing By-laws by an amending By-law without any need for an amendment to this Plan.
Existing land uses which are not designated in this Official Plan may be zoned in the implementing Restricted Area By-law for their use at the time of the passing of the By-law.

2. SITE PLANS
It shall be a requirement of this Plan that, prior to any rezonings which involve a major commercial development or a residential development of Density 2, 4, or 5 or a mobile home development, a site plan shall accompany the application for rezoning and such site plan may form part of the site plan by-law and/or the site plan agreement.
The site plan shall show location and size of lot, location of proposed area, floor area, heights, minimum yards and setbacks, parking and loading areas, parking facilities, density, recreational facilities, elevations, etcetera.

3. AMENDMENT PROCEDURE
Should changing conditions necessitate the need for an amendment to the Official Plan in accordance with Section 17 of the Planning Act, the following procedure shall be followed to ensure that the general public receives adequate notification and, where necessary, impact studies shall be carried out.
Prior to recommending to the Municipal Council that any amendment be made to the Official Plan, the Planning Board shall prepare the amendment and notify affected ratepayers of its contents, requesting comments and/or discussion of the amendment.
In the event that the amendment affects a large number of ratepayers, or is of a general nature, the notice of the special meeting shall be given by advertisement in the local newspaper.
A record shall be made of the special meeting and it shall be appended to the amendment prior to its submission to the Council.

4. GENERAL REVIEW OF THE PLAN
It is intended that this plan will be reviewed from time to time in view of changing conditions, and the general review of the whole plan shall take place at least once every five years.

I. IMPLEMENTATION
1. IMPACT STUDIES
Before an amendment is made in this plan to change the designated land uses and policies, the Quinte Planning Board may require that shall undertake impact studies which clearly indicate to the satisfaction of Municipality:
1. Commercial
(a) the justification for not establishing in one of the designated shopping centres or in the downtown Commercial area (C.B.D.);
(b) that additional retail floor space is justified by reason of unanticipated change in population growth, personal disposal income and retail sales per capita;
(c) that a proposed new regional centre will not have a detrimental effect on existing designated regional centres or the downtown Commercial area;
(d) that no undue transportation difficulties would arise from the establishment of the proposed centre;
(e) that all other requirements of this Plan have been met.
2. Residential
(a) that the proposed residential development will not have a harmful effect on existing residents;
(b) that no undue transportation difficulties would arise from the proposed development;
(c) that no undue over-use of community facilities or recreational facilities would occur;
(d) that a need for development of this type exists;
(e) that all other requirements of this Plan have been met.

Highlights of Draft Official Plan for The City of Belleville

SUMMARY REPORT

A. INTRODUCTION

Since early 1972 the Quinte Planning Board has been in the process of preparing a new Official Plan for the City of Belleville. This Plan has now been completed as a Draft Official Plan and is the result of the analysis and synthesis of numerous planning studies, discussions with Quinte Planning Board staff, public meetings, task force reports, and reviews made by the Quinte Planning Board and the Council of the City of Belleville.

This Summary Report does not replace the entire Official Plan for the Belleville Section of the Quinte Planning Area but instead it has attempted to explain the basic policies contained within the Plan that will guide the pattern of development within the City of Belleville.

Schedules A, B, C, D, E and F constitute part of the Official Plan in addition to the text.

B. PURPOSE AND SCOPE OF THE PLAN

The purpose of the Official Plan is to set forth the general policies concerned with the shaping and guiding of the physical growth and arrangement of the Belleville Section of the Quinte Planning Area, in harmony with the social and economic needs in order to obtain the most desirable quality of environment for the present and future inhabitants of the Planning Area.

The scope of this Plan is to establish a general framework within which future growth may be directed. This framework includes the designation of major land use areas, the major roads patterns, a municipal services plan and a density development plan setting out the pattern in which the future growth should take place to provide for the projected population increase.

It is intended that this Plan will be of assistance to both private interests and public administrators in order that:

a. the private interests may understand the future development policies of the Belleville Section of the Quinte Planning Area, and hence, be encouraged to plan their operations accordingly; and

b. the public administrators will benefit by the ability to program future municipal services such as roads, schools, parks, water supply, sanitary sewers, storm drainage, police and fire protection, health services, as well as Belleville's administrative staff requirements. This long-range municipal planning will result in the provision of these municipal services at the most economical level.

This Official Plan establishes, in very general terms, the pattern which development within the Belleville Section of the Quinte Planning Area should follow during the planning period to 1992. In addition, this Official Plan provides a comprehensive legal document to guide and direct future development in a logical and orderly manner and attempts to correct the errors of past development, so as to ensure a healthy growth pattern which will benefit all of the residents of the Planning Area.

C. PLANNING DISTRICTS AND PLANNING UNITS

This Official Plan establishes a system of "Planning Districts" and "Planning Units" for the Belleville Section of the Quinte Planning Area. The system is intended to serve these purposes.

1. To help to identify or create distinct areas of the City with their own centres of interest and other recognizable common characteristics, thereby providing the people with smaller areas than the whole City to which they can relate.

2. To establish a workable basis for more detailed planning and the application of more detailed standards.

The system of Planning Districts and Planning Units adopted in this Plan are set out on Schedule A, "Planning Districts and Planning Units".

The boundaries of the Planning Districts are based on desirable secondary school attendance areas and distinct physical boundaries such as transportation arteries or significant natural features which limit accessibility between Districts. Each Planning District is divided into Planning Units, the boundaries of the Planning Units are based on a combination of desirable public elementary school attendance areas and particular accessibility, as well as transportation arteries and natural features.

Major commercial, industrial and recreational areas, which serve the Planning Area as a whole, have been excluded from the Planning Districts and Planning Units as shown on Schedule A.

A Planning District should contain or have reasonable access to such amenities and services as a community park, a senior elementary school, two or more junior elementary schools, a separate elementary school; a shopping centre or general commercial area, a community or suburbrenal park and two or more local parks and other community facilities such as a community centre library and fire station.

The Planning Unit should contain or have convenient access to such services and amenities as a junior public elementary school, local shopping area, and a local park or suitable local park area combined with a community or sub-regional park.

In the older developed areas of Belleville the requirements of a Planning Unit have not been met; however, should redevelopment or infill take place, every attempt shall be made to meet the above requirements.

D. LAND USE POLICIES

The land use concept of the Belleville Section of the Quinte Planning Area shall be developed in accordance with the land use pattern shown on "Schedule B - Land Use Plan". The Land Use Plan establishes the pattern of development in general terms by dividing the Planning Area Section into six basic land use classifications: Environmental Control, Recreational, Residential, Community Facilities, Commercial and Industrial. Some of the policies governing these land use classifications and subclassification within them, are outlined hereafter.

1. ENVIRONMENTAL CONTROL

Lands designated as Environmental Control are lands having inherent environmental hazards such as streambanks, flood plains, valley slopes, ponds and swamps and shall not be designated are intended primarily for the protection and conservation of the natural environment, particularly along the Moira River Valley and connecting drainage channels. Reference should be made to "Schedule C - Recreation Plan" for the delineation of the Environmental Control areas.

The uses permitted shall be limited to agriculture, nurseries, conservation, public or private parks, golf courses, public boat launching facilities, walking trails or other outdoor recreational activities.

Where any land designated as Environmental Control area is under private ownership, this plan does not intend that this land will necessarily remain designated as such indefinitely, nor shall it be construed as implying that such areas are free and open to the general public, or that such areas will be purchased by the City of Belleville or other public agency. An application for the redesignation of the Environmental Control area, for other purposes, will be given due consideration by the Council of the City of Belleville after taking the account:

1. That the existing environmental hazard(s) and/or inherent physical limitations preclude development;

2. The proposed methods by which the hazard(s) are to be overcome in a manner consistent with accepted engineering techniques and resource management practices;

3. That a full engineering report indicates the hazard(s) will not be transferred to another area;

4. That the entire cost of the proposed remedial works will be borne by the developer;

5. That until such time as it is proven that the hazard(s) can be overcome, no permanent development shall take place on lands designated as environmental control areas.

There is no public obligation however, to either redesignate or purchase any land if there is an existing or potential hazard that would be difficult or costly to overcome.

Where new development is proposed on a site which includes a area designated for Environmental Control because of a physical or environmental hazards, such hazard lands shall not necessarily be acceptable as part of the five percent dedication for parkland provided for in The Planning Act, R.S.O., 1970, and amendments thereto. Such Environmental Control lands dedicated to the municipality under subdivision procedures or site plan agreements shall be conveyed in a satisfactory physical condition; if an open watercourse is involved, the dedication shall provide sufficient area of land for proper maintenance operations to be carried out.

2. RECREATION

The Recreational classification of land shall mean that the predominant land use shall be for public and private outdoor recreation.

The Recreational lands shall be divided into three subclassifications: Local/Neighbourhood, Sub-Regional and Special, and Sub-Regional. Reference should be made to Schedule C which locates the Recreational subclassifications of land use areas within the Planning Area Section.

The Local/Neighbourhood Parks are open spaces primarily located within areas of residential development which tend to serve the user permitted shall be limited to parks and playgrounds that serve, predominantly, the local Planning Unit residents including passive & active recreational activities such as outdoor sports, landscaped open natural open space areas and accessory uses such as parking lots, accessory park buildings or other uses incidental to the Local Recreational uses.

The Community and Special Use Parks are open spaces which, by reason of their location, their unique use or potential for development, tend to serve the entire population of the whole City or to serve a specific purpose. The uses permitted shall be limited to parks and playgrounds that predominantly serve the surrounding Planning District residents, including passive & active recreational activities such as outdoor and indoor sports, open areas, botanical gardens and landscaped or natural open space areas. Accessory uses such as parking lots, change rooms and other uses or facilities incidental to the Community and Special Use Parks shall also be permitted.

The Sub-Regional Parks are open spaces which, by reason of their location, their relation to natural features or functional use, tend to serve a more extensive area than the Planning District or the City of Belleville. The uses permitted shall be limited to parks and playgrounds including active and passive recreational facilities such as golf courses, exhibition grounds, outdoor and indoor sports, botanical and horticultural gardens and landscaped or natural open space areas, directly related uses such as parking lots, change rooms, and other accessory facilities incidental to the Sub-Regional Recreational land uses as may be allowed as long as they exclusively serve the Park function and do not detract from the natural and manmade amenities of the Recreational uses.

The determination of the amount and and location of the three types of parkland shall be based on the following general standards:

	Acres per 1,000 Population
Local/Neighbourhood	2.5
Community and Special	2.5
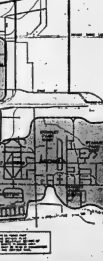
	10.0



Where parkland deficiencies cannot be met in areas that were subtantially developed prior to the approval of this Plan, use of school grounds shall be considered as an alternative lands, in determining the amount of recreational land required for each Planning District. It is recognized, however, that it may not be practical or possible to meet the objectives in all parts of the Planning Area Section; however, consideration shall be given to achieving these objectives in all new developments.

For lands not shown as Recreational on Schedule C and a deficiency exists in the Planning Unit or District, the following criteria shall apply to the acquiring of additional Recreational land.

1. Areas that are best suited because of physical characteristics, ownership, or location shall be retained or acquired for Recreational uses.

2. Where desirable, encouragement should be given to locate new Recreational facilities immediately adjoining school properties so that joint use may be made of these facilities. Recreational areas may be zoned in separate categories in the Implementing Restricted Area By-law.

3. In any comprehensive redevelopment scheme appropriate parks and recreation facilities shall be established.

Any of the park and open space types set out in this Plan may be combined, provided that any conflicts between the recreation needs of different age groups are minimized.

3. RESIDENTIAL

The Residential classification of land shall mean that the predominant use of land so designated shall be for varying densities and types of residential land uses (1) The five Residential subclassifications are: Density 1 Residential, Density 2 Residential, Density 4 Residential and Density 5 Residential. In addition, such non-residential uses as are complementary to and serve the residential area, and, such occupational uses, public and community facilities such as schools, parks and playgrounds, places of worship and existing local commercial uses.

It is intended that overall future housing tenure consist of approximately 53 percent ownership and 47 percent rental housing accommodation. In addition, the overall distribution of multiple housing types shall be approximately 40 percent in horizontal multiple dwellings or townhouses and 60 percent in apartment house.

The maximum number of dwelling units per gross acre for the various densities shall not exceed:

Density 1	6
Density 2	10
Density 3	30
Density 4	45
Density 5	80

(1) Note: For the purpose of this Subsection, "Residential" land uses may refer to any of a broad range of dwelling types from single-family homes to apartment buildings.

Mobile Home Residential uses may be located in any Density 2 Residential area, as shown on Schedule D, as long as the development has a minimum site of ten acres and the density does not exceed nine units per gross acre; it shall be developed in accordance with a site plan.

4. COMMUNITY FACILITIES

The Community Facilities classification of land shall mean that the predominate use of the land in the area so designated shall be for uses which exist for the benefit of the residents of the Planning Area Section, and which are operated by the municipality or other public organization for this purpose.

The uses permitted shall be limited to educational facilities including public, separate and private schools, places of worship, nursing homes, other civic and institutional uses such as hospitals, fire halls, police stations, libraries, museums and similar uses, in addition, municipal and private utilities works such as water purification and sewage treatment works, telephone and gas utility operating facilities, and similar uses shall be permitted uses, provided that adequate precautions shall be taken to ensure that such uses have no adverse effects on adjacent land uses.

5. COMMERCIAL

The Commercial classification of land shall mean that the predominant use of land in the area so designated shall be in accordance with the uses as defined in these subclassifications: Water-Oriented Commercial, Local Commercial, Highway Commercial, Shopping Centre Commercial, Non-Retail Commercial and General Commercial. In addition, such non-commercial uses as are complementary to and serve the respective Commercial use shall also be permitted where defined as such under the Commercial subclassification definitions.

Water-oriented commercial would include such uses as motels, hotels, water-oriented retail sales such as boats, trailers, sails, scuba equipment, etc.

Local commercial shall be limited to those commercial uses which provide for the sale of convenience goods and services to meet the daily living needs of the residents and personal services and may include neighbourhood business and professional offices. The scale of development shall be guided by the population of the Planning Unit at the standard of ½ acre per 1000 persons.

Highway Commercial shall be limited to those retail and service commercial uses which primarily serve vehicular traffic and the travelling public, and which rely heavily upon such traffic for their economic existence. Such uses may include recreational uses, automobile service stations and automobile sales and service agencies, agencies for recreational vehicles, tourist facilities, hotels, motels, drive-in restaurants or other eating establishments and accessory retail uses.

Shopping Centre Commercial shall be limited to those retail and service commercial uses which serve more than one Planning District and customers residing beyond the limits of the Planning Area Section. Such uses may include a broad range of primarily retail stores as well as service shops contained under one roof or connected by an open or closed pedestrian mall, designed to function as a unit with common parking facilities and access points. In addition, business and professional offices may be permitted as long as they do not constitute a predominant use in the shopping centre or have separate and predominant building exteriors.

Non-Retail Commercial shall be limited to bus depot, business and professional offices, government administrative offices, civic centre, and public uses.

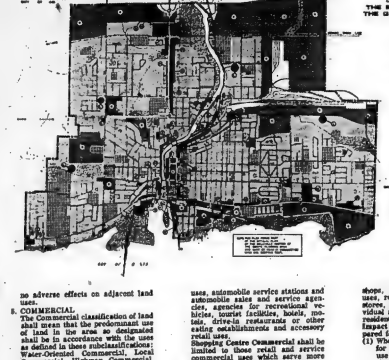
General Commercial shall include those commercial establishments offering goods and services which primarily serve the whole or the municipality's market area and shall include uses as retail commercial establishments, places of entertainment, assembly halls, eating establishments, business or professional offices, undertaking establishments, hotels, motels and motor service shops, community facilities, public uses, recreational uses, convenience stores, wherever in the form of individual stores or under one roof, and residential uses above the first floor. Impact Studies may have to be prepared for the following situations:

(1) Where an area is not designated for the appropriate commercial use or for any commercial use in the Official Plan.
(2) Where an area has been designated for one of the Commercial classifications in the Official Plan but has not been zoned in the Implementing Restricted Area By-law. The impact study shall be prepared prior to the amending of the Restricted Area By-law;
(3) Where the commercial floor space, due to expansion or to the erection of a new building, will be greater than that which is permitted by the Restricted Area By-law.

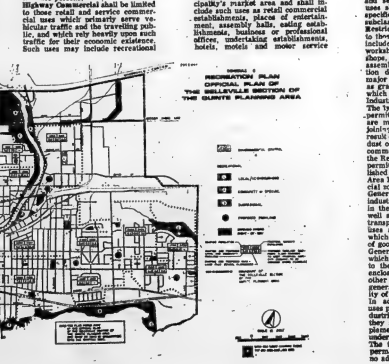
6. INDUSTRIAL

The Industrial classification of land shall mean that the predominant use of the land in the area so designated shall be in accordance with the uses as defined in these subclassifications: Restricted Industrial and General Industrial. In addition, such non-industrial uses as are complementary to and serve the respective Industrial uses shall also be permitted where specified as such under the Industrial subclassification definitions.

Restricted Industrial shall be limited to those industrial uses which do not include open storage and may include workshops, warehousing, service shops, processing, manufacturing and assembling operations. This designation does not allow, however, for major bulk storage operations such as grain elevators, fuel storage, etc., which are included in the General Industrial category.



The type of Restricted Industrial use permitted shall be such that there are minimal adverse effects on adjoining Residential land uses as the result of the emission of noise, smoke, dust or odour. In addition, accessory commercial uses primarily serving the Restricted Industrial area may be permitted but they shall be established in the implementing Restricted Area By-law under separate commercial zone.



General Industrial shall include those industrial uses which are permitted in the Restricted Industrial area as well as construction yards, truck or transportation terminals, railway lines and motor vehicle body shops which may involve bulk open storage of goods or materials.

General Industrial uses are those uses which primarily are offensive, due to the large scale of activities not enclosed in buildings or due to any other characteristics which may be generally detrimental to the amenity of other uses.

In addition, accessory commercial uses primarily serving the General Industrial area may be permitted but they shall be established in the implementing Restricted Area By-law under separate commercial zones.

The type of General Industrial use permitted shall be such that there is no adverse effects on adjoining Residential land uses, as the result of the emission of noise, smoke dust or odour.

E. EXISTING LAND USES

Any land use existing at the date of approval of this Plan that does not conform with the land use designations as shown on Schedule "B" and Schedule "C" or the policies related thereto, as a general rule, should cease to exist. In special instances, however, it may be desirable to permit the extension or enlargement of such a non-conforming use in order to avoid unnecessary hardship. It is the intention of this Plan that any such extension or enlargement shall be processed under the authority of Section 35 (21) or Section 42 (1) of The Planning Act, R.S.O., 1970, as amended.

1. SECTION 35(21) OF THE PLANNING ACT

This Section applies to any application for the enlargement or extension of an existing land use which is neither designated in the Official Plan nor zoned as a permitted use in the implementing Restricted Area By-law (hereinafter call non-conforming uses).

Any application, in accordance with Section 35(21) of The Planning Act, for the extension or enlargement of a use, which is not permitted by the implementing Restricted Area By-law and which existed at the date of passing of such By-law, shall be dealt with in the following manner:

1. Possible Acquisition

The Quinte Planning Board and the Council of the City of Belleville, as the case may be, shall evaluate the possibility and feasibility of acquiring the property concerned either at the time of application or in the future, and of holding, selling, leasing or redeveloping the property in accordance with the provisions of The Planning Act. At the same time, consideration shall be given to the possibility of re-locating the use under consideration to a designated and zoned area where it would be able to function under improved conditions in accordance with the policies of this Official Plan.

2. Amending By-law

If, after investigation, municipal acquisition of the property does not appear to be feasible, and the special merits of the individual case deem it desirable to grant permission for the extension or enlargement of the non-conforming use, Council may consider the passing of an amendment to the Restricted Area By-law, pursuant to Section 35(21) of The Planning Act. Such a By-law may be passed without amending the Official Plan, providing it complies with the policies of subsection (3) as set out below:

3. Planning Board and Council Consideration

Prior to making any decision on the application, the Council will refer such application to the Planning Board for a report on the various aspects of the matter for the information of Council. The Council will, before passing such an amending By-law shall be satisfied that those of the following requirements which are relevant to the specific application for the extension or enlargement of the use area, or will be, fulfilled in order to safeguard the wider interests of the general public:

(a) That the proposed extension or enlargement of the established non-conforming use shall not unduly aggravate the situation created by the existence of the use, especially in regard to the policies of the Official Plan and the requirements of the implementing Restricted Area By-law applying to the area;

(b) That the proposed extension or enlargement shall be in an appropriate proportion to the size of the existing use established prior to the date of passing of the implementing Restricted Area By-law;

(c) That if such applicant's necessitates a change in the boundaries of the Official Plan land designations on the Land Use Plan, such extension or enlargement will only be processed under these policies, if the boundary change can be considered as a "minor adjustment" permitted under the flexibility clause of the Official Plan without the need for an amendment. Any major variances will require an amendment to the Official Plan;

(d) That the characteristics of the existing use and the proposed extension or enlargement shall be examined with regard to noise, vibration, fumes, smoke, dust, odors, lighting and traffic-generating capacity. If one or more of the above nuisance factors will be created or increased so as to add essentially to the incompatibility of the use with the surrounding area, then no amendment to the implementing Restricted Area By-law shall be made;

(e) That the neighbouring conforming uses will be protected by the provision of areas for landscaping, buffering or screening, appropriate setbacks for buildings and structures, devices and measures to reduce nuisances and, where necessary, by regulations for alleviating adverse effects caused by outside storage, lighting, advertising signs, etc. The above measures shall be applied to the proposed extension or enlargement and, wherever feasible, also be applied to the established use in order to improve its compatibility with the surrounding area;

(f) That traffic generation and parking conditions in the vicinity will not be adversely affected by the application and that adequate facilities will be kept to a minimum by appropriately designed ingress and egress points to and from the site, and improvements of sight conditions, especially in proximity to intersections, so as to provide maximum safety for pedestrians and vehicular traffic;

(g) That adequate provisions have been, or will be made for offstreet parking, loading and unloading facilities;

(h) That applicable municipal services such as storm drains, water supply, sanitary sewers, and roads, etc. are available or may be made available.

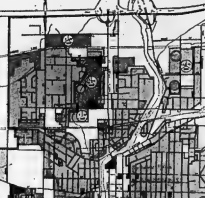
4. Notification of Ratepayers

It shall be the policy of the City of Belleville to notify all property owners in the area affected of each application for the extension or enlargement of a non-conforming use, prior to a final decision on the matter, in order to obtain their views and to satisfy the requirements of Section 12 of The Planning Act, R.S.O., 1970, as amended.

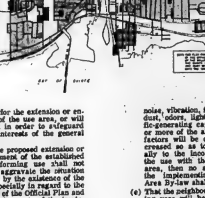
5. Council will not pass an amendment to the implementing Restricted Area By-law, pursuant to Section 35(21) of The Planning Act, before it is satisfied in regard to the policies contained in the preceding subsection (3).

2 SECTION 42 OF THE PLANNING ACT

Section 2 of the Planning Act, concerns applications to the Committee of Adjustment. The Committee, provided the general intent and purpose of the Official Plan and implementing By-law are maintained, may authorize minor variances or exemptions, extensions and changes in use from the provisions of the implementing Restricted Area By-law.



F. TRANSPORTATION



The Transportation Plan is based on the inter-relationship of land use designations and transportation requirements. The road network is based on and designed to facilitate the satisfactory movement of both people and goods to and from various land use areas within the Planning Area, as well as to facilitate through-traffic movement. The overall road pattern shall be in harmony with the proposed road pattern of the adjoining municipalities, the County Road System and the Provincial Highway system.

A fun tional classification of the road and street network within the Planning Area has been both existing and proposed, is described on Schedule E, according to their predominant function. Where additional land is required for widenings, intersections and intersection improvements, such land shall be obtained, wherever possible, in the course of approving plans of subdivision under the authority of The Planning Act or by conditions attached to individual consents.

1. ARTERIAL ROADS

i) Arterial roads are existing and proposed roads which are to 4 traffic lanes. These roads will have, where possible a minimum right-of-way width of 36 feet for 2 lanes and 100 feet for 4 lanes, which are designed to facilitate the inter-municipal and through-movement of high volumes of traffic to and from major traffic-generating sectors in the Planning Area Section. Direct access to abutting properties should be restricted unless it is absolutely necessary to

You're a psychologist, teacher, cook, cleaner and financial expert all in one.

And you're overlooking the one food that could help you most.

Most Canadian women stop drinking milk regularly. Yet milk is Nature's most nearly perfect food. More than any other, it can help give you the strength and stamina you need for every demanding day.

Milk.
No other single food can match its nutritional value.

It is such an important food, in fact, that without its help it would be difficult to be properly nourished at all!

Here are seven nutrients, all basic factors in the maintenance of health, and all of which milk provides.

Calcium. Yes, you need it. Although you've stopped growing, your bones are constantly being rebuilt and repaired. Calcium is hard at work here. And milk is an excellent dietary source of it.

Riboflavin. Milk is a very practical way to get your supply of this B Vitamin, which is a factor in keeping you healthy and feeling well.

Protein. Everybody knows how important protein is. Not everybody knows that milk is an excellent, and economical, source of protein!

Vitamin A. This Vitamin is found in whole milk (which is, in fact, an excellent source of it). It is lacking in skim milk, so if you use only skim, be sure to get Vitamin A from another food source.

Phosphorus. Another mineral of which milk is an excellent source...and which is required by adults as well as by children.

Vitamin D, sometimes called "the sunshine vitamin," is usually added to milk in Ontario. If it is added, the carton will say so.

Thiamine, another factor in the maintenance of your good health. Milk is a good dietary source of this vitamin.

No less than seven basic nutrients are yours in every glass of milk you drink! And by the way, drinking milk by the glass is the easiest and best way to take out milk "health insurance." Every day, day, we don't practice what we preach.

Many of us, hurrying to get other things done, eat meals that do not give us adequate iron, calcium, and vitamins.

And milk, which could supply so many of the nutrients we lack? Well, somewhere along the road to growing up, we stopped drinking it regularly, too.

The result just has to be that we are functioning at less than peak level. Lacking the stamina and vitality to get through the day with bounce to spare. Getting tired too easily. Not enjoying our lives as much as we might.

Because, no matter how careful we are to get proper rest and exercise, we cannot hope to have good health without good nutrition.

And milk is one of the great cornerstones of good nutrition. It is more complete nutritionally than anyother single food (in fact, the only two major nutrients not well supplied by milk are iron and vitamin C).

This is why milk can be so important to you as an adult and a woman. And why you should get back into the habit of drinking milk every day. Just the way you did when you were a child.

Is milk too fattening for an adult?

If you are trying to control your weight, you may think it best not to drink milk.

And that's just where you're wrong. In a weight-control programme, it is vital to know, not just how many calories you consume, but how much nutrition you get for those calories.

Here's where milk comes into its own. It is an outstanding example of a food that delivers a high nutrient content for its calorie quotient.

And milk is probably much lower in fat content than you realize. For instance, whole milk has a fat content of only about 3½%. And skim milk has virtually none at all.

So, whether you are dieting or not, be sure to make a place in your day's food for milk.

It is a food that is just too valuable to pass up.

Milk and vitality: they go together.

Milk is indeed unique as a balanced source of many of our dietary needs. So much so, that there is really no adequate food-substitute for it.

Yet, for all its great nutritional value, it is readily available, relatively cheap, and so easy to use.

The habit of drinking milk daily, continued throughout adult life, is one that can pay off—in increased stamina and the lovely feeling that can come with being in good health.

And these, in turn, pay off by helping you enjoy your life to the full.

Now you know why nobody ever outgrows the need for milk.

And that, most definitely, includes you.

Good nutrition.
It's as easy as 1, 2, 3, 4.

Good as it is, of course, milk alone is not enough. Proper nutrition means choosing a variety of the right foods.

The "four groups" system makes it easy. (Easy to remember, too.)

The groups are listed below. Include foods from each of them in your daily meal-plan and you're pretty sure to get well-rounded nutrition.

1. The Meat Group, which includes eggs, fish or poultry. You should include a food from this group at least once a day.

2. The Cereals Group, which in addition to cereals includes bread and other products made with flour.

3. The Fruit and Vegetables Group. Try to include two servings of fruit (one a citrus type such as orange) plus a green and a yellow vegetable each day.

4. The Milk Group, which includes cheese and other dairy products. Milk is such an important food element that it gets a whole group to itself!

Eat from these four food groups every day, get enough sleep, work in some fresh air and exercise every chance you get.

And you'll be on your way to the beautiful feeling of being at your very best.

Fact:
Canadian women don't eat properly.

A recently completed survey of our national eating habits has identified women and teenaged girls as the worst-fed people in Canada.

Although we women are so diligent in getting our children, and even our husbands, to eat well and drink milk every

PICTON — The annual meeting of the Prince Edward County Museum Association was held Friday evening at the PEC Museum, with guest speaker Robert Inglis, of Upper Canada Village, also Provincial President of Museums.

Mr. Inglis aided the local association with the reviewing of the present constitution and suggestions for amendments.

After a short presentation by representative from the five county museums, Mr. Inglis reported on the annual meeting, held in October, with the Minister of colleges and Universities, the Ontario Museum Association and the Ontario Historical Society.

Mr. Inglis said it was concluded at this meeting that a committee be formed to advise the government of the museums needs and review the situations of the museums with the government. He also discussed the grant system with the local members of the association.

Recently added to the County Museum, was an adjoining property where one of the first houses in the area is still standing. The home is to be renovated and in the future presented in its original form as part of the museum property.

Purse Snatched

PICTON — Police in this community are investigating their first reported case of purse snatching in some time.

Parking Law Enforced

TWEED (Special) — Tweed's Police Chief, Robert Gagne, has advised local motorists that the two-hour parking limit on Victoria and Spring Streets is being strictly enforced. Businessmen and their employees are being asked to park on other streets to leave spaces for shoppers.

Home for Repairs

Al DeMille was one of a number of ice fishermen left to the task of repairing huts blown and scattered by high winds this weekend. Mr DeMille said numerous soft spots and holes in the ice, and open water along shorelines has made ice fishing treacherous. Fishing is poor and Mr. DeMille looks to February for better luck.

Wind Uproots Ice Huts

TRENTON — Ice fishing shanties were tossed on their sides or blown across the windswept ice of the Bay of Quinte this weekend with snowmobile-riding fishermen in pursuit.

So far it hasn't been good ice fishing season, according to the few enthusiasts on the ice this weekend.

The combination of spring-like temperatures during the past few days, softening the ice, and strong winds Sunday uprooted a number of the dozen or so huts clustered near the Trent River mouth.

"Unless the huts are anchored through the fishing hole, they could blow all the way up and down the bay," said Al DeMille.

There's rumor of one man landing a 10 pounder but over-all its been a poor season.

Take 2

The mouth waters — generally good for pike and pickerel — have yielded little for area fishermen who have had to settle for the occasional perch.

The ice is becoming treacherous, developing holes and soft spots, causing many of the huts to be dragged ashore by cautious owners.

Along the shoreline, open water further adds to the problems.

The season isn't over yet. The best months are said to be December and February with January for some unexplained reason a bad fish month.

A shanty — depending on particular tastes — can be knocked together in three days for about $30 — stove included.

Woman Hurt

BRIGHTON — A Brighton woman was taken to Trenton Memorial Hospital Saturday after losing control of her car on Highway 30, north of here.

Minerva Farrow, 32, of Ontario Sreet, was negotiating a curve on the icy roadway when her car slid into the guard rails and down a 10-foot embankment.

According to the Ontario Provincial Police report, damages are estimated at $1,000 to her car which came to rest against a tree.

She sustained a broken collarbone in the incident.

Bush Trails Mostly Slush

The recent mild weather has resulted in a Ministry of Natural Resources warning to stay off snowmobile trails.

Bon Echo Lake especially is unsafe with open spots of water. Stream levels and lake levels are all high, the ministry advises.

Snow levels are: Tweed, 12 inches of snow on the ground; Plevna, 15 inches; White Lake, 12.8 inches and Bon Echo, 17 inches.

The snow in those places will carry the weight of a concord with heavy slush and covered with heavy slush and there are open spots of water at the edges of some lakes.

"You can do it for less than that if you don't have to pay for the plywood," said Mr. DeMille, one of the snowmobilers to spend Sunday chasing his capsized hut.

Driver Charged

TWEED (Special) — A 24-year-old Marmora area man has been charged with careless driving and failing to report an accident following a Saturday night mishap on Highway 14 south of Marmora.

Provincial police said Joseph Albert Campion, RR 2 Marmora, was northbound when about 1.5 miles south of Marmora his car went out of control, went into the ditch and sliced off a hydro pole.

Damage to the car amounted to approximately $700. Mr. Campion, travelling alone in his car, was uninjured.

Wellington Dam Blasted

WELLINGTON—A dam constructed in a channel between Lake Ontario and West Lake was dynamited this morning to curb dangerous high water conditions.

A Wellington village resident and commercial fisherman, Bert Tuttle, said today that recent heavy rains coupled with runoff have raised West Lake to the danger level.

The dam, built by fisherman in December, usually is open each February.

Mr. Tuttle, who lives on the Wellington lakeshore, noted that water now is lying about 2 inches from his shop door.

Village councillor, William Greer, said the dam is constructed to prevent the channel from filling with sand. The dam provides "a good head of water" over the winter months and in the spring clears the channel.

He said that dredging is unsuccessful in removing the sand.

The councillor noted that fishermen are interested in construction of the dam as they must be able to get their boats in and out.

Cottage owner have complained against the dam in the past, claiming that some of their land is destroyed when the water wises.

Some said that they had lost one or two yards of property each year because of the ice pushing and heaving against the shore.

Mr. Geer doubted the value of dynamiting the dam and predicted that the channel would block itself again by the summer.

He said that the blasting would mark the end of ice fishing for the season as the lake would not be safe from now on.

Wellington residents Cecil Insley and Carl McFaul, were expecting to blast the dam early today. It is predicted that the water level in West Lake will drop appoximately two feet.

Ice fishermen, snowmobilers, and other persons are warned to stay off the ice because of hazardous conditions.

Shirley Dixon's Oven Cooked Dinner is a time and effort saver for working women. It's popular with son Doug, who is 15, and husband Jack. Mrs. Dixon, who works for the accounting department of the Hastings Country Board of Education, says the meal will serve four to six persons. The Albert Street family spends spare-time collecting and refinishing antiques.

Oven-cooked Dinner

Sunset Casserole

1½ lb. filet of cod
2 tbsp. fat
1½ cups sliced onion
one can tomato soup
¼ cup water

Saute onions in fat until pale yellow. Cut cod into serving pieces and place in a casserole. Pour onions on top. Dilute soup and pour over. Bake at 350 for 30 minutes.

Potato Puffs

Boil 3 cups of cut-up potatoes until tender. Mash. Separate three eggs. Beat the whites until stiff. Fold the yolks into the mashed potatoes with two tbsp. parsley, salt and pepper and ¼ tsp. minced onion.

Fold in egg whites. Divide into 12 muffin cups and bake at 350 degrees until browned. (About 15 minutes.)

Corn Casserole

Combine 12 oz. can kernel corn, minced onion and salt and pepper to taste, and ¼ cup bread or cracker crumbs. Add enough milk to moisten well. Pour into casserole and bake 30 to 45 minutes at 350.

Vaccination Program in Schools

Nursing teams are once again moving through county schools, vaccinating children against smallpox.

The program of vaccination, established for several years, is now scheduled by computers which record previous vaccinations.

"boosters"

Dr. C.H. Lenk, Medical Officer of Health for Prince Edward and Hastings Counties, says the public health position on smallpox vaccination is that the most suitable age for a first vaccination is from 12 to 24 months.

After that, the children receive a "booster" every five years.

"There was considerable discussion among scientists of different countries on the continuation of automatic vaccination. Opinions have been divided. Some persons advocate vaccination, some are against it and some are strongly against it."

Dr. Lenk says that persons who are against automatic vaccination believe that the complications of vaccinations are more severe than the illness itself. In other words, in some countries there are more deaths from complications of vaccination than of smallpox.

"Of course these complications are quite unusual," he stressed.

In countries with frequent incidences of small pox, he says, vaccination is obligatory.

"We in this province continue to vaccinate . . . with parents' permission . . . because the ministry of health believes that the number of smallpox cases here is nil because we vaccinate," Dr. Lenk says.

"Should we stop and then get a case, it could spread like lightening."

Recently a small outbreak of the disease in England "reminded us of constant danger," he says.

The province decided to continue vaccination "even considering those dangers" (of complications).

Dr. Lenk says complications are limited by thoroughly screening vaccination candidates.

Children who might not be vaccinated include those with any skin allergy, those with unvaccinated children at home, those who have any chronic illness.

"We substitute perhaps too-thorough screening for complete abandonment."

If a child has not received any vaccination when she reaches school age, a vaccination is given with parents' permission, a small history is taken and the child is automatically scheduled by computer for a booster in five years.

However, Dr. Lenk believes that the optimum effect and optimum avoidance of complications occurs if the vaccination is administered in the second year of life.

Besides the program carried out through the public health unit, smallpox vaccinations for young children are fairly standard in Belleville.

Of a dozen physicians checked in a random survey, nine said they vaccinated as a matter of course. Some added "at the moment," indicating that the "public health people keep changing their minds." The balance either give the parent a choice or simply don't vaccinate as a matter of course.

Ann Landers

You Don't Need to Walk To Be a Perfect Wife

Dear Ann Landers: If anyone can wake up the men in this world, it's you. Please try. I and thousands more like me are desperate.

I am a single woman in my early 30s, longing for male companionship. I've had exactly three dates in my life. That's not a record I'm proud of, but those are the facts. I'm average-looking, five-foot-one and weigh 119 pounds. The problem is that I am in a wheelchair.

I had polio when I was a child but I've gone through college and now have a very good position with an insurance company. I've never met a person I couldn't get along with. Some people just require more patience than others. I have many male friends—and that's the problem. They are just friends.

Why can't the men I meet understand that just because I'm in a wheelchair I am no less a woman? I have the same feelings, hopes and dreams of other women, and a great capacity to love. I'm not speaking only for myself, Ann. There are thousands of us, just waiting for the chance to be wonderful sweethearts and wives. We can do almost everything other girls can do. We just can't walk. Is all. Please, Ann, print this letter and ask them to give us a chance.—Unfulfilled

Dear Friend: I know some marvelously complete wives in wheelchairs. One is Mrs. Cyrus Eaton in Ohio and one other is Mrs John Burns, the wife of the Governor of Hawaii.

Beatrice Burns is an active and energetic woman. She entertains beautifully and presides over one of the busiest and most elegant mansions in the world. Mrs. Burns has represented her husband and his state when he was unable to be present, and she has done it effectively. Both Anne Eaton and Beatrice Burns have proven that a wife in a wheelchair can run rings around many wives with two perfectly good legs.

Dear Ann Landers: The Philadelphia Inquirer's head on your column read, "Moses Led People To A Land With Oil."

Your reader asked, "Which are smarter, Jews or Gentiles?" I found your reply not only sarcastic, but bigoted. What's more, you didn't answer the question. You said, "A surprisingly disproportionate number of Jews have won Nobel prizes and they are prominent on the lists of achievers in the arts and sciences." Why is it "surprising"? Jews, for centuries, have been the most achieving achievers in the world.

A better answer would have been: "Neither. Jews are not smarter, but they have higher goals. And they know how to face adversity and overcome it because they have had generations of experience. Jews place stronger emphasis on education. History is thy witness."—Proud To Be Jewish

Dear Proud: I'm sorry you thought my reply was "sarcastic and bigoted." Sarcastic, perhaps, but bigoted, never!

If you will go back and reread my answer you'll find that I made precisely the same points that you made in your letter. Moreover, documentation is available to support my facts.

The enrollment in two of the finest (and most difficult to get into) schools in the United States, Harvard and Yale, is at least 30 per cent Jewish. When one considers that Jews constitute less than five per cent of this country's population, that is quite an impressive figure. Incidentally, I, too, am Proud To Be Jewish.

Underhanded Aunt Takes Over Policy

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: A few days after my father died our mother heard from our father's sister (in Scotland) that their brother had insured each of it's children at birth, and when she died, each beneficiary paid up and collected.

All but my father. It seems this aunt got Dad's policy, finished paying it herself, and said nothing. She now feels she is entitled to collect the insurance and is asking for Dad's death certificate.

Has she a legal right to this policy? We would like to know whether the proceeds could be claimed for my mother, who is quite short of money.

My aunt says the policy is only worth 30 pounds! She ignored Mom's asking for the name of the insurance company.

Smelling a Rat.

Dear Smelling: I smell a rat too, but if your aunt has been paying premiums on the policy for a long time, there might be some way she could make a claim on the proceeds.

Don't send the death certificate. Write to the other aunts and uncles and find out more details, the name of the insurance company, the amount of premiums and proceeds. And if you want to be sticky about it, tell your aunt the death certificate is forthcoming until you have been in touch with the insurance company yourselves.

Dear Doris: Regarding the song "Singlet For Cecil", I am sending the lines I remember. I feel sure there are more verses but I can't remember them. The comedians used to sing the song in England in the late thirties. I have a good idea of the tune but am unable to put it on paper.

Bless You

Dear Bless Me! Thank you for your six lines. I can imagine that the comedians had a great time with it - and maybe someone else from the Old Country can supply more verses - and the tune too.

Five Sisters Die in Fire At Brantford

Five sisters who were burned to death in Brantford, Ont., Saturday were among at least 28 persons killed in accidents across Canada during the weekend.

Twelve persons died in traffic, six in fires, four in snowmobile accidents, three by carbon-monoxide poisoning and two by drowning.

Ontario and Quebec headed the list with nine accidental deaths in each province, a Canadian Press survey from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Sunday night local times showed.

In addition to the five who died in the fire, Ontario also reported two dead in traffic, one in a snowmobile accident and another by drowning. The sisters who died in the log-house fire on the Six Nations Indian reserve were twins Jacqueline and Geraldine, 7, Dorothy, 13, Brenda, 14, and 17-year-old Jennie Harris.

Pleads Guilty

WASHINGTON (AP) — The former scheduling director of President Nixon's re-election committee pleaded guilty today to a charge of lying to the FBI about the Watergate break-in.

Herbert Porter, 35, of Laguna Niguel, Calif., was released on personal recognizance pending completion of a pre-sentence report.

Back President

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — A dispute over biblical interpretation, which led to the suspension of a seminary president, is stirring controversy in the three-million-member Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

Nearly all the faculty and more than half the students at Concordia Seminary here have boycotted classes for a week to protest the suspension of Rev. Dr. John Tietjen. More than 250 of the 420 seminary students fanned out across the United States to defend him.

Contract Let

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Hydro today announced it has awarded a $24 million contract to C. A. Pitts Ltd. of Toronto for construction of a power dam on the Madawaska River, a project that has come under fire in the legislature by opposition members.

It was the second contract awarded Pitts for the $78 million project, begun last spring to produce a generating plant with a capacity of 78,000 kilowatts.

Reinforced

WASHINGTON (AP) — Henry Kissinger predicted a year ago that North Vietnam's army in South Vietnam would wither away because the cease-fire agreement he had just negotiated barred reinforcements.

But United States intelligence says infiltration from the North never stopped and estimates that Hanoi's army in the South numbers at least 55,000 men more now than it did then.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE with Major Hoople

Few Signs Seen Of Cheaper Food

OTTAWA (CP) — The agriculture department's 1974 outlook for the farm industry contains few indications of consumer relief from rising food prices.

The department, in its 282-page forecast to the annual agriculture outlook conference today, sees continued strong prices for most commodities.

Wheat prices will remain high, and beef prices, although they will vary, will be close to the high 1973 levels, it said.

Prices for hogs during the first half of 1974 are expected to be above 1973 levels, but might fall in the second half.

The outlook does not predict consumer prices, but anticipates supply, demand and prices to farmers—factors which bear directly on what the consumer pays.

The department forecasts that wheat stocks held by major exporters will be decreased further this year. This is despite record world wheat production and lower exports during the first part of the 1973-74 crop year.

Canada's exports might approach 500 million bushels, compared with 577 million bushels in 1972-73.

The department warned that transportation problems, internal and possibly external, might prevent realization of that export figure.

It predicted that Canadian wheat production might be increased by as much as three million acres this year to 28 million acres. Many other countries would try to do the same and a large world production of wheat and rice might lead to some weakening of prices.

World demand for feed grains would remain strong and so would prices—at least until new crop supplies were in sight.

"More uncertainties with (feed grain) price implications for the coming months are in evidence than usual, including the possible impact from the energy crisis and possibilities of further changes in values of world currencies."

The outlook said prices of oilseeds, oils and meals are expected to ease moderately between now and the end of the crop year this summer. This would be the result of an anticipated large increase in world oilseed production.

However, average prices received by farmers likely would be higher during 1973-74 than during the previous year.

Farmers were told that in view of expected low levels of Canadian oilseed stocks, production could be increased without building an excessive stockpile.

Rapeseed exports likely would be reduced to about 42 million bushels and the average farm price for this crop likely would exceed last year's estimated price of $3.28 a bushel.

The department said the supply-price outlook for beef remains in an atmosphere of considerable uncertainty.

"Continued expansion of Canada's beef breeding herd in recent years is expected to result in increased beef output in 1974. Prices may vary through the year, but could average close to 1973 levels."

Cattle feeders, and feedlot operators in particular, were told they may continue in a relatively unfavorable profit position, at least for the first part of the year.

A continued downward trend was predicted for veal slaughter, but prices would remain strong.

Lower outlook also was forecast for the pork industry during the first half of 1974. Hog prices in the first half were expected to average above year-earlier levels, but fall in the second half.

Took Dare

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto man was in fair condition in hospital with a bullet wound in his chest, the day after daring another man to shoot him.

Police said Stuart Alexander, 25, and another man were discussing firearms when Mr. Alexander loosed a shot to his companion and dared him to take a shot at him.

The other man did.

Brian Thomas Hilfrely, 22, of Toronto was charged with dangerous use of a firearm.

Standard Oil Latest To Report Profit Up

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Standard Oil Co. of Ohio announced Today a 35.5 million increase in net income for the final quarter of 1973 but a $31.9 come for 1973 increased 55 per cent over that of the previous year.

The company said its net income for 1973 increased 55 per cent over that of the previous year.

Sohio's net income for 1973 was $59.4 million, compared with $27.5 million in 1972. The company said its net income was $11.4 million in the final 1973 quarter, compared with $17.1 million in 1972.

The oil firm reported 1973 earnings were $2.43 a share, compared with $1.57 in 1972. Per-share earnings in the fourth quarter for 1973 were 31 cents, compared with 70 cents in 1972.

Mobil Oil Co. said Friday that its profits rose 47 per cent last year. Exxon Corp., the largest U.S. oil company, announced earlier in the week that it had a 56-per-cent increase in profits in 1973.

Cities Service and Union Oil of California have reported profit gains of close to 50 per cent, and Texaco has said its profits were 45 per cent higher.

Sohio's lower earnings in the final quarter were attributed to increased costs not recovered in petroleum product prices because of Cost of Living Council rules, the company said.

Crosby Home

BURLINGAME, Calif. (AP) — Singer Bing Crosby is the latest home - from - hospital Sunday, nearly a month after he was admitted with a rare lung ailment that required surgery. The crooner and former movie star underwent at 3½ hour operation Jan. 13 in which surgeons removed two-fifth of his badly abcessed left lung.

U.S. Dollar Goes Down

LONDON (AP) — The United States dollar slumped on European exchanges today, apparently in reaction to heavy demand for the U.S. currency last week.

The London stock market, meanwhile, was hit by a wave of selling that sent prices sharply under the influence of the threat of a new world-wide coal strike that might cut the industrial work week to two days a week from three. A one-day wildcat strike on the state-owned rail system also added to investor gloom.

The price of gold moved up $1.50 to $141.50 an ounce in Zurich but declined by $1.85 to $139.75 in London.

Twin Defeats Halt Advance

By DOUG WALSH
Sports Editor

Belleville Eagles didn't gain any ground in their struggle to overhaul fourth place Brantford Foresters in Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League play on the weekend.

But on the other hand, they didn't lose any either.

Eagles dropped both their weekend starts, losing 7-5 to first place Barrie Flyers here Sunday night after absorbing a 16-4 setback in Orillia, Saturday.

Brantford lost its only start, 3-1 to Orillia, Friday, to remain six points in front of the Eagles in the standings (22-16).

Eagles are idle until Sunday when they play host to Foresters at Memorial Arena.

Eight of the game's 12 goals were scored in the third period here last night as Barrie retained its four-point lead at the top of the standings.

After Charlie Convery shot Eagles in front on a powerplay thrust early in the period, Flyers bounced back to lead 2-1 heading for the second and counted the only goal of the middle 20 minutes.

Then the pace came thick and fast in the final period. Ralph Plane scored a goal but after grew one shrunk as a result of the onslaught.

Twice, the visitors were found guilty of using illegal sticks. The first time, the resulting shortage of manpower cost them Convery's goal. He was the first in a three-goal effort by the Belleville team captain.

Before the first period ended, Flyers counted goals by Doug Acomb and Brian Curtis to take a lead they never surrendered. Bob Baird's second period goal made it 3-1 and set the stage for the even split of the eight goal outburst in the third.

Eagles seemed reluctant to cut loose with shots in the Barrie zone, in the first 40 minutes. They preferred to s hes'rte and it was fatal. Flyers' defence wasn't about to allow any pretty passing plays in their end of the rink.

When the Belleville shooters did start blasting away, Flyers were able to neutralize the firepower with a scoring surge of their own.

Defenceman Dave Nicholishen sparked Flyers' third period offensive with a pair of goals. Paul Reagan and Corky Adams had the others.

Convery completed his hattrick for Eagles while Wayne Weiler and George Godson added singles. Lorne O'Donnell had a big night in the playmaking department. He was in on all but one of the losers' scoring plays.

Flyers drew three of the five minors handed out. Nicholishen and Belleville's Ralph Plane received a facegaard to protect the face injury he picked up last week) trailed punches in the first period and each received a five-minute sentence.

Barrie held a 44-40 edge in shots on goal. Belleville goalie Earl Baggnell let the step up all but one of 19 shots Flyers fired in the second period. Ernie Miller was in goal for the winners.

According to a team spokesman, Eagles had more than the Orillia Terriers to contend with Saturday night.

Exhaust fumes found their way into the bus on the trip up and it certainly did not have a beneficial effect on players,' commented club general-manager Jim Gibbons Jr. rswes.

Jim O'Brien had five Orillia goals. Danny Lutes, Grant Moore and Kurt Sutherland each had two while singles went to Tom Polanic, Dave McCullagh, Henry Mostelli, Garrie Vaughan and Bob Munro.

Weller continued his scoring ways for Eagles, matching the two-goal effort of teammate Godson.

Give LaGroix an Inch And He'll Take Title

MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

The Quinte Curling Club closed out the 12th Annual Bay of Quinte Mixed Bonspiel yesterday, with as much excitement and anticipation as when it had opened the event.

Of the 48 rinks entered in the four-day bonspiel, only three were from outside the bonspiel's geographic area. One was from Ottawa and two were from Napanee.

Four championships were to be won at the beginning of the event and of those four, one went to each of the non-local rinks.

Probably the most exciting curling that took place in the bonspiel was ironically, in the final match, the Grand Championship.

The final competition was an 11' ender between Belleville's Earl Cousins' rink and Ottawa's Carl LaGroix.

Cousins had the misfortune of losing the championship, not by lack of skill or effort, but by a mere inch.

The two rinks were tied at 5-5 at the end of the regular 10 ends and therefore an extra end was called for to decide the grand winners.

On the final shot of the 11th end, Lorne Cousins, skip, needed to knock a Cousins' rock out of the house to keep the score tied at 6-6. With a little luck and a lot of skill, Cousins did just that, knocked out the Cousins' stone, but also managed to keep his rock close enough to the centre to give them an advantage of 7-5.

Cousins then took up the task of having to remove LaGroix's last rock from centre. The take out was not an easy one by any means. Cousins had to thread the needle between two closely spaced rocks before reaching his objective. The local curler sent his stone between the two rocks, but in doing so missed on the take out by a heartbreaking half an inch. If the Ottawa rock had been knocked out and Cousins stone had stayed in, then the local rink would have won the Grand Championship 6-5.

LaGroix is from Ottawa, but the other members of his champion rink are from the local area. Jessi Baker, vice-skip, and Marie Bell, lead, are both from the Quinte Curling Club and Butch Sjostram, second, is from CFB Trenton.

Cousins Quinte Curling Club (QCC) rink consisted of his wife, Margo, as vice-skip and Vern and Gloria Goodwin at second and lead, respectively.

Three other championships were decided.

The second event championship, won went through the event with only one loss in the first round, were a rink from CFB Trenton. Ron Meclam skipped that crew, with Grace Green at vice, Ed Hyatt at second and Penny Schwager, lead.

Runners-up for the second championship, were QCC's Frank Morrell, skip, Betty Parsons, vice, Paul Henderson, second, and Mac Gathcart, lead.

Third event winners were Napanee's Neil Lambert, skip, Sally Lambert, vice, Ron Heaney, second and Sheila Heaney, lead. The champs in this category were defeated as such if they had lost not more than the first two consecutive matches.

Joe MacKay skipped the losing rink in the fifth event final with Ena Corke as vice, and Bryce and Brenda Morrison as second and lead, respectively. The rink works out of QCC.

The fourth championship, for rinks with three non-successive losses, was won by the other Napanee entrant, Glenn Lasher, skip, his wife Mary, vice, and Stu Gilbert, second, and his wife Effie, lead, comprised the winners of the fourth event.

Runners-up in the last championship were a rink skipped and vioed by Bill and Marlene Henderson with Golda and Harry Livingston at second and lead, respectively.

Yankees, Bearcats Get Wins

Rick Rosebush, Ralph Bailey and Bob Doyle were in the scoring spotlight Sunday, when they had finished their goal scoring binge, Yankees had a 7-4 Norwood, Sunday. When they had finished their goal scoring binge, Yankees had a 7-4 Norwood Electric Hockey League win over Rebels.

Rosebush fired three goals while Bailey and Doyle each shot a pair. Tom MacDonald helped himself to three assists.

Terry Casselman was the top producer for Rebels, hitting for two goals. Singles went to Edgar Eley and Phil Haywood.

In the second game of the twin bill, Bearcats turned back Legion, skip, his wife Mary, vice, and Stu Gilbert, second, and his wife Effie, lead, comprised the winners of the fourth event.

Runners-up in the last championship were a rink skipped and vioed by Bill and Marlene Henderson with Golda and Harry Livingston at second and lead, respectively.

Trap and Gun

Gord Rates posted the top score in the regular Quinte Trap and Gun Club meet Sunday, chalking up a 23.

Bert Burgess was next in line with 22 while Duke Pringle and Doug Gregg each scored a 21. Checking in with 20s were Ed Thompson and Dave Wing.

Close Doesn't Count

Close but not quite is the story for Belleville Bobcats' Andy Ricketts as the puck slides wide of the mark during Sunday night's Metro Junior B Hockey League action in Peterborough. The goalie is Rob Duncan who gave up very little as his club topped the visiting Bobcats 6-2.

Lions Get Even with Bobcats

By MARK BRETT

PETERBOROUGH—The Peterborough Lions regained a measure of respect after Friday's 11-1 drubbing by the Belleville Bobcats as they handed the cats a 6-2 loss in Metro Junior B Hockey League play here last night.

The game was not as one sided as the score might indicate. A 10 minute delinquency on the part of the Bobcats aided the Lions in their victory effort.

Peterborough opened the scoring at 4:4 as Belleville defenceman, calling in front of his net ran into the referee the puck going off his skate onto the wall—skate of Lion's Larry Oakley. Mark Coates tied the score up 10 minute later on a good to deflect drive as he took a perfect pass from lieutnate Jim Richardson and drove it way through the defence and slipped the puck by goalie Rob Duncan. The Lions picked up two more goals before the period ended as Larry Cousins and Randy Bryan were the marksmen.

Richardson put the visitors within one early in the second period on a power play goal at the 59 second mark.

Lions' scoring two goals ahead again, seven minutes later, when Rick Hirtle circled. Randy Bryan picked up his second of the night to put the Lions up 5-2 with Jim Kingdon earning an assist. Bob Hirtle was in a strong performance in the Belleville nets stopping numerous drives and clearing in shots.

The tempo slowed down considerably in the third as the home team was content to protect its three goal lead. Peterborough scored the only goal of the period, this one coming at 18:16 as Mizzle got his second of the night.

The Cats are now tied for second with Markham Royals who won their game last night. Royals will be the visitors in Belleville Friday night for a 9 o'clock game with the Cats.

Kevin Joudrey saw regular duty as a defencemen replacing Barney Holmes who was injured early in the first period. Joudrey put in an impressive performance throwing some solid body checks and breaking up numerous plays.

A swollen hand sidelined Haines.

St. Lawrence Blues Defeat Lancers 6-4

Trying desperately to salvage a tie with visiting St. Lawrence College of Kingston Blues at Dick Ellis Rink Saturday night, Loyalist Lancers threw their bones dashed when the visitors scored on the open net in the last minute of play.

Final score in the contest was 6-4. But it was not decided until that insurance goal caused the Loyalist strategy to backfire.

Lancers' coach Bruce Cameron is of the opinion that his skaters have yet to learn how they must give out for the full 60 minutes.

"We must improve our back checking in order to get wins," the coach commented.

St. Lawrence spread its goals among six players. George Bridgen, Tim Muchmore, Mike White, Dave Moore, Tim McPherson and Dave Johnston were the marksmen for the Blues.

Scoring for Lancers was Paul Wariman with a brace of goals. Charlie Stuckey and Reid Mallery each clicked for one.

Johnston Comes Calling

Belleville Eagles' forward Ray Johnston welcomes Barrier Flyers' goalie Ernie Miller to the city during Sunday nights Senior A game at Memorial Arena. Miller and his mates overlooked the hospitality and went on to post a 7-5 win.

Bayside, Nicholson Win Tourney Openers

Belleville Winter Carnival activities got under way ahead of the official Wednesday opening when first round games were played on the weekend in the Secondary School Hockey Tournament.

Bayside Secondary School and Nicholson Catholic College earned their way into the semi-finals with Sunday wins. Bayside got by Quinte Secondary School 4-0 while Nicholson ogtscored Belleville Collegiate Institute 5-2.

Tim Mader recorded the shutout for Bayside's win. Supplying the firepower for the winners were Al McIntosh, Al Osborne, Rick Sopel and Dean Rice. Jeff Peckitt picked up two assists.

Gary Wallace and Jim Hannah split the goaltending duties for Quinte. Steve gave up two goals.

The winners picked up eight minor penalties and a major while Quinte players served three minors and a major.

Two goals by Peter Coates sparked the Nicholson squad to victory. Tim Walsh, Randy Kruger and Richard Barrett had the other counters. Peter Paquette helped himself to three assists.

BCI got two goals from Brian Kaiser. He was the only player to get the puck past Nicholson goalie Joel Roberts.

The losers' goaltending was looked after by Allan Porti and Peter Boyce.

The semi-finals are scheduled for Saturday, February 1 at Memorial Arena. In the first game at 7:30 p.m. Bayside hooks up with defending champion Moira Secondary School. Game 2 at 10:30 pm Nicholson matched against Centennial Secondary School.

The winners of those two games meet for the championship at Dick Ellis Rink, Sunday, February 3 at 2p.m.

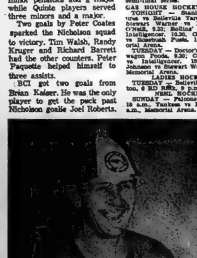
Kinsmen Take Lead

PETERBOROUGH (Special)—The Belleville Kinsmen Bantam Majors took a 2-1 lead in their best of five OMHA playoff series with Peterborough Sunday, coming up with a 6-4 win here.

Bobby Crawford had a pair of goals to lead the winners, with Jeff Coe and Mike Bennett adding one each.

Scoring for Peterborough were Dave Peters, and Jeff Wilson.

The fourth and possibly deciding game in the set will be played Saturday night at the Memorial Arena in Belleville. Game time will be 7:45.



Goalies Stingy

PICTON (Special)—Rival goalies Bruce Harrison of Picton and Donna Preston of Belleville Mel Barrage Bandcaggers were guilty of very little in women's hockey action here Friday night.

When it was all over, the teams had to settle for a 1-1 tie.

Wendy Cooper potted the only Picton goal. She clicked on a solo effort.

Replying for the visitors was Sandy Clow who finished off a three-way play with Sue Morton and Carol McFarlane.

DOUG FINNEY

Hollywood Rejects To Play Teachers

Staff members at Quinte Secondary School will have their work cut out for them tonight when they attempt to match wits and basketball skills with the Hollywood Rejects.

The schedule of talent and comedy gets under way at Quinte at 8 p.m.

Rejects are led by 6-foot-3 stars Rudolph Guffie, 19 and Terry Dudley, 18. Rudolph averages 28 points per game and Terry, 17.

Doug Finney rounds out the visitors' lineup. He's only 5-foot-10.

The Hollywood team expects quite a few points in the first half of the contest and then spend the time after the interval, giving out with a comedy routine.

According to publicity releases, Rejects have won 95 per cent of their games.

Tonight's game is a fund raising project of Quinte's junior Saints.

Orr Injured After Sparking Bruins to Win

By GLENN COLE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Bobby Orr became the fifth casualty for Tuesday's National Hockey League all-star game, but not before he transformed a come-from-behind win Sunday for Boston Bruins.

Orr scored two goals, including the game-tying effort early in the third period, and set up two others, including the game-winner by Ken Hodge, as the Bruins defeated Philadelphia Flyers 5-3 in the battle between division leaders.

But Orr had to leave the game with 3:40 left in the third period after he was tripped, and X-rays today will determine the extent of the injury to his left knee. It is the same knee which was operated on in June, 1972.

Orr is the fifth player to be dropped from the NHL East Division all-star team because of injuries. Jacques Lemaire, Serge Savard and Guy Lapointe of Montreal Canadiens and Gilbert Perreault of Buffalo Sabres were out earlier.

Rod Gilbert of New York Rangers and Henri Richard of Montreal Canadiens were announced as replacements for Lemaire and Savard while defencemen Jim McKenny and Brian Spring of Toronto Maple Leafs and Jocelyn Guevremont of Vancouver Canucks will replace Lapointe, Perreault and Orr.

Darryl Sittler was to replace Perreault but the Maple Leafs forward asked to be excused because his wife is expecting a baby.

Sittler was in Toronto's line-up Sunday night as the Leafs ended a six-game road swing with a 5-3 win over Atlanta Flames. In other games, the Rangers downed Los Angeles Kings 5-3, Vancouver Canucks upset Buffalo Sabres 3-2, Detroit Red Wings nipped Pittsburgh Penguins 6-5, Minnesota Golden Seals battled to a 3-3 tie and New York Islanders surprised Chicago Black Hawks 4-2.

Lapointe suffered a slight shoulder separation Saturday night in Montreal's 4-1 win over Chicago on Henri Richard Night at the Forum. In other Saturday clashes, it was the Leafs 3, St. Louis Blues 2; the Kings 2, Pittsburgh Penguins 0; Boston 4, Islanders 0.

Bruins 5 Flyers 3

Orr was the second Boston player injured in less than 24 hours. Saturday night in New York, centre Derek Sanderson broke a bone in his right foot. Orr's injury came after he scored his 22nd and 23rd goals of the year.

Leafs 5 Flames 3

Ron Ellis scored two goals as the Leafs posted their only win on their road tour. Toronto defenceman Mike Pelyk was injured in the first period but there was no immediate word on his condition.

Rangers 5 Kings 3

Ted Irvine scored twice and picked up an assist as the Rangers scored their fifth win in seven games since Emile Francis came back to coach the club.

Canucks 3 Sabres 2

Rookie defenceman Bob Dailey scored his sixth and seventh goals of the season and rookie forward Dennis Ververgaert got what proved to be the game winner at 8:29 of the third period as the Canucks defeated the Sabres for the second time this year in Buffalo.

Red Wings 6 Penguins 5

Marcel Dionne and Mickey Redmond scored two goals each for Detroit and a three-goal rally by the Penguins fell short as the Red Wings hung on for their 19th win of the season.

Golden Seals 3 North Stars 3

Islanders 4 Black Hawks 2

The Islanders recorded their first win over the Hawks in their two-year history. Bob Nystrom scored in the second period to break a 2-2 tie and Germain Gagnon added an insurance goal into an empty net in the third period.

Verdun Midgets Tourney Champs

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — When Verdun Maple Leafs started looking for a coach early last year for their midget-aged hockey players, it was inevitable they'd look to Roland Dagenais.

The soft-spoken Dagenais had been away from the 16-year-old age group for a couple of years, but in seven previous seasons his teams had suffered only nine losses.

His 1973-74 charges are keeping the enviable record intact, winning all but two of 18 league starts and Sunday capped a week-long tournament here by winning the Canadian midget hockey tournament.

The Leafs had few scoring opportunities Sunday, but made the most of them by beating Kingston Durnsey Realtors 5-3 in the championship game to win a trip to the Soviet Union.

"These guys work hard," said Dagenais, giving full credit to the players who, although outplayed most of the game, were quick to capitalize on most of their chances.

"They work as hard in practice as they do in a game."

The gold-medal winners broke fast, opened a 2-0 lead, wilted under the relentless Kingston offence and then stole the game when Kevin Reeves broke away to score the first of his two goals at 12:16 of the third period and break a 3-3 deadlock.

Gilles Poirier, Murray Boyce and Jean Lanoix scored earlier for the Maple Leafs.

Kim Elliott, Rob Plumb and Cam MacGregor scored for Kingston.

Earlier in the day, Hull Kiwanis of the Ottawa and District Hockey Association took the third-place bronze medal by drubbing Saskatoon Blazers 7-3 in the consolation game.

In the finals, Verdun goaltender Rejean Theriam shared the victory laurels with Reeves, and Dagenais was quick to note that the Leafs had successfully bottled up Kingston's Ken Linseman, the tournament's top scorer with 13 goals and 19 points.

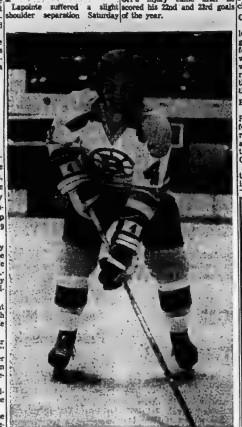
At the winship dinner Sunday night, Linseman was voted the tournament's most valuable player and was awarded a $1,000 scholarship for use at any Canadian university or American college.

Kingston totalled 44 shots at the Verdun net, compared with 27 fired by Kingston goalie Rick Coupland.

"As far as I'm concerned, our goalie played the game," Kingston coach Jerry Wagar said. "The fact we totalled them 44-27 has got to tell you something."

He praised his defenders, although they were caught up-ice several occasions.

Reeves was clear from the centre red line in on his tie-breaking score and added his 10th of the tournament with 90 seconds to play.



Linseman, who scored more than half his team's 34 goals in the previous five games, was held pointless in that finale.

While winship wasn't part of the Verdun format, coach Dagenais said success on their forthcoming tour of the Soviet Union will depend on the club's ability to skate.

"We work a lot on skating, but not days when we play," he said Dagenais.

"We skate two-three hours on those rushes—on the three, three on two. And the boys, they skate hard.

"And that's what the game's all about."

Fighting Saints On Goal Spree

By THE CANADIAN PRESS.

Minnesota Fighting Saints picked a good time for their record-breaking World Hockey Association scoring spree Sunday night.

The Saints delighted 9,387 fans, their largest crowd of the season, by trouncing Winnipeg Jets 12-2.

Minnesota, troubled by poor attendance, set WHA records for most goals in a game and for the most straight goals—10—without answer from an opponent. The Fighting Saints bombarded Winnipeg goalie Joe Daley with 51 shots as they snapped a six-game Winnipeg winning streak.

First-place Houston Aeros opened up an eight-point lead over Winnipeg in the Western Division with a 4-1 victory over the Oilers in Edmonton. In other games Sunday, Los Angeles Sharks defeated New Jersey Knights 6-2, Toronto Toros moved to within four points of front-running New England Whalers in the East with a 9-7 home win over Vancouver Blazers and Quebec Nordiques nipped visiting Cleveland Crusaders 4-3.

Saturday, New England blanked Cleveland 4-0 and Houston decisioned Vancouver 4-2.

Fighting Saints 12 Jets 2

Wayne Connelly and George Morrison each picked up two goals and three assists to key the record Minnesota scoring spree. Mike Walton added two goals and an assist as the Saints picked up their fourth straight victory over the Jets.

Joe Zanussi and Larry Hornung provided the offensive punch for Winnipeg.

Aeros 4 Oilers 1

The Aeros, playing excellent defensive hockey, skated to victory on the two-goal performance of veteran Murray Hall. Ted Taylor and Larry Lunde had the other Houston goals while Edmonton's Ron Climie scored when Houston was two men short in the third period.

The injury-plagued Oilers got more bad news after the game. Right winger Rusty Patenaude, who has been playing with a bad back, was sent to hospital after he was whacked in the back. Another right winger, Tom Gilmore, was cut under the eye and complained about blurred vision.

Edmonton played the game without high-scoring Jim Harrison, centre Ed Joyal and defenceman Steve Carlyle, all out with injuries.

Sharks 6 Knights 3

A disputed goal started the Sharks back from an early 2-0 deficit in the penalty-filled game at Cherry Hill, N.J. Hal Willis, recently-recalled from the minors, scored for the Sharks after Wayne Rivers and Brian Bradley gave the Knights a 3-0 lead in the first 3¼ minutes.

Jersey claimed Willis directed the puck into the net with his elbow. The Sharks took a 3-2 lead after 20 minutes and wrapped up the game with third-period goals by Alton White and Fred Thomas.

Officials called more than 60 minutes in penalties, most of them following a brawl as the first period ended that involved Jim Niekamp of Los Angeles and New Jersey's Kevin Morrison and Craig Reichhuth.

Toros 9 Blazers 7

The game wasn't as close as the score indicated. The Toros took period leads of 5-2 and 9-4 before Vancouver made its scare respectable on three unanswered goals in the third period.

Toronto outshot Vancouver 37-22 in the first 40 minutes before Vancouver fired 21 shots on the Toronto goal in the final period, compared with four shots by the Toros.

Nordiques 4 Crusaders 3

Jean-Claude Tremblay's goal at 16:52 of the second period gave the Nordiques a 4-3 lead and proved to be the winner. Ron Buchanan scored his second goal of the night for the Crusaders in the third period, but Cleveland couldn't put across another.

Quebec jumped off to a 2-0 lead on goals by Jeannot Gilbert, Guy Dufour and, Serge Bernier, before Cleveland answered the score on goals by Buchanan and rookie Tom Eitler.

The former Sabres coach made his debut with single-game Niagara Falls Sunday and the Flyers downed Guelph 6-2, outshooting the Biltmores 45 to 34.

Guelph, currently fourth in the 16-team league standings, had administered a 17-3 blasting to Michigan Americans in the only game Saturday night.

In other games Sunday, second-place Windsor Spitfires edged to within one point of the idle Sabres by downing Chatham Maroons 4-1 and Detroit Junior Red Wings trounced Buffalo Tondas 9-2.

Detroit's attack against Buffalo was spearheaded by Calvin Craig's four goals and two more were added by Pat Beverly with singles by Reese D'brick and Gary Dorosh.

Dan Rouat and Bob Mulcahy counted for Buffalo, ninth in the 16th.

Fittipaldi Does it Again

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Brazil's Emerson Fittipaldi scored his second Brazilian Grand Prix victory in a row, powering a McLaren to first place Sunday in a race shortened by rain with nine laps remaining.

Fittipaldi started from the pole position, but watched Argentina's Carlos Reutemann pull to an early lead in his Brabham. Fittipaldi stayed close to Reutemann, often challenging for the lead before taking over on the 16th lap and continuing to triumph. He picked up nine points toward the World Formula 1 championship with a time of one hour, 34 minutes, 27.06 seconds for the 33 laps completed.

Switzerland's Clay Regazzoni finished second in a Ferrari, being clocked in 1:34:59.83 and Reutemann, often challenging for the lead before taking third in less time, 1:32:06.80. Patrick Depailler of France, eighth; James Hunt of England, ninth, and Jean-Pierre Beltoise of France, 10th.

finish. The start of the race was delayed for nearly an hour because of problems in a heat run early Sunday.

In fourth place was Belgium's Carlos Pace, timed in 1:32:18.34 in a Surtees; England's Mike Hailwood, whose McLaren clocked 1:32:00.44; Ronnie Peterson of Sweden, at 1:32:03.34 in a Lotus and Reutemann, whose Brabham finished in 1:32:09.35.

Rounding out the top 10 were Jacky Ickx completed only 31 laps, Peter Revson of the United States managed a 22nd-place finish, 10th.

Race Fans Unload The Cash

TORONTO (CP) — For the first time in Ontario harness racing history wagering exceeded the million-dollar mark Saturday, hitting $1,004,801 at Greenwood Raceway.

The record amount was pushed through the mutuels windows by 11,409 harness fans who turned out in mild, springlike weather.

On only three previous occasions in Canadian racing history has betting hit a million dollars for a single card, all at Montreal's Blue Bonnets track.

Saturday's total also was a betting record at Greenwood where the previous high of $933,193 was set Jan. 15.

Ron Waples drove Muddy George to victory in the featured ninth race, making the 13th driving victory for Waples this season and putting him at the top of the dollar derby with $94,000 in purses.

Australia and Canada Are One-two

CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z. (CP) — An aroused Australian swimming team responded to Canada's challenge in the Commonwealth Games prog today and the two countries finished the fourth day of competition on equal terms, on land as well as water. . . .

Three Aussie victories in five swimming and diving events, to which Canada replied with a gold medal in swimming and another in shooting, left each country with a total of 16 golds, five of them won in the pool. . . .

The Aussies held a slight edge in the unofficial point standings, compiled on a 10-5-4-3-2-1 basis for the first six placings in final events, with 232 points to Canada's 190.

England, the only other country to win an event today, was a distant third with 130 points and four gold medals.

Rev. William Hare of Rathfrew, Ont., and Dr. Jules Sobrian of Oromest, Ont., started the day with a 1-2 finish in the rapid-fire pistol competition with Hare breaking the games record by one point with his winning score of 586.

The Australians responded with a 1-2-3 sweep of the men's 200-metre backstroke, with Brad Cooper winning in Games record time. The three Canadian finalists were limited to fifth, sixth and seventh place.

Six girls demolished the Games mark set eight years ago by Elaine Tanner of Vancouver in the 100-metre backstroke in the preliminary heats. The evolving winner was 18-year-old Patti Stenhouse of Vancouver, who nipped Kim Wickham of Scotland in the final, but the record belonged to Wendy Quirk of Pointe Claire, Que., who swam her heat in one minute 5.05 seconds.

Patti's winning time was 1:05.38, still nearly a second better than the Tanner mark of 1:06.3. Wendy set the early pace in the final but faded to fifth place, just ahead of Leslie Cliff of Vancouver, with a time of 1:06.32.

There were two seasoned Aussie campaigners took over.

Bob Wagstaff, the defending champion, finished ahead of Scott Cranham, a Canadian resident of Grand Rapids, Mich., in the men's springboard diving competition. Rick Frieson of Burnaby, B.C., who had led after the preliminary stage, finished fourth.

And Mike Wenden, 24-year-old butcher, became the first swimmer to win three consecutive gold medals in the 100 freestyle finishing comfortably ahead of Bruce Robertson of Vancouver and Brian Phillips of Winnipeg, who took the silver and bronze.

Wenden, a 5-year-old father of two children, has said he will retire after the games. His winning time of 52.73 was another games record.

The first English swimming victory of the games came in the last event of the day as Brian Brinkley lowered another games record in the men's 200 butterfly. There was no Canadian medal as Brian Kemmet of Lethbridge, Alta., was fourth and Byron MacDonald of Mississauga, Ont., eighth.

There was a strong hint of further Canadian gold when the swimming program resumes Wednesday as Wendy Cook and Donna-Marie Gurr both broke the games record in winning their heats of the 100-metre backstroke, emerging as the fastest qualifiers.

Jamie Paulson of Toronto, the men's athletes defending champion, was the only Canadian left in the singles as the badminton tournament reached the semi-final stage. Jane Youngberg of Surrey, B.C., lost in the women's singles quarter-finals and the last Canadian pairs bowed out in the men's and women's doubles.

Featherweight Dale Andersen of Rocky Mountain House, Alta., and welterweight Carmen Rinke of Bialzmore, Alta., were still in the running in boxing. Both were scheduled for quarter-final bouts Tuesday.

'I'll Shut His Trap' Says Sullen Frazier

NEW YORK (AP) — A sullen Joe Frazier had a warning Sunday for Muhammad Ali.

"I'll shut his trap for good," he said at the weigh-in for tonight's 12-round heavyweight rematch.

Ali, an 8-5 favorite, told reporters:

"It'll be no contest. I'm going to do what I shoulda have done last time."

The fight at 9:30 p.m. EST at Madison Square Garden is a sequel to the celebrated bout of March 8, 1971, which matched two unbeaten champions. Tonight's purse will be almost as rich.

The Garden is a $1 million sellout, with its 20,000 seats priced at between $20 and $100.

Bob Arum, Ali's lawyer and head of Top Rank, Inc., predicts that a billion people throughout the world will see the fight on closed television, live and delayed.

Arum said the fight could gross $18 million, with $9 million to be distributed among the two principals and Top Rank.

Ali and Frazier, fighting under an $850,000 guarantee, thus could collect $3 million each.

They received $2.5 million for the first fight, won by Frazier on a decision. Ali, who had been idle for more than three years, was overweight at 215 pounds, slow and out of shape.

Nevertheless, he punished the heavyweight champion so badly that Frazier recovered in hospital. Ali had a blood vessel ruptured in his jaw.

"Somebody counted while looking at the movie and said it hit Joe 902 times," Ali boasted.

"He takes a lot of punishment. He just knows one way to fight—that is, move forward with arms swinging."

Frazier weighed 209 even pared with 205½ the night he best Ali at the Garden.

Because of a scuffle last Wednesday at a television studio after Ali had called Frazier ignorant, the two fighters weighed in separately. The state athletic commission fined them $5,000 each following the TV incident for conduct detrimental to boxing.

"Frazier didn't want to face me at the weigh-in because he is nervous," Ali shouted. "He is frightened.

"I am stronger than I have ever been. I'll be dancing and moving. I predict an easy win.

"I'll fight the way I shoulda fought the first time. No gimmicks. No humor. I won't dance on the ropes and get caught in any corners. . . ."

Bobby Nichols Didn't 'Back In'

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A missed putt helped Bobby Nichols, but he didn't back into his victory Sunday in the $170,000 San Diego open golf tournament.

Rod Curl missed a 10-foot birdie putt on the 72nd hole of the tournament and lost a chance for a playoff.

Nichols, 37, had a three-under-par 69 for a 275 total and the 11th victory of his career, taking home $34,000 in prize money.

"I'm surprised to win," said Nichols. "I really didn't expect to. I figured he (Curl) would make that putt."

Curl, who was seeking his first victory in six years on the tour, had a 70 and tied for second with veteran Gene Littler at 276. 12 under par. Littler had a final-round 66.

Tom Watson and Miller Barber were next at 278. Watson with a closing 70. Barber with a 69. Rookie Ben Crenshaw had a 71 and was alone at 279.

Brother of Mitchell Man Charged With Murder

MITCHELL, Ont. (CP) — The brother of a man whose body was found Thursday with the help of a clairvoyant has been charged with non-capital murder in the death.

Provincial police said Sunday that William Franklin Tuer, 35, was arrested Saturday. He is to appear today in provincial court in Stratford, 18 miles southeast of here.

Angus Tuer, 33, who had been missing since Dec. 9, was found dead in a well on his family's farm with a bullet wound in his head and a chain and weight attached to his neck.

The body was discovered after four hunters began combing the area after hearing that a clairvoyant had predicted that it would be found deep in the ground near his home.

Clairvoyant Clara McNichol, 64, of nearby Millbank made the prediction after she had been approached earlier this month by two men who had been in contact with several neighbors, been searching for the missing man since December.

Indian Woman Dies After Initiation Dance

CHILLIWACK, B.C. (CP) — An inquest will be held Thursday to investigate the death of an Indian woman following tribal dancing ceremonies.

Laura Louise Leon, 21, who lived on the Cheam Indian reserve at nearby Harrison Mills, died in hospital Friday.

RCMP said the woman became ill while taking part in "a sort of initiation ceremony" at a longhouse on the Tzeachten reserve near Vedder Crossing.

A Chilliwack doctor, who declined to be identified, said Mrs. Leon was his patient and appeared to have been suffering from some form of influenza.

He said she had been taking part in the ceremony since Sunday and first became ill Wednesday. When she became worse Thursday she was admitted to hospital.

On Dec. 18, 1972, Edwin George, 32, of the Sardis band, died following an initiation procedure held to enter a tribal dancing society.

Police Visit Expected

MONTREAL (CP) — The organizers of a local showing of the much-banned film Deep Throat probably had an idea of what police reaction would be if they tried to screen the film starring Linda Lovelace as a girl with an unusual problem.

"They must have been waiting for us," a police spokesman said.

Several hundred people were waiting for the film to begin at Sir George Williams University when police swooped in, confiscated two video players

Increased Mexican Trade Seen

MEXICO CITY (CP) — Describing the work of a Canadian trade mission as "a very successful enterprise," Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie says there are prospects for a big jump in Canadian exports in Mexico.

Over the next few years, he says, Canada may reap as much as $1 billion in sales. Exports to Mexico have been rising steadily, increasing to $106.4 million in the first 11 months of 1973 from the previous high of $99.1 million for the whole of 1972.

In forecasting a step-up in this trend, Gillespie told a news conference Saturday he is more confident of Canada's position as an exporter to Mexico than he was 10 days ago. The three-day mission, which included 32 Canadian businessmen, has given better focus to the potential for Canada.

The mission, a prelude to joint ministerial talks opening today, completed its work Saturday after holding a number of meetings with Mexican business and government officials.

Mexico usually shows a deficit in its trade with Canada, importing more from Canada than it exports. Gillespie said Mexico wants to narrow this gap and the Canadian government will lend assistance.

Earlier, at unusually lengthy, informal meeting with President Luis Echeverria, Gillespie and mission members outlined areas in which Canadian participation in Mexico's development can be increased.

The minister and Lorne Main of Toronto, vice-president, director for Hawker Siddeley Canada Ltd., mentioned specifically a proposal for Canadian help in rehabilitating the Mexican railway system at a cost of $500 million. Mexico's share of costs might be about $20 million.

The Canadian government might also use its Export Development Corp. to provide loans and grants for such other Mexican development as a steel manufacturing complex on the Pacific Coast, construction of a nuclear reactor, deep-water ports, communications systems, agriculture, air pollution control, air traffic control and forest protection.

These proposals may be explored further at the two-day ministerial conference, at which External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp and Charles Drury, president of the treasury board, join Gillespie.

Lieutenant-governor Will Still Do Dishes

TORONTO (CP) — Pauline McGibbon, who will become Ontario's first woman lieutenant-governor at a ceremony sometime in March—she still doesn't know the exact date—says she doesn't interpret her appointment "as a symbol or token of women's lib."

"And I don't figure it degrading that I still will do the dishes . . . the breakfast bacon," the 63-year-old chancellor of the University of Toronto said Sunday in an interview on radio station CFRB.

Mrs. McGibbon, who long has been deeply involved in university, theatre and community activities, said that after she takes office, succeeding W. Ross Macdonald as lieutenant-governor, she plans to visit every part of Ontario during her five-year term.

Mr. Macdonald's official aides have been asked to resign, she said. Then all will be asked if they wish to stay on or retire.

Lt.-Col. Frank McEachren of the 48th Highland regiment, who has been senior aide to Mr. Macdonald, already has said he will remain, said Mrs. McGibbon.

"I'm so glad" because he knows all the protocol and "I'll be able to say, 'Frank, what do I do?'"

Mrs. McGibbon, who, with her husband, Don, treasurer of Imperial Oil Ltd., makes her home in Toronto, said she will use the lieutenant-governor's suite at Queen's Park for official functions.

"But there's no place to sleep there. If the legislature doesn't prorogue until 4 a.m., do I have to curl up on the chesterfield until it prorogues?

"I have heard that for at least two years the provincial government has had under consideration an official residence for the lieutenant-governor," she said, but there were many factors, including size and ample parking, that must be considered.

Mrs. McGibbon also said she hasn't decided whether to let name stand for another term as chancellor of the University of Toronto. Her present three-year term expires in June.

Trudeau Off to Ski

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau left Sunday night aboard a Canadian forces service flight, bound for a skiing holiday in Switzerland and business meetings in Austria.

Mrs. Trudeau was at the airport to see her husband off, minutes after the couple had said good-bye to the Queen, Prince Philip, Princess Anne and Capt. Mark Phillips.

Mr. Trudeau plans about a week of skiing and relaxation in Switzerland before attending the three-day Club of Rome meeting in Salzburg starting Feb. 3.

10-Speed Bike Most Efficient Way to Travel

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The 10-speed bicycle, says a researcher at Duke University, is the most efficient method of travelling ever invented. It even beats walking.

Dr. Vance A. Tucker, an associate professor of zoology, reported that a bicycle, travelling at 30 miles an hour, needs only half the energy a person would use in walking the same distance.

As for cars, a compact model going 50 miles an hour uses 6 times as much energy as the bicycle and a luxury car requires 10 times as much.

As a bonus, Tucker said, the bicycle's only "exhaust" is carbon dioxide emitted by the rider, which green plants can reguse back to oxygen.

Legal Aid Produces Experts Regarding Low-income Problems

By R. J. ANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Every man is entitled to his day in court but it can be an expensive one. Often, he cannot afford it and may plead guilty when he lacks the financial means to fight his case.

That's when legal aid steps in.

It's a provincial plan, now supplemented by federal funds, to help those in need get proper representation in court if they are charged with a criminal offence or to defend themselves competently if they are faced with a civil action.

In certain instances, a man or woman may institute a suit with free legal aid—it could be suit for divorce—but actions considered frivolous are out. In this category would be an unjustified suit for slander or libel, damage for breach of promise or alienation of affections.

Under agreements negotiated with the provinces last year, the federal government increased its contribution to legal aid to 50 cents per capita—to about $5 million considering the 22 million Canadians.

Free legal aid is not for everyone.

Regulations vary from province to province, but a

Pussy the belly dancer sits on the knee of a Canadian soldier attached to the United Nations peacekeeping force in the Middle East. Times have been tough for Pussy and her fellow belly dancers but "then the Canadas come and we know they have millions of dollars." (CP Photo)

Canadian Soldiers Meet Belly-dancers

CAIRO (CP) — Col. Dave Travers wore a grin from ear to ear and the gleam in his eye threatened to light up the whole of blacked-out Cairo.

Dave Travers, with a little help from his friends, had discovered Egypt's fabled belly-dancers. Not only that, he even got to touch one, speak to her and hold her on his knee for all of five seconds.

"My God, it's a woman," he mumbled in disbelief.

"Nah," grumbled Pte. Chuck Daniels of St. Catharines, Ont., "it's one of them desert illusions they talk about."

"Okay, man, then I can live with illusions," concluded Travers, a native of Bermuda, with a deep, contented sniff of the dancer's enchanting perfume. "Beats diesel oil all to hell."

The two soldiers, from Canada's peacekeeping contingent here, were among the first advance party from their group to find the belly-dancers in a dark, secluded lean on the edge of the desert.

FIRST CANADIANS

And for the girls, it was their first encounter with the Canadians.

"Oo-la-la, oo-la-la, these Canadas, how do you say? Full of vinegar" exclaimed a slightly-bewildered dancer who insisted her name was "Pussy.

"Canada big farm, right? I like these guys, hard to manage but I like. Yeah, yeah, want to see many more coming." Pussy added, dashing from the clutches of an eager young private.

Pussy was one of a few dancers who started performing in Cairo within weeks after the end of the October war between Arabs and Israelis. They were immediately closed down again because of the austerity imposed by the authorities but kept reopening persistently in various parts of the city.

Nevertheless, times have been tough for Pussy and her fellow belly dancers but "then the Canadas come and we know they have millions of dollars."

"For you, we'll bring the Prairies, the Maritimes, Quebec and Ontario," pledged Pte. Bob Smith of Carrying Place, Ont.

"And beer and cigarettes and cigars and clothes and anything else you want," another soldier added Pte. Claude Dubois of Gatineau, Que.

Nightlife for the Canadians in Cairo—now numbering about 11,000—was extremely limited during their first weeks here late last year and finding the dancers was considered a supreme act of resourcefulness by the men.

"Now we look after them good," mused Pussy, "or more worries." She wanted to make it plain, however, with a little prowling from the club's manager, that her entertainment was strictly confined to the dance floor.

Pussy's companion, Josephine, was a little worried, however, by what she considered to be Canadian impatience.

"We have many veils to take off in our dancing," she explained; "it takes many months to learn our art perfectly. But these Canadians just want everything off at once—no good that."

Actually, this was a little unfair to Josephine, one of the less eye-catching dancers, weighed in at about 190 pounds and exposed no more of herself than could be shown by a hooded, old-fashioned swim suit.

Afterwards, back at a Cairo hotel, a married sergeant who heard about the belly-dancing escapade, rushed up to a reporter to gasp:

"For God's sake, write down that not a married soldier in Cairo will ever go to the place. My wife, oh my God, when she hears about this, it's curtains."

for case preparation or similar work.

Specialists who may be called in on difficult cases or cases of witnesses who agree to testify work at the same rates.

The survey also showed that most legal-aid lawyers are young, often just out of law school, but administrators of the plan say that's not necessarily a bad thing. They say the new lawyers are more up to date on many points of law than their elders. No instance of a poor or incomplete defence was recorded.

A strong advocate of free legal aid in those in need is Alderman Mike Harcourt of Vancouver who founded the Community Legal Assistance Program in that city in June, 1972.

He sees service in the low-income field as a separate branch of the legal profession.

He said in an interview:

"This sort of law has never been touched before in an expert way.

"We have corporation lawyers who are expert in that field. We have criminal lawyers. Why shouldn't we have legal experts in the field of low-income problems?

"There is no reason why the benefits of the legal system shouldn't apply to all, regardless of power or money. The hard part is doing it day in and day out."

Some young lawyers do it day in and day out. Maybe they're just starting out and the legal-aid field is what they need to get started in a profession where the rewards are high but the going is tough.

Some police officials feel there are abuses in the system.

Fenwick Rose, superintendent with the Saint John, N.B., police department, said in an interview legal aid has prompted frivolous court cases.

"I think there is some abuse there, although it isn't as bad as when it (legal aid) first started.

"It is creating a backlog in court cases because a number of cases are being dealt with when there is quite obviously no defence."

Superintendent Ross said a "fair number" of policemen are being tied up by the justice and said he feels some discrimination is needed, from the standpoint of evidence, as to who should qualify for aid.

"I think the theory of legal aid may be all right," he said, "but in my experience of 25 years as a policeman I have never evidenced an accused person not being afforded legal aid as such."

The controversy in Winnipeg developed when it was noted that more cases were going to trial than before the system started and that this was costing the city more in fees to off-duty policemen who appeared in court as witnesses.

George Parkin, secretary of the police commission, said some lawyers were "making a good living of it" in terms of their fees for court appearances.

Robert Steen, a member of city council, termed the situation "a damned racket" and won agreement on this point from Police Chief Norm Stewart. Legal aid Director Roland Penner retorted that most lawyers could earn twice as much in private practice; the fact that more cases were coming to trial was a vindication of the system.

Mr. Steen later said his "damned racket" remark referred to what he termed abuse of legal aid by some persons, repeated offenders, using legal aid to postpone the inevitable or as a gamble, hoping that if a case were delayed, witnesses might not appear or become forgetful.

Saskatchewan guards against repeaters by ruling that no one may use the service more than twice in one year, even if acquitted both times. Bus exceptions often are made and officials said no hardship has resulted.

Cost of legal aid went up considerably in 1972 over 1971, last year for which complete figures are available, and more will be spent this year with the federal government's contribution.

Following are provincial expenditures for 1972:

British Columbia, $800,000; Alberta, $370,647; Saskatchewan, $50,000; Manitoba, $820,000; Ontario, $11.3 million; Quebec, legal aid was not available, estimated cost for 1973 is $11 million; New Brunswick, $300,000; Nova Scotia, about $540,000; Newfoundland, about $100,000.

Prince Edward Island's plan got under way in October, 1972, for a trial period of three years. No budget yet has been drawn for the 1972-74 fiscal year.

Maritimes Fearful Of Budworm

FREDERICTON (CP) — The pesky budworm, a nemesis to Maritimes forests for many years, may once again spread havoc through the forestlands this year, the Maritime research centre of the Canadian Forestry Service warns.

The research centre here said the spruce budworm may cause moderate to severe defoliation of fir and spruce over 15.5 million acres of forest stands during the year.

The centre based its forecast on the results of a survey for spruce budworm eggs mounted at more than 1,300 sample locations in the region. The information is used to outline areas that might be subject to high hazard and aid in deciding control measures.

The egg count was made last August about a month after the female budworm moths had laid their eggs in masses of 10 to 20 units on the foliage of the balsam fir and spruce trees.

The devastating effects of the budworm are well known and apparent when the figures detailing infestation over the last two years are viewed.

The 1972 level infestation over the areas of Quebec, Maine, Gaspe Peninsula and high-wax concentrations of about 15 million acres in New Brunswick, a moderate increase over the total 1972 figure of 13.3 million acres.

But the areas considered to have a high infestation, the 1972 acreage included in the category was 1.1 million, compared to only 4.8 million acres of high infestation the previous year.

The research centre also showed that the intensity of the budworm egg-masses on each sample unit had more than doubled. The heaviest increases were in forest stands in northern New Brunswick and on the east coast of the province between Chatham and Moncton.

The report said the increase in infestation was believed to be associated with weather in the two consecutive years, June and July, which was highly favorable for egg-laying and egg survival.

Nova Scotia researchers found generally high egg-mass counts in Cumberland County and the Antigonish-Guysboro area while in Nova Scotia, the counties showed low levels.

In Prince Edward Island, the researchers found high to very high density counts in all but three locations.

The defoliation was spread over almost the entire island and indicated moderate to severe defoliation in 1974, the research paper said.

Victorian Era To Space Age

By JACK BRAYLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The title of the book is possibly both innocent and impressive and at first blush seems to suggest it belongs right beside Gibbon's comprehensive Decline and Fall. But when you get into the 200 pages of Col. E. M. Slader's From the Victorian Era to the Space Age, you can appreciate that it's simply the record of one unusual man's useful, ultimately over an unique period.

The gunner, cop and historian uses a keen eye and a sharp pen in portraying the color, adventure and excitement in a crowded life of 88 years—and he still is going strong.

He deals with the lively days of Victorian Saint John; his frustrations with political and military stupidity in two world wars and his admiration for the individual acts of courage he witnessed at close hand; and, finally, his battle with crime resulting in a brief and enforced hiatus from his office as chief of police of the New Brunswick city.

This volume is turned out by the New Brunswick Historical Society and is an entertaining cavalcade of human interest from an observer with a retentive memory and ready wit.

As a lad of 15, Edwin Slader witnessed his first military foul-up in a review for royalty on the Barrack Green. He experienced other mix-ups when he joined the militia in later years. Then followed the blunders of the general staff in the First World War. And he didn't have too much faith in our leaders and their lack of preparedness for the Second World War. Because relationship between the two had been part in a big combined forces exercise at Passamaquoddy Bay where communication was confounded when nobody told the defending force, observing standard time, that the invaders would be on daylight time.

He tells of the snobbery of Sunday in Victorian Saint John. Society leaders rode to church in a barouche pulled by fruitlessly groomed horses. They acknowledged with a wave of the hand the bat-lifting of those who walked and the wife, in ostrich feathers and with bejeweled, nipped out the people whose salutations could be noticed and returned without loss of dignity.

Carrie Nation came to town with her hatchet but to the disappointment of many she didn't smash the bars. And the colonel remembers his disillusionment when John L. Sullivan visited the city after his retirement from the ring and he was growing fat.

There are memories of the travelling companies that visited the Opera House and the discriminating patrons of the galleries who showed their disapproval by hurling ripe fruit if they didn't like the performance.

He went to work at the city's big department store—Manchester - Robertson-Allison—for $1.50 a week and this included two late nights carrying water for the scrub ladies.

The author joined the artillery militia and was called out to help police a street railway strike and observes that once a mob assembles "it seems that ordinary individual self-control ceases."

And, as he marched off to war amid the cheers of the citizenry, he remembered that during the strike just a few weeks before the same crowd were shouting "kick" as the troops restored order.

He has several chapters on army life and on day in the mud of France he met a British colonel who piled him with questions about the trench warfare conditions. It was Winston Churchill, at the time under a cloud as a result of the Gallipoli campaign and in command of an infantry battalion.

Between wars he watched fearfully as all the old signs of neglect and unpreparedness appeared. When the new war broke out he enlisted as a lieutenant in the Veterans Guard and for the duration served at various prisoner-of-war camps across Canada.

He was chief of police for 11 years and until he decided to clean up the slot machines in spite of threats of his job from a local politician. He seized the machines and lost his job until a city council restored him to favor.

From the Victorian Era to the Space Age by Col. E. M. Slader; New Brunswick Historical Society; 212 pages; $4.50.

Exorcist Best Film

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The best dramatic TV actor for his Exorcist, a chilling film of demonic possession, was acclaimed the best movie of 1973 by the Hollywood Foreign Press Association at the Golden Globe Awards last Saturday night.

The movie's teen-age star, Linda Blair, was named best supporting actress for her portrayal of the bewitched child Regan.

The film also took awards for best director and best screenplay.

The foreign correspondents, representing newspapers in 50 countries, named Al Pacino as best dramatic actor for his portrayal of an honest cop in Serpico, and selected Marsha Mason as best dramatic actress for her role as an appealing prostitute in Cinderella Liberty.

In the musical and comedy movie category, the best actor and actress awards went to the stars of a single movie—George Segal and Glenda Jackson for A Touch of Class.

The awards for best comedy or musical motion picture were to be made public reminiscent of the 1960s, American Graffiti.

The writers, reflecting foreign tastes in both movies and television, chose the family series The Waltons as their favorite show.

James Stewart was named prize.

On March 5th, a public bridge party will be held sponsored by the Club.

The financial report was given by Mr. Charles Porrill.

The Executive has come up with some plans for the winter months. A mammoth euchre party is scheduled for February 5th, in St. James Hall, 50c admission. Lunch will be served, and there will be two first prizes, and two second prizes, as well as a door

What Charley Pride Really Wants Is to Be Big League Ball Player

By MICHAEL BENNETT
CP Correspondent

Back in '58, a cocky, skinny baseball-playing kid walked into the Memphis Red Sox front office and told them how he figured he was worth more than $150 a month and $2-a-fifty eatin' money. Making his turn every four days and playin' the rest of the time in the weeds.

If they hadn't cussed his hide and taken the kid on trial form, Charley Frank Pride might have made the jump from the old Negro American League to the big time, like Jackie Robinson, Willie Mays and Hank Aaron before him.

And one of country music's finest ambassadors would have been heard from only at the plate and in the locker room.

"At the time, I had no idea I was preparin' myself for this type of role as far as even bein' in country music, I just sang it because I loved it. My ambition was to be the greatest baseball player that ever put on a uniform."

It probably still is, in daylight dreams on flights from Dallas to Nashville. Where he has recorded 20 albums, to Houston, where he drew 65,641 for two shows at the '72 livestock show and rodeo.

Charley goes to spring training with Milwaukee Brewers every year. He says it keeps him in shape.

He's covered a lot of ground since he bussed around Tennessee, Texas, Louisiana and Florida with the Red Sox and the Birmingham Black Barons.

"I was subscribing to The Sporting News from St. Louis there, it had all the major leagues and standings, and I read an ad said: 'Ball player capable of playin' ' A ball, write this number.' So I wrote and I got a reply from Missoula, Mont. Told me to get in the best shape as possible at home and if they signed me, they'd reimburse me.

"So I mortgaged all my furniture, about 400 bucks, left 200 with my wife, and headed for Missoula.

"I'd been in two games, up three times, got two hits, drove in two runs. That's .750. So I started singin' in night clubs."

The team sent him over to Helena where the smelter kept jobs open for players. One night, somebody brought a guitar to the park and he sang the Lonzo and Oscar novelty song There's a Hole in the Bottom of the Sea over the public address system. That and a good year at the plate got him some publicity and more club dates.

"In fact, for 25 years, I drove from Helena to Anaconda to play on a Friday night, 80 miles, sing for five hours until two o'clock, drive back, get home about four o'clock, get up about six, punch in, get off at three, drive back. Two-and-a-half years, 50 bucks a night."

Then in '65, the late Red Foley and Red Sovine came to Helena for a show and Charley was on the second half, singing Lovesick Blues and Heartaches By the Number

Wine Prices Unchanged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Santa Claus won't be bringing a present of lower prices on French wines this Christmas. So says William Bruce, chairman of the Liquor Control Board. Despite a bumper year for growers in France, the drop in wine prices is "only a vague rumor," Mr. Bruce said. "But if it's true, it still can't be reflected here in a reduction of our prices before Christmas. It'll take weeks before shipments come through."

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — The Banff Centre School of Fine Arts plans to initiate a Canadian chamber orchestra training centre for young advanced musicians. The seven-week program, which will run from July 1 to Aug. 17, will bring together 38 players.

To Your Good Health

Felt Heel Pad May Ease Spur

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: For nine months I have been bothered by a painful right heel, right on the bottom of the heel. You had an article saying there was no need to suffer when relief could be gotten, but I have been to a bone doctor, foot doctor and chiropractor, had injections and medicine and had to give up working out, and the only suggestion the chiropractor has left is for me to go to the city for acupuncture. I wear a soft sponge doughnut shape in my shoe and this eases it a little.— Mrs. L.C.

I presume that either the orthopedist or podiatrist identified it as a heel spur—it sounds like it from your letter, and the treatment fits.

A heel spur can be very tiny but make an inordinate amount of misery for its size. But after all, a spur (a little calcium deposit on the bottom of the heel) is in a strategic spot for causing trouble.

Compare it to a sharp grain of sand in your shoe, which can be extremely painful until you shift to a spot where it does not exert pressure on a certain spot. The sharp grain of sand can shift; the spur can't.

You mention inserting a soft sponge in your shoe. I'd suggest that you substitute something firmer than sponge. Try a piece of thick, firm felt—a piece cut from a mans' felt hat, or even a double thickness.

Cut it to shape, to fit under your heel in your shoe. Then cut a hole in the middle, at the spot where you feel the pain. What you are trying to do is to raise the level of your heel enough to keep pressure off that painful spot. There is, in fact, a double purpose. You lift the heel—and you also throw your weight slightly forward so the pressure is on the rest of the foot, not mainly on the heel.

The latter can be particularly important for you—I conclude from your letter that you attribute to your being overweight. But an overweight person sometimes gets in the habit of walking on the heels more than on the forward part of the foot, and with a heel spur, that's rougher.

As to the acupuncture, you'll have to take your own chances. I can't advise you simply because, in spite of reams of publicity, very little factual medical information has come to the surface about it.

In any event, I'd first try the suggestion I have outlined above and then lose some weight.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Recently a radio broadcaster mentioned that the Mayo Clinic has developed a drug or process to dissolve gall stones. Would you check into this and print it?— M.C.C.

Already have done so, months ago. The important point, which evidently the commentator on the radio didn't make clear, is that this is an experimental study. It has been successful in some cases and not in others.

It is NOT available to the public now; as with many other experimental efforts, before it becomes available for general use, it first will require a lot more testing. Perhaps months, perhaps years. Other centers are doing similar investigation.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My doctor tells me I have cataracts and need surgery. Since then a friend has told me of a doctor who can cure them with a different treatment. Is this possible? Is it legal? I have to make a decision.—Mrs. P.B.

Occasionally (and not in all cases) drugs that enlarge the pupil of the eye can improve vision temporarily, but the cataracts continue to become more dense until surgery is needed anyway. There is no cure for cataracts except to remove them surgically.

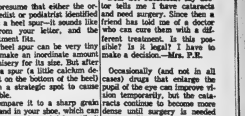
Unless properly treated, both glaucoma and cataracts can lead to blindness.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have heard that you can get pregnant only 72 hours of the month. Is that true? Which 72 hours?—R.S.

True in a rather vague sort of way. That's about the length of time the female ovum or egg remains fertile. But pinning it down to "which 72 hours" isn't such an easy answer.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I suffered a severe heart attack some time ago. I have been placed on a salt-free diet among other things.

I live in a well-managed apartment but the water which comes from deep wells for this area is run through a large water softener. At times it even tastes salty.



Is the drinking water defeating the precautions taken by following a salt-free diet? Should I purchase pure bottled water?—C. C.

Water-softening often involves the substituting of sodium (salt) for the calcium and magnesium in the hard water. Yes, using this water could defeat the purpose of your salt-free diet.

Whether you should use the softened water is for you and your doctor to decide. The decision would be based on several factors—just how much sodium is added, how much water you drink and how stringent a diet you are on.

Ontario Interns May Cut Services

TORONTO (CP) — Interns and resident doctors across Ontario are considering a partial withdrawal of services to back demands for salary increases.

Dr. Philip Maurice, a member of the Professional Association of Interns and Residents of Ontario, said Sunday the limits, who work an average of 80 hours a week, are considering withdrawing the extra-mural 40 hours a week service they put in at no extra pay.

He said the decision would not affect the quality of patient care, but would mean longer hours for doctors who count on interns and resident doctors, who are also in training, to do much of their hospital work themselves.

The association, which represents about 1,600 of the province's 2,000 interns and resident doctors, voted two weeks ago to reject an offer which would have given them a raise of approximately eight per cent. Their salaries now range from $7,000 to $12,000 a year.

Dr. Maurice said the interns are trying to reduce the discrepancy between the salary of a doctor in training and that of an experienced physician.

However, he stressed that the association would not try to prevent interns and resident doctors who want to continue working as usual from doing so.

Unions Want Inquiry Into Police Actions

TORONTO (CP) — The Council of Canadian Unions said Sunday that Ontario Premier William Davis should order a judicial inquiry into tactics of Metropolitan Toronto police during the recent strike at Artistic Woodwork Co. Ltd. here.

"We feel we can present evidence of police improprieties," said secretary-treasurer Kent Rowley following an executive meeting of the council, formed by 17 Canadian based-unions.

Mr. Rowley heads the Canadian Textile and Chemical Workers Union which was involved in the Artistic strike.

The council said that courts hearing charges arising from the strike rely too much on police testimony and do not give enough consideration to civilian witnesses

The council also called for a "real cleanup" of corruption and violence in the Ontario construction industry, now the subject of a provincial inquiry, and a "housecleaning" at the Ontario Labor Relations Board.

The council has no representation on the board "and when we appear before it, we find we're facing a representative of international unions," said Mr. Rowley.

St. Kitts Stores Selling Devices Ruled Obscene

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says Eaton's and Consumers Distributing stores in St. Catharines, Ont., are selling vibrators, artificial sex stimulants that a county court there recently ruled obscene.

The newspaper says that despite a conviction last fall against Dechev, a St. Catharines businessman whose Erotique Ltd. was temporarily put out of business for selling similar items, Niagara regional police have not laid charges against the two department stores.

The type of vibrator offered by Eaton's and Consumers—a hand-held battery-operated device shaped like an elongated tube of lipstick—is like one of the 19 articles items the county court there found to be obscene in the Erotique case.

The Globe and Mail says, in April, Mr. Dechow was fined $250 for possessing obscene material. He appealed on similar charges that a county court there recently ruled obscene.

The conviction was upheld by the county court in November and now is being appealed to the Ontario Supreme Court.

The same kind of wares that Erotique tried to sell are available in a Toronto shop, Lovecraft, the newspaper says. In an obscenity trial this month, Judge Stanton Hogg directed the jury to acquit Lovecraft on grounds that sex aids serve the public good.

There was no immediate comment from Eaton's or Consumers.

First Oil Rig from Shipyard

The first oil rig to be built at the former John Brown shipyard at Clydebank, Scotland, is towed into the fitting-out basin by tugs. The 230-foot-long rig was built just over a year after the yard, where the famous Cunard "Queens" were built, was converted to the building of rigs. The rig, designed for use in the North Sea, can withstand winds of up to 125 miles an hour and can operate in water 200 feet deep. (CP Photo)

Tentative Agreement Is Reached By Wellington Board and Teachers

TORONTO (CP) — Education Minister Thomas Wells announced Sunday night that a tentative contract agreement has been reached between the Wellington County separate school board and its teachers.

Contracts and dismissals in five districts where resignations of a total of 2,600 teachers are scheduled to take effect Thursday.

Mr. Wells, who during the last week has held talks with both sides in several of the disputes, said earlier he was optimistic agreement would be reached in the outstanding contracts before the resignation deadline.

Contracts still have not been reached with secondary school teachers in Prescott-Russell and York County and with separate school teachers in Essex, Windsor and Perth-Huron.

Mr. Wells, who announced earlier that tentative agreement had been reached with Carleton separate school teachers, said negotiations were held in Toronto with Prescott-Russell representatives Friday and he was hopeful the talks would resume today.

York County negotiators, who began talks here Friday, still were at it Sunday night and a government mediator was to go to Windsor today for negotiations, an education ministry spokesman said.

Meanwhile, The Globe and Mail says leaders of Ontario teachers privately are confident the government won't recall the legislature to pass an emergency bill to prevent teacher resignations in the five disputed districts.

The newspaper quote an unnamed source as saying the confidence of the leaders results from a meeting they had last Thursday at Queen's Park with Premier William Davis and Mr. Wells.

Mr. Wells has said the government has made no decision on whether it would recall the legislature to pass legislation which would stop teacher resignations.

Huge Traffic Jams Caused By Wildcat Railway Strike

LONDON (CP) — A 24-hour wildcat rail strike cut services for British commuters between 50 and 80 per cent today and caused huge traffic jams.

British Rail said commuter services from the south into London's Waterloo Station were cut by 80 per cent. Services from the east and the north to London terminals were down 50 per cent.

Hundreds of trains were delayed or cancelled. Traffic into London was moving at three miles an hour on congested roads from the south.

Signalmen and rail clerks defied leaders of their own union and said they will not work today to protest being sent home Sunday without pay.

The signalmen, guards and porters have been drawing pay as usual for weekend time but for seven weeks have been unable to work because of the ban on weekend work by engineers and firemen demanding wage increases in excess of anti-inflation ceilings.

Meanwhile, representatives of Britain's employers warned that the three-day week introduced at the start of the year because of fuel shortages, is beginning to cut production figures.

Leaders of the Confederation of British Industry (CBI) meet Prime Minister Edward Heath today to review production figures in the light of the short-

The London Chamber of Commerce said Sunday that production by firms on the three-day week was down to between 70 and 75 per cent, compared with 85 per cent two weeks ago.

Parole Chairman Wants Revisions

TORONTO (CP) — George Street, chairman of the National Parole Board, called Saturday for revisions in the Criminal Code and related provincial legislation to give convicted persons sentenced to mental institutions the same privileges as those in penitentiaries.

At present, Mr. Street said, it is difficult for the board to release a person confined to a mental institution "because the board gets no jurisdiction to grant parole to inmates in a federal or provincial prison."

He told the closing session of the Ontario Psychiatrists Association that prisoners committed to mental hospitals do not receive the benefit of time off for good behavior and the board does not receive reports on their progress.

Mr. Street suggested legislation that would make it possible for the board to consider prisoner-patients for parole directly from the mental institution without the necessity of having them go through the prison system.

Psychiatrists already are involved in the parole decision-making process, especially regarding sexual offenders, murderers and other prisoners convicted of crimes of violence, Mr. Street said. However, the board makes the final decision whether to release a prisoner.

He suggested that prisoners on parole, who are undergoing psychiatric treatment as a parole condition should be treated differently from other patients

"If we do grant parole we may state that one of the conditions of parole is a continuation of treatment.

"If that happens we expect, if while treating a patient who is on parole, a psychiatrist discovers some factor—such as violation of parole—that we will be told."

Favor Strike

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP) — Union Gas Ltd. employees voted 97 per cent Sunday in favor of strike action to back contract demands, a joint announcement from the International Chemical Workers' Union (ICWU) and the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers' International (OCAWIU) said.

However, negotiations between Union Gas and the 550-member ICWU and the 700-member OCAWIU resume today in London, Ont. Members of the 15 bargaining units have been in a strike position since mid-night Friday night.

Issues in the dispute have not been disclosed by the sides.

Airport Hangar Burned

CARP, Ont. (CP) — A fire at the airport here caused an estimated $1 million in damage Sunday when the hanger of Bradley Air Service burned.

Fire chief Ken Bradley said explosions as the gas tanks of four airplanes in the hangar exploded, the structure was destroyed before firemen from three adjoining townships could put the fire out.

Destroyed in the blaze, sent from downtown Ottawa 20 miles to the east, were a single-engine Cessna 172 and a Piper Cherokee and a DC-3 as well as two automobiles parked near the hangar and a quantity of snow-removal equipment inside.

Lorne Bradley, nephew of the former owner, said the planes alone were worth $700,000.

No one was in the building at the time, the last workmen having left at 5:30 p.m., about an hour before the blaze broke out.

Saved from destruction by the heat generated were 34 small aircraft, moved to a safe distance by firmen and workers at the field.

Ones used as an alternate landing field to the international airport in Ottawa, the airport here now is mainly used by private pilots and charter companies and as a landing school by the ministry of transport.

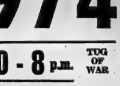
LINDSAY, Ont. (CP) — Two persons were injured Saturday when a light plane slammed into a tree while taxiing for a takeoff at Lindsay airport about 20 miles west of Peterborough.



Police said the plane is owned by Air Lindsay.

Shots Fired, Trucks Burned

Violence Flares On U.S. Roads

CLEVELAND (AP) — More trouble flared along northeastern Ohio highways overnight as independent truckers carried their protest against high fuel costs and low freight rates into its eighth day.

At least two shooting incidents were reported.

The incidents followed a day of violence Monday during which police in Pennsylvania and Ohio reported arrests, gunshots, burned rigs and truckers being beaten and threatened.

Spokesmen for the truckers who are attempting to shutdown traffic denied responsibility for the violence.

In Washington, D.C., Monday night, special presidential assistant W. J. Usery promised the truckers that help from the government is on the way and called for an end to the protest.

But George Rynn, president of the Council of Independent Truckers, said in Ohio the protest will continue until the federal government takes concrete action to alleviate the truckers' problems.

And newly-formed truckers' groups across the U.S. are calling for a national shutdown Thursday.

In Ohio, a Continental Baking Co. driver said a pickup truck pulled beside him on an Akron expressway and someone inside fired a shot through his cab a few inches behind his head A B. and L. Motor Freight Co. driver said he saw three vehicles following him and heard gunshots He later discovered a rear tire shot out.

Pennsylvania State Police said they had reports early today of rocks or bricks being thrown through the windshields of two moving trucks but said no one was injured.

Incidents Sunday night and Monday in Ohio included the beating of two men while they were making deliveries in a bread truck. An Illinois man was shot in his right shoulder while driving near the Pennsylvania boarder.

Truckers in Ohio and Pennsylvania reported Monday that their rigs were hit by bullets.

The protest centres on demands for a guarantee of lower prices for diesel fuel and increased freight rates to make up what truckers are losing to high fuel prices and lower speed limits.

Higher Prices Likely

14 Countries Short of Food

OTTAWA (CP) — While Canadians are preoccupied with rising food prices many areas of the world are going hungry, the annual agricultural outlook conference was told Monday.

A. G. Leeks of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) said that while food production is always vulnerable to weather, the world population relentlessly grows by "about 80 million people a year."

"The FAO maintains an early warning system of food shortages, and its latest report lists no less than 14 countries with current shortages," he said. "Fourteen more countries face a danger of poor harvests."

Mr. Leeks said the present world food shortage, "probably unprecedented in its extent," originated through a combination of short-term events being superimposed on long-term trends.

"This now has been joined by radical economic changes, arising outside the agricultural sector, whose consequences for agriculture cannot yet be fully assessed," he said referring to the energy crisis.

On the domestic scene, consumers were told they may see food prices levelling off this year, but say relief would be temporary.

Andre Raynauld, Economic Council of Canada chairman, warned that because of the energy crisis the trend toward higher prices will continue.

"Given current economic conditions, persisting bottlenecks for basic products and the costs of energy, significant slowing of the rate of increase of prices is unlikely in the near future"

And Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan reiterated that consumers still are getting a bargain in food and indicated any speculation that food prices would drop this year should be rejected.

"In an interview, he said it was obvious that if farmers are going to be faced with increasing energy costs, "the costs for their produce must rise accordingly."

Oil Prices Will Rise Unless Inflation Curbed

VIENNA (CP) — Industrialized countries have been warned by a spokesman for oil-producing states that oil prices will rise unless inflation is controlled.

Dr. Abderrahman Khene of Algeria, secretary-general of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), said that when the oil-producing countries set the government share of the posted price of crude oil at $7 a barrel last December, "they knew that the market value was well beyond that figure."

"They were, therefore, aware that in so doing they made great sacrifices, particularly for the benefit of the industrialized countries, which use 85 per cent of their production," he told the Austrian Society for Foreign Policy.

He said that in return the industrialized countries should "do something in favor of the world's economic order, notably in controlling inflation which they export everywhere, causing ever more untenable monetary conditions for the countries of the Third World."

The finance ministers of OPEC continued today to discuss a new petroleum pricing policy.

Inflation Profits Assailed

TORONTO (CP) — Arthur Meen, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Toronto York East, charged Monday that many companies are profiting from inflationary trends by raising prices more than cost increases warrant.

Mr. Meen, who also is parliamentary assistant to Ontario Treasurer John White, told the Lesaide Rotary Club:

"Obviously, this practice compounds the inflation problem.

"We believe that corporations would be acting more responsibly if they passed along only their increased costs and no more.

"Helping to hold the lid on inflation that way is hardly a great sacrifice—especially since it helps business and industry as well as everyone else in the long run."

Mr. Meen said inflation, especially when it hits food prices, invariably brings demands for price controls, but such controls seldom achieve what they intend to accomplish.

"Instead, they encourage shortages. Suppliers hold back their foods, waiting for the controls to come off, or if they can, they export the goods at better prices than they can get on the domestic market.

"In the long run, price controls discourage investment and production, and sooner or later they also encourage black markets and other sorts of under-the-table dealing."

Daylight Time Mistake?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation was introduced in the Senate Monday to repeal daylight time in the United States during the winter months. "It's time to recognize that we may well have made a mistake" in approving winter daylight time, Senator Dick Clark (Dem. Iowa) said in a speech.

Banks Eye Arab Money

BEIRUT (AP) — Foreign banks are scrambling into the banking scene in this Lebanese-capital to get some of the new wealth flowing into Arab coffers as a result of oil-price increases. The Arabs' take on the crude oil they sell the big Western companies has jumped more than 400 per cent in the last year, to $7 a barrel from $1.55. The Arab oil states are expected to earn about $50 billion dollars this year, and much of the money eventually will be channelled through Beirut.

Consul Thought Dead

BELFAST (AP) — Rev. Ian Paisley said today he assumes that the Roman Catholic guerrillas of the Irish Republican Army have killed a kidnapped West German industrialist because the British government wouldn't negotiate for his release. The government revealed Monday that it rejected an ultimatum Dec. 30, purported to be from the IRA, that Thomas Niedermeyer, the honorary West German consul in Belfast, would be killed unless the government transferred eight young IRA members from a British prison to jails in Northern Ireland.

NICOSIA (AP) — President Makarios of Cyprus has proclaimed amnesty for imprisoned members of Gen. George Grivas's underground in honor of the 75-year-old guerrilla leader who died Sunday. Labor Hits Red Boss Of Miners

LONDON (AP) — "The Labor party accused a Communist leader of Britain's coal miners today of using the miners as a "political battering ram" to force a strike in a bid to bring down an elected government.

The party, which gets most of its political and financial support from labor unions, said in a rare public censure of a union leader that it "utterly repudiated" the Communist tactics.

Although the document did not mention any names, it was clearly directed against Michael McGahey, vice-president of the National Union of Mineworkers (NUM) and a member of the Communist party. He has been touring Britain seeking support among miners for a strike. The miners have been on a work slowdown for 12 weeks.

The Labor party condemnation followed a toughly-worded attack on McGahey and the Communist party by Prime Minister Edward Heath in a television interview Monday night.

Sharp Opposes Using Products As Weapons

MEXICO CITY (CP) — Canada's External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp warned developing countries Monday against using their raw material products as political weapons against industrialized countries.

Sharp, here for a Mexican-Canadian joint ministerial conference, told reporters he believed countries exporting raw materials will achieve increased influence in world affairs in the near future.

He said: "I am in agreement that these products—grains, oil, minerals—should help raise the standard of living for the peoples who produce them, but they should not be used as political weapons."

Auld Asked to Discourage Landfill Garbage Disposal

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — City council called on Ontario Environment Minister James Auld Monday to "publicly discourage" use of landfill as a means of garbage disposal by cities.

The resolution also asked the minister to introduce legislation this spring restricting landfill garbage disposal to municipalities under 100,000 population.

Council said the means are available for partial reclamation of material and energy.

The resolution sid larger municipalities not only produce proportionately larger quantities of garbage, but have proportionately larger financial resources to adopt new techniques for recycling.

The resolution did not specifically mention a proposed landfill site in nearby Hope Township, but asked the minister to discourage such projects until the legislation is passed.

Last week Mr. Auld inspected the Hope Township site proposed for Metropolitan Toronto's garbage. He refused to say whether he would approve the site, he said it was published as an interim measure.

Bolivia In State Of Siege

LA PAZ (CP) — Bolivia was under a country-wide state of siege today as armed farm workers barricaded roads and threatened to open fire on troops of President Hugo Banzer's right-wing government.

Banzer declared a state of siege, one step short of martial law, Monday night as more than 10,000 peasants blockaded all highways from agricultural areas in southern and eastern Bolivi to the heavily-populated highlands.

The roadblocks held up vegetables, fruit, sugar and other supplies to cities already suffering food shortages.

The peasants said they were protesting Banzer's doubling prices on basic foodstuffs a week ago—to stop the smuggling of food to neighboring countries where prices are higher, the government said. Since the increases, workers have been staging a series of one-day strikes, and the government has arrested six labor leaders.

Petition Demands Rochdale Closure

TORONTO (CP) — A petition bearing 2,200 signatures was presented Monday to Premier William Davis requesting for a judicial inquiry into Rochdale College and other co-operative student housing in the province built by federal funds.

The petition also demanded the immediate closure of Rochdale.

A spokesman for the premier said the request had "just been received and would have to be studied."

Ernie Koffman, chairman of the group, said in the demand that the federal government had poured $1.3 million into Rochdale in the last two years at a time when the co-operative was "completely in arrears" on its 15-million federal mortgage.

The petitioners accused the federal government of "dragging its feet in foreclosing Rochdale and defiantly refusing to investigate the co-op housing mess in Ontario."

All are bankrupt or in "financial chaos" the petitioners said.

They mentioned Ottawa's Pestalozzi College and Toronto's Neill-Wycik College—among those in the province built by $32 million in federal funds.

Subsidy Could Prove Costly

TORONTO (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner says the federal government should not bear the full cost of subsidizing eastern oil prices, or raise equalization payments to provinces to reflect rising oil royalties in Alberta.

He told the Canadian Club Monday that it could cost more than $1.5 billion to cushion eastern consumers against higher prices of imported oil.

It would cost another $2 billion if the federal government were to agree to raise equalization payments to match higher oil royalties flowing to the Alberta government as a result of higher oil prices.

"I don't like a solution requiring the cost of a price shelter and the cost of equalization to be taken out of the pockets of Canadians, rather than from the pool of revenue that has traditionally become available in the course of higher prices."

In the text of his speech, recorded to reporters before delivery, he did not say whether he favors the oil companies or the Alberta government be shares the cost of subsidizing eastern consumers.

But he reiterated the point he made at a conference of finance ministers last week that he opposes increased equalization payments linked to higher oil prices.

Prime Minister Trudeau and the provincial premiers agreed last week that Quebec and the Atlantic provinces would receive federal funds until March 31 to prevent further widening of the price difference between imported and domestic crude oil. .

But there is still no agreement on how subsidies will be financed after March 31, in the period when the price of domestic oil will be permitted to rise.

The eastern provinces have been pressuring for subsidies as well as increased equalization payments, which go to all provinces except Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia.

Telecare Calls Calls for Help

"The typical call to Telecare is one that is very unatypical. It is someone calling for help."

This sums up the average call taken by a Telecare volunteer in the Belleville area, said its director here, Ted Milliken.

"The typical call comes from someone who has a problem he can't cope with," added Rev. Bill Lamb, of Toronto, national director of the organization and who at one time had a ministry in Belleville.

"The main problem we deal with is loneliness. We deal with someone who wants to talk to someone. For this reason we often ask the name of the person who is calling in," said Mr. Milliken.

Belleville can take pride in being second Canadian city to institute a service such as Telecare, one which started in 1967. Sudbury was the first Canadian city to do so. The newest Telecare centres will open in North Bay on Feb. 14.

Since the time the organization was started, it has grown to become an important service in 19 cities in Ontario as well as in Vancouver, Manitoba.

There are 90 volunteers from 21 to 65 who man the phones day and night in Belleville. If the problem is more serious than the volunteer can handle, the caller is referred to expert professional help.

"The important thing to remember," said Mr. Lamb, "is that those who work with Telecare are not professional people. They go through a one-day-a-week training course for 17 weeks before they are accepted.

"We are looking for those with personal maturity. Those who know where they are and those who are aware of the services in the community. They should know that help is sometimes a referral when the caller to someone who knows about the problem," said Mr. Lamb.

Since Telecare was set up in Belleville in October of 1969, a total of 11,000 calls have been made to it as of last week.

"The average level of calls in Belleville is about 2,000 calls a year," said Mr. Milliken.

Mr. Milliken says that just as there is no typical caller to Telecare there is no typical time for most of the calls.

"We do find that the evenings do seem a bit busier, though. And we are getting a lot of calls at this time simply about financial problems. I guess that has to do with paying Christmas bills or the seasonal layoff," observed Mr. Milliken.

Belleville is one of two Ontario cities offering financial counselling services. This was started about a year ago and so far bonBury is the only other community offering this service. An office manager accountant is available to offer his help.

For those with legal problems, the caller is referred to Legal Aid, their own lawyer or a student lawyer from Queens' University working through the United Community Services.

Mr. Milliken notices that the period before Christmas and during summer holidays is a trying one. "While the calls seem to be fewer during those periods, those that we do get are of a serious nature.

About one call a month can be classed as a serious call, someone who is having a serious personal problem and may even be wishing to kill himself.

Said Mr. Lamb: "A person who calls us with suicide on his mind is going through a struggle between the life wish and the wish to die. Often we think we couldn't call us," he said. "We try to talk them out of it."

"A lot of our callers have problems with developing meaningful relationships. Drugs, sex, alcohol. This is all a longing for relationships. But sometimes fantasy gets in the way and this results in an inability to appreciate the situation," said Mr. Lamb.

About twenty-five of the Telecare volunteers are women. "Maybe this is because they are more available to handle our calls in the day," said Mr. Milliken.

Some of the volunteers at Telecare have said that themselves have been helped by someone who took the time to listen to their problems.

One unique service of Telecare in Belleville is a daily reassurance call to senior citizens. A service started in last fall.

Finances for Telecare come from private donations. "In fact most come from the community. We have volunteers paying for the privilege of working for Telecare," said Mr. Milliken.

Yearly operating costs now come to $4,000 a year. The telephone bill alone is $35 a month. "We don't get too many long distance calls," said Mr. Milliken.

"The important thing is that we are dealing with someone who has a problem and can't cope with it. It's someone asking for help. It's someone reaching out for others to help him," said Mr. Lamb.

Reaching for Telecare

Sometimes a person's problems can be more than one can handle. Problems of despair, frustration are often alleviated by someone willing to lend an ear. This is where Telecare comes in. In Belleville, this service has been helping callers cope with their problems since 1967. Here, national director of Telecare, Rev. Bill Lamb, standing, receives the phone from local director, Ted Milliken.

Go-ahead Seen On Subdivisions

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — A number of subdivisions, delayed because of inadequate sewage treatment facilities in town, may soon be given the green light, with the announcement last night of a major sewer renovation scheme.

Subdivision construction in town was blocked a number of months ago because the province feared sewage treatment facilities would be overtaxed.

The problem became more complex following a study by Gore and Storrie outlining massive infiltration of water in the treatment plant.

It has been estimated the town is spending $600 a day treating water that need not be treated through cracks in pipes percolating ground water and other seepage into the treatment system.

Ministry of the Environment officials met with town council Monday night and were optimistic about the reports findings and the course the town has decided to take.

In a lengthy proposal to council, Arnie Hoornweg, acting commissioner of works outlined the work intended for the next three years that would all but eliminate infiltration of the system, saving the $600 a day.

In Mr. Hoornweg's report, this summer the town would under take $200,000 in work on the system. By the end of three years the town will spend more than $600,000 completing the work.

Bob Dunn, ministry engineer, told council "this is a strong indication the municipality is doing something to correct the situation," and he would personally give the subdividers approval to go ahead.

Mr. Dunn, following council's approval, asked for a copy of the resolution outlining the works that initially would affect the downtown section. This resolution would then be forwarded to the Ministry of Treasury, Economics and Intergovernmental affairs. This ministry is finally responsible for lifting the subdivision ban.

CORTS: Trenton Marina 'Should be a Priority

TRENTON—The CORTS recreation-environment study as it affects the Trenton area will be the subject of discussion at a public meeting in the Community Gardens Feb. 13.

The report was briefly outlined at Monday night's council meeting with project co-ordinator David Bates placing much emphasis on Trenton's geographical location.

Mr. Bates told council Trenton had much to offer to the area's recreational potential because of its location at the mouth of the 425-mile water course leading from the Bay of Quinte to Lake Simcoe. It is this watercourse that was the jurisdictional interest CORTS (Canada-Ontario-Rideau-Trent Study).

Town clerk D.W. Larry queried Mr. Bates about sponsorship of the study and what form the recommendations would take and the cost responsibility.

Mr. Bates said the study was undertaken by both provincial and federal governments and both would provide financial contributions to accepted recommendations. Mr. Bates urged it would be to the town's advantage to "create a pretty face," Trenton's waterfront.

Mr. Bates said a great deal of the resulting action from the report would depend on final involvement and many of the recommendations would require more effort than money.

Most of the money will come from the federal and provincial governments... very little from the municipality," he said.

He said improved marina facilities should be a priority for the Trenton waterfront, Trenton, he said, has a "very decided role," concerning the boater.

Planning for the recommendations he said should originate in the municipality and schemes should not be forced upon Trenton by other senior governments.

He did say professional planning staff were available to help.

The CORTS study will be presented to both senior governments sometime in March for their approval.

Purpose of the February public meeting is to get feed back that might modify the data as to local needs and desires.

Robbie Burns Night

'Twas Haggis, the Pipes and Kilts

The second annual Robbie Burns Day was celebrated by Picton Kiwanis Monday night at Inn on the Bay.

The banquet was officially opened by a procession of members and guests dressed in Scottish kilts, led by Ormand Reid of Bloomfield, playing the bagpipes.

Following a Scottish blessing, the Haggis was blessed in traditional manner.

Following dinner correspondence concerning the international meeting of Kiwanis representatives in Denver was read. Also received was an invitation to the annual Kiwanis Curling Bonspiel in Oshawa, February 13.

Chris Lockyer helped officiate the induction of George Ross, formerly of Scotland, to the Picton Kiwanis.

Guest speaker, Dr. Robert Buckner, of Wellington spoke on Robert Burns and quoted from many of the poet's famous works. Through his speech, Dr. Buckner introduced many of those in attendance to the thoughts and beliefs of the legendary poet.

President Paul Brown officially closed the Kiwanis celebration assuring everyone that next year the Kiwanis agenda more than likely would include celebration of another Bobbie Burns Day Banquet.

Church Vandalized, Youths Charged

By RUBY McCOY
Staff Correspondent

MARMORA — Four area youths have been charged in connection with vandalism of a church and burglary and damages to a home near here.

Two of the four also have been charged with wilful damage to mailboxes.

Charges of break, entry and mischief and theft have been laid against Murray McGregor, 16, Richard Carman, 20, both of Marmora township, Frank Redcliffe, 18, and John Hutchings, 21, say provincial police at Marmora.

Discovery of the break-in and damage to Beaver Creek Church was discovered Saturday morning by Brian Bertrand on his way home. He notified police at 8:30 a.m.

At the church a number of windows were broken, a large box stove weighing 70 lbs. was overturned, and ashes scattered around. Curtains used for separating Sunday school classes were torn down. Sunday school papers were thrown on the floor and trampled, typewriter overturned and stove pipes pulled down.

The vandals also tried to start a fire in one of the pews with papers on top of a Bible and they tore a light off the pulpit, said police.

The country church, built in 1855, with volunteer material and labour, has about 35 Sunday School pupils every Sunday and once a month evening services are held there. Mrs. Marion Barrons is superintendent and teacher. Other classes are taught by Mr. and Mrs. Everett Derry and Mrs. Luella Bonter.

This is the second time within a year that the church has been hit. In June of last year someone tore off gates and overturned a toothstone in the graveyard at the back of the church.

The Douglas McQuigge home at RR 1 Marmora, was also broken into Friday night. Mr. McQuigge is a patient in a Toronto nursing home but some of his family are generally there on weekends.

Seven mailboxes on the boundary road north of the turnoff to Cordova were damaged or torn off their posts. The culprits picked every other one along the road. McGregor and Carman have been charged in connection with this incident.

Tackle Town Hall Troubles

TRENTON — Deficiencies—that seem to have plagued Trenin's new town offices should be cleared up shortly, following a letter to council from contractor Mirron Wiggers.

The firm has been in contact with town officers and meetings will continue this week.

Heating specialists have visited the building and for the moment at least, all seems satisfactory.

Town clerk D.W. Larry, who at a recent meeting brought to council's attention coolness of offices, pointed out last night, tests on the heating plant had been conducted in warm weather and the real test would be when seasonal temperatures return.

Contractors are determining who is to blame for leaks which have sprang up around the building and say they will be rectified.

Prince Edward Winter Playground, Sports No Longer Tied to Summer

By DEBRA HOOK
Staff Correspondent

Prince Edward County's reputation as a much favored summer tourist area is rapidly changing.

Over the past few years enthusiastic members of the community have emphasized the need for more winter sports and recreational activities. Not only does the county have organized team sports but also recreational facilities and privileges for the individual to enjoy.

The Prince Edward County Community Centre offers winter sports for everyone. The arena houses Picton and Wellington minor hockey, Prince Edward County Men's Hockey, Women's hockey league and the Wellington Intermediate Hockey League.

The arena is open to the public for a small charge of $5 cents and 50 cents on Wednesday from 4-5.30 p.m. and Sundays 1-2 p.m. for children; $4 p.m. for adults.

For a small fee, members may join the Skating Club which operates from the arena. The club gives courses with professional instruction for those who wish to learn the art of skating.

Ice-fishing is a sport that has attracted many members of the county for years. It's an individual sport since there is no club. One of the places where one can observe the fishermen is in Wellington at the channel where small huts have been erected. There is generally quite a few people out at all times, when weather suits.

Although the weather prevented an earlier season, fisherman report that it has been a good season. Some of the fisherman have found that there is less work in walking and transporting the catch to the mainland. Snowmobiles have lessened labor and increased enjoyment in many cases.

Snowshoeing is becoming more and more popular in the area. There is a club organized, at this time, but due to the number of participants in this sport it is felt that a club will be formed next winter.

McCauley Mountain, the local ski site has had a slower year because of the late winter. Even so, the ski area has had good turnouts on the days when ski conditions were favorable. Equipment is available to the public but non-members may pay $3. a day. Membership may be obtained or fees paid daily at the clubhouse which is situated at the bottom of the run.

Quiet Provincial Park is open this winter to all snowmobilers. The campsite roads are used as the trails with clearly marked road signs for the snowmobilers safety.

In Prince Edward County there are three clubs that are affiliated with the Ontario Federation of Snowmobiling Clubs.

Anyone is welcome to join these clubs. One club, The Picton Bay Snowriders, charges six dollars for membership fees. This charge also makes them members in the federation.

Many rural areas in the county have snowmobile trails situated away from the high ways and county roads. Keeping clear of traffic is one of the safety measures that many of the snowmobilers are very concerned with.

Viewing the progress that P.E.C. has made in the past few years with winter sports, many residents feel that it is inevitable that more and more sports, facilities and clubs will be established in the future that will create a new industry, Winter Tourism.

Ministry Caution

Temperatures Up --So Is the Water

TWEED — Mild, wet weather has raised the water level in Quinte area waterways and cautions have been issued against use by people.

Lakes in this area are up six inches and river levels are ranging six inches to a foot higher, the Ministry of Natural Resources reported here today.

The ministry monitors Moira River at three different spots in this area.

Forest streams are "full and running strong, creating a hazard to the unwary," says the ministry!

The danger is acute around shorelines, many of which are open.

There is heavy slush on all lakes creating poor conditions for sportsmen.

Skiing and snow shoeing is poor while snowmobiling not considered good in most areas.

Continued mild weather soon the depth of snow in the bush was at 18-20 inches, way below the depth common to the time of year.

The return of cold wintry weather with stabilize conditions again, says the ministry.

And it Still Goes On!

There's good news and bad news from the Quinte weather forecaster tonight.

First the bad news: If you're being bothered by higher-than-average water problems due to unwintery weather it's more of the same.

But for those basking in the respite the temperate trend will hold in for a few more days at least, indicates the CFB Trenton duty forecaster.

High today is forecast at 35 degrees, low overnight at 32; Wednesday's High may reach 40 and the low cool down to 32 while the high Thursday will be back up to 35. Friday it could be even warmer - - again - - maybe with a high up to 35, said the forecaster.

County Recycling Seeks Paper

MARMORA — Residents in the Marmora, Madoc and Tweed areas are being asked to support a paper re-cycling drive that is being organized for this weekend by Grade 9 students and staff at Centre Hastings Secondary School in Madoc.

Donations of newsprint, magazines and cardboard boxes are being sought. Residents are requested to tie their donations in bundles and deliver them to:

B.P. Oil Limited parking lot, Bell Rexdrew St., Marmora, I.G.A. store parking lot, Madoc; and Wilkie Motors parking lot, Tweed.

Students will be on hand at the various depots on Feb. 2 from 2 p.m. to 9 p.m. and on Feb. 3 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

If the collections are successful students hope to continue the project on a regular basis. All profits, after expenses, will be divided between Marmora, Madoc and Tweed and used to some worth while project.

REAL ESTATE:

A BETTER BUY

Sure - mortgage interest rates are higher than they were. But so are the market values of homes and land. Please believe me when I say that even at today's inflated prices and interest rates, real estate is a better buy than anything else you can go after with borrowed dollars.

Financing for other purchases often costs twice as much and these things depreciate while a house usually grows in value. Check the trade-in value of your car when you turn it in for a new one. Also, for the past ten years, real estate values have doubled the increase in the Dow Jones average.

In this sense, real estate is the most worthwhile investment you can make, and your best protection against inflation. And don't forget the priceless dividends your family will enjoy as you live in your growing investment.

Detroit Faux-Pas

Detroit Mayor Coleman Young, running the kind of problem-plagued city he does, may have more reasons than most for not having time for itinerant photographers seeking a few minutes of his time. Even when the photographer is the Earl of Snowdon on assignment for The London Sunday Times.

But nor can Mayor Young, a Negro, expect to win any new friends by such an attitude, for it suggests he has no time for people, be they photographers, husbands of Royalty or whatever. A break in his routine could have been stimulating, a show of courtesy toward a visitor from overseas far from being been amiss.

As it was, even the mayor's top aide was not immediately aware that the visitor was the husband of Princess Margaret — by which time the damage was done. All in all Lord Snowdon may not feel too kindly toward Detroit. He was taken to police headquarters after photographing an arrest in the city's downtown area. But then, Detroit is about the most crime-ridden community in the United States, and this sort of thing might be expected. The police clearly are in no position to take chances, for pictures in the paper could jeopardize their own safety.

As for Lord Snowdon, he seems to be following his own career more and more, according to what little we hear of him these days, while news of Princess Margaret's doings is even less scant. These marriage rotorietly just had its ups and downs and in any event, from this distance, they are largely out of the public eye.

The spotlight these days is on Princess Anne and husband Lt. Mark Phillips who have been visiting Otawa before flying on to New Zealand. Their presence has been a further sign of Canada's traditional welcome for members of the Royal Family and an indication that the idea of republicanism, if an occasional talking point, is not a concept that may be anticipated in Canada in the foreseeable future.

Turbo on Track

Success — at last — for the CN's embattled Turbo train. CN says the Turbo trips frequently have been sold out during the past month, that it has performed faultlessly and, get this, the company is adding another train to the run.

We understand that unlike the early Turbos a few years ago the train's staff are all male. But wouldn't it give the service added charm and guarantee of success still further if stewardesses were aboard.

As it is, the train's future seems assured. Some words of a philosopher called Guicciardini come to mind: "Persistency is everything. It is not enough to set a business going, to give it direction, and a start. You must follow it up, and never take your hand off until the very end."

Pay the CN this kind of attention is paying off.

More Like Spring

We heard that a winter carnival somewhere had to be postponed a week because of the unco-operative weather. And the midforties temperatures in Kingston Sunday was a record, the highest in almost a century, according to a weather report from that city.

Over at Zwick's Island the flooding resulting from melting snow, and spilling over almost onto the road, looked more suitable to a swimming carnival.

Let's hope we have more suitable conditions before the Belleville carnival gets under way this week.

One event that should not be affected is tomorrow night's carnival queen contest. There are about a dozen pretty girls from home and abroad seeking the title and it is going to be one of the highlights of the week.

Nixon Conference Could Flop

Countries Try to Save Their Own Skin In Oil Crisis

By BUD JORGENSEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

President Nixon's grand plans for a conference of major oil-consuming countries may turn out to be an inconclusive affair with participants more eager to watch the back door so they can slip out and resume negotiations on private deals with the Arab states.

The suggestion that the oil consumers can and will be ready to form an alliance against the price-boosting authority of the oil producers appears to be largely a political ideal which must be matched against hard - headed realities of fuel-hungry countries as they scramble to sell anything from food to arms in exchange for oil.

Herman Kahn, the "think-tank" expert of the Hudson Institute who has made a career of predicting economic developments, says he regards the oil weapon to lose its potency as producer states are courted into making separate deals.

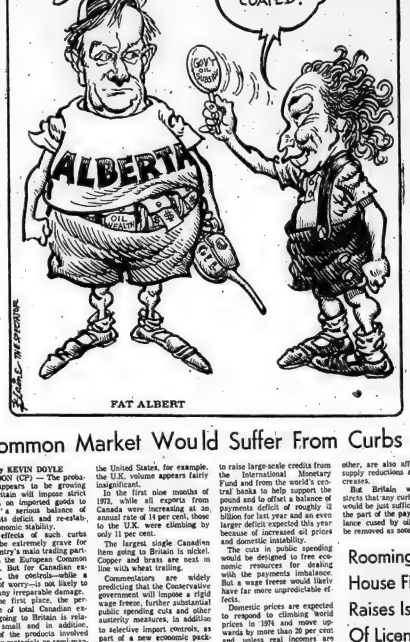
Kahn may be right but current developments suggest the Arab states still wield great power to persuade consumer countries to change foreign policies in return for assurance on oil supplies. There appears to be little prospect of the industrial countries forming a strongly united club to gang up on the small but oil-rich Middle East states.

Instead, in desperate need of oil, individual countries appear likely to settle for short-term security and give less thought to the need for multilateral cooperation or long-term security and prosperity.

Two British cabinet ministers will try to persuade the Shah of Iran to exchange oil for British steel, cement, rubber, paper or whatever else the shah may want. French Foreign Minister Michel Jobert is offering the Middle East arms for oil. West Germany is offering a complete refinery to Iran. Italy is also on the road in the Middle East and so is Japan.

In effect, it is every man for himself.

This scramble is of particular concern to the United States which long has maintained its leadership over the West. Its Middle East policy is based on firm support of Israel. But many Western countries slipped away from endorsing the American viewpoint just as soon as the spectre of oil cut-offs loomed.



Japan was a major example of how the supposed solidarity of American foreign policy became fragmented. From an expression of sympathy for Israel the Japanese government quickly switched to a call for Israel to vacate lands it had captured from the Arabs in the 1967 war.

Undoubtedly Nixon may hope that the Washington conference of oil consumers next month can produce concerted pricing policy and reassert the importance of American leadership on the Middle East issue.

The need of assured oil supplies is vital to the industrial countries. But the big jump in Arab oil prices is also of major importance. Any proposal by the U.S. that would help moderate prices would be highly attractive in consumer countries.

But consumer countries are not waiting to see what the U.S. can produce. They are scrambling for oil and every working against each other to get the best deal possible.

Recriminations over the rush to make separate deals may surface when the governments come to make decisions on other major issues, such as monetary reform and trade liberalization. The quarrels may add to the problems and threats of further national economic weaknesses.

Common Market Would Suffer From Curbs

By KEVIN DOYLE

LONDON (CP) — The probability appears to be growing that Britain will impose strict controls on imported goods to correct a serious balance of payments deficit and re-establish economic stability.

The effects of such curbs would be extremely great for the country's main trading partners in the European Common Market. But for Canadian exporters, the controls—while a cause of worry—is not likely to cause any irreparable damage.

In the first place, the percentage of total Canadian exports going to Britain is relatively small and in addition, most of the products involved are raw materials or semi-manufactured goods which would likely be largely exempt from any controls.

Value of Canadian shipments to the United Kingdom in 1972 was $1.3 billion, or 6.6 per cent of the $20 billion total Canadian exports. Compared with Canadian shipments of $14 billion to the United States, for example, the U.K. volume appears fairly insignificant.

In the first nine months of 1973, while all exports from Canada were running at an annual rate of 14 per cent, those to the U.K. were climbing by only 5.5 per cent.

The largest single Canadian item going to Britain is nickel. Copper and brass are next in line with wheat trailing.

Commentators are widely predicting that the Conservative government will impose a rigid wage freeze, further substantial public spending cuts and other austerity measures, in addition to selective import controls, as part of a new economic package to coincide with massive international support for sterling.

The pound has been plummeting on foreign exchanges, declining at times to about $2.16, compared with $2.60 in June 1972, when it was allowed to float.

Britain appears to be hoping to raise large-scale credits from the International Monetary Fund and from the world's central banks to help support the pound and to offset a balance of payments deficit of roughly $2 billion for last year and an even larger deficit expected this year because of increased oil prices and domestic instability.

The cuts in public spending would be designed to free economic resources for dealing with the payments imbalance. But a wage freeze would likely have far more unpredictable effects.

Domestic prices are expected to respond to climbing world prices in 1974 and move upwards by more than 20 per cent and, unless real incomes are allowed to keep pace, more militant union action seems inevitable.

Many governments would likely fear that a resort to import control by Britain might set off a form of trade war among all the industrial countries which, in one way or another, are also affected by oil supply reductions and price increases.

But Britain would likely stress that any curbs introduced would be just sufficient to offset the part of the payments imbalance caused by oil and would be removed as soon as possible.

Rooming House Fire Raises Issue Of Licence

Peterborough Examiner

Another detail has come to light concerning the tragic Christmas Day fire that took the lives of three Burnham Street residents.

Two of the dead were roomers in the house of Eric and Edna Becher. Mrs. Becher herself died in the blaze that left her four children and her husband homeless.

Going through the men, John Joseph Poulter (McGuire) and Thomas John LeClair, were living in the house, it appears the Bechers had not licenced their residence as a rooming house, as required by a city bylaw.

While it does little good now to wonder if a licence could have prevented the fire or saved any of the lost lives, we can learn from Monday's council meeting.

Ald. Holt wondered aloud what use the city bylaw on rooming house licences is if people are going to disregard it.

"We've just had another example where there's been three deaths," he said. "I don't understand it. this house was not licenced. This is the second or third one to my knowledge."

It is difficult to estimate the number of unlicenced rooming houses in the city. Total enforcement of the bylaw is almost impossible. But each unlicenced operation increases the possibility of another tragedy like the one on Christmas Day.

Northern Ireland's Shaky Hold On Government

By ROD CURRIE

LONDON (CP) — The ugly violence that marred the first appearance of the three-party Northern Ireland executive in the Ulster Assembly appears to be hastening the abandonment of Loyalists' threat to render the legislature unworkable.

After more than an hour of disruptions and adjournments, those who lingered in the public gallery finally witnessed the historic sight of Protestant and Catholic politicians sitting together on the government benches for the first time, enduring the mundane matter of a residency for the Speaker.

The 18 rebel Loyalists later changed tactics at the Wednesday session and staged a walkout. But they remain determined to upset the power-sharing agreement on which the new start in Ulster is based.

Supporters of the power-sharing plan suggested the rebel loyalists were bound to mend their ways in the face of public disapproval of the opening-day spectacle. Nevertheless, the noisy scenes and the deliberate walkout fuelled speculation that Brian Faulkner, the Assembly's chief executive, might be forced to an election or referendum to determine whether the majority supports his moderate plan or the alternatives offered by the Loyalists.

Other forces were at work to make even more difficult the task of the fledgling executive under the first minister and deputy minister.

For a start, his Unionist party picked former agriculture minister Harry Flavin as chief Faulkner's power-sharing philosophy, to succeed him as party leader.

And in Dublin, the government's failure for bipartisan support for the so-called Sunningdale settlement, hammered out by delegates from Britain, Ulster and the republic last December, was threatened by opposition Fianna Fail backbenchers. They are upset that the full agreement makes light of the republic's constitutional claim to a united Ireland and instead acknowledges that there can be no change in the status of Northern Ireland until the majority there agrees.

Observers are convinced that if the Irish government gives less than whole-hearted backing to the deal it would inevitably undermine further the current delicate political position o Faulkner, since he has boasted that the republic now acknowledges Northern Ireland as part of the United Kingdom.

Loyalists who broke from the majority Unionist party and assembled under the banners of Rev. Ian Paisley and William Craig are vigorously opposed to the power-sharing with the Catholic minority and to the proposed Council of Ireland.

Instead, they demand restoration of the old Protestant-dominated Ulster parliament.

Although Faulkner remains head of the executive, he resigned the party leadership after a majority rejected Irish policies. His successor's first official act was to invite Paisley and Craig, who are opposed to the new Assembly's power-sharing executive, to rejoin the fold.

Throughout, Faulkner has maintained that although rejected by his own party, he still enjoys the support of the majority of the Ulster people. He believes they are eager for peace and a stable government, even if it means working with the Catholic-based Social Democrat and Labor party, and the non-sectarian Alliance party.

Faulkner supporters also argue that the more the Protestant majority can dissipate their strength by wrangling and splitting into warring factions the greater will be public support for the power-sharing idea.

City Groups And The Budget

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

It will soon be time once again for those perennial budget time bandits, the YMCA, the Chamber of Commerce and relative newcomer, the United Community Services in the race for the annual handout from the taxpayers' money.

In the past there have been many valid objections to this practice, which over the years has become a formality.

Large sums of the taxpayers money are turned over and no accounting asked for.

The YMCA should tell their bosses in "General Funds." The Chamber applies funds to "Civic Beautification" while the UCS mainly uses theirs to supplement the wages of a "professional worker."

When you consider the YMCA takes from the Belleville Y and add the tax concessions and grants a generous council provides, their take of public money is in the region of $40,000 per year.

The Chamber has managed to boost its ante up to $10,000 and the UCS slightly ahead of them to the tune of $12,000.

In the case of the UCS 'who receive money from the United Way grant from City Council and recently with a $5,000 legacy, there are certain questions I would like answered.

1. Will the $5,000 be deducted from their United Way allocation or will it be considered a fringe benefit?

2. To what this particular organization charge the other social agencies who are supported by public funds, rent for rooms in a house bought and maintained by the taxpayers?

3. What was the $1,800 they "wrote off for the Citizens Bureau?"

Population Strains Wheat Yield

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

World reserves of wheat and grain, badly depleted last year, could be replenished if 1973 brings (a) a bountiful crop and (b) reduced demand for protein-rich food among affluent nations.

That's how the president of the world's biggest maker of farm equipment sees the agricultural outlook for this, the year of the energy crisis.

But, says Massey-Ferguson's A. A. Thornbrough, the longterm prospect is for a strong, steady rise in the worldwide demand for food—and, hence, for the fertilizers and machinery that help to produce food.

"Population growth remains the leading cause of increased demand for food," he said.

"With a net increase of two per cent annually, world population will double in little more than 26 years.

"Hence, food production must be doubled over the next generation if even current consumption—already inadequate in many areas—is to be maintained."

The publicly shy Toronto-based head of one of the world's major multinational enterprises made his forecast in West Berlin at the annual International Green Week.

This is—or was, when I last attended it in 1970—a Teutonic, mid-winter version of the fall county fair and food sale. Hundreds of exhibitors—competitively display food in every conceivable form that might appeal to German gourmands (which is difficult), plus livestock, machinery and agricultural chemicals.

In the highly industrialized countries, per capita grain consumption is nearly 2,000 pounds per capita. Less than 300 pounds are consumed directly, with the rest being accounted for by our consumption of meat, milk and eggs.

In contrast, annual grain consumption in poorer countries averages about 400 pounds per person—most of it consumed directly, rather than after conversion into animal protein.

Whether or not the credit is due to such food promotions as Green Week, the fact is that the demand for more varied food, with higher protein content, is rising rapidly and contributing to the threat of food shortages cited by the Massey-Ferguson president and others.

That demand becomes intensified when it is reflected in the farm-machinery industry, because the agricultural market slow-down of a few years ago prompted many farmers to postpone new purchases of tractors, combines and the like.

Now the rush is on to replace obsolete or worn-out farm machinery, and to acquire larger equipment to cope with the growing trend toward specialization in farm size.

When you combine the farmers' increased plant outlay—which must be passed on as part of his production expenses—with the demands of an expanding world population and higher dietary expectations, the inevitable conclusion is that consumers will be fortunate to escape food-price increases commensurate to the current increases in energy costs.

Hastings System Studied

Hastings county board of education is unique in the province in decentralizing its decision-making processes.

The opinion is that of Niagara South board, who sent a task force to Belleville specifically to study the workings of the county administration.

The special task force from Niagara South was set up by its board to observe "efficient and effective boards in operation," study their methods of evaluating personnel, their administrative structures, general policy and decision-making processes.

Three Nagara South superintendents, Donald Reilly, William Smith and John Tickle attended last night's board meeting to watch policy-making in action and were invited to remain for the closed committee of the whole meeting after the public session.

Director of education Eric Runacres cited one example of a Hastings county practice that is considered unusual in other parts of the province. Trustees here are welcome in the schools and "know what's going on." They frequently draw administrators' attention to situations both good and bad and eliminate potential problems before they grow serious.

Trustees with other boards are unwelcome in the schools they control and are often unaware of the scope and quality of learning in their schools.

The Niagara South board of education has about 42,000 students under its jurisdiction. The members of its task force remained in Belleville Tuesday to study the local school situation.

Sidney St. Rebuilding Imminent

The reconstruction of Sidney Street north from College to Tracey Street could be high on the city's road building priority list.

This was indicated by Mayor Robin Jeffrey at Monday's traffic and light committee meeting.

Mayor Jeffrey didn't elaborate stating that the reasons would be placed before council at its next meeting when the city's proposed road building program would be presented.

She said, however, the fact that engineering for the road reconstruction was all but completed and a sidewalk on the west side of the street was to be constructed this year, was a factor to be considered.

In the past few months area residents have complained of speeding on Sidney Street, also its narrow width and absence of sidewalks making it dangerous for children.

Last year also, two teenaged pedestrians were fatally injured on the street when struck by a car.

In other business at the relatively brief committee meeting, Alderman Paul Russell suggested that a traffic study be done for North Park Street.

The alderman said that an increasing number of motorists are using North Park Street at an alternative to North Front Street and suggested the artery be made a through route.

The matter was referred to the police department for study.

Potential Educators' Concern

The goal of education is to help each child realize his full potential, Hastings county director of education told members of the Quinte Chapter of the Society of Industrial Accountants at its last meeting.

Both teachers and parents have the responsibility to assist the student in reaching his potential, the director said. The school system is only as good as the society it serves, said Mr. Runacres, and requires the support and understanding of society.

Speaker at next month's will be an ACCO executive, who will discuss profit planning.

River of Sorrow?

Last week's mild-winter thaw caused headaches all along the eastern portion of Harvest Cres. in Belleville. Residents in that area have been trying for nearly a year to have their property properly graded and drained. Little has been done to assist them and when the snows melt the water pours into their basements or forms ponds up to a foot deep in their back yards. Last week, Andy Halla m (standing) and Lory Doucet, two Harvest Cres. residents, attended city council's last meeting in an attempt to get council's assistance in forcing action from Central Mortgage and Housing, the Ontario Housing Corp., and the builder, Stirling Lumber Co.

Glenarden Homeowners Facing Water 'Hazard'

Home ownership is far from easy for the residents along the eastern and southeastern portions of Harvest Crescent in Belleville.

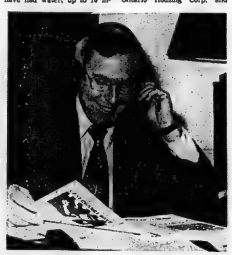
Last week a group of residents from the city's Glenarden housing subdivision presented a brief to city council saying that they had tried for nearly a year, without success, to have Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. or Ontario Housing Corp. improve the drainage situation in their area.

The residents, participants in the Home Ownership Made Easy program, moved into their Harvest Cres. homes during the summer of 1972. Since that time they have been plagued by periodic flooding of their basements and back yards.

Andy Hallam, spokesman for the Harvest Cres. residents explained, that ever since they moved in, residents with property bordering on the back yard boundaries of homes along Lexington Cres. have had water, up to 19 inches deep, ponding on or flowing through their back yards.

"The situation is both hazardous and detrimental to the safety and health of the children in this neighbourhood," Mr. Hallam said.

"Housing lots on Lexington Cres. are as much as two feet higher than those on the east side of Harvest Cres. and in some cases sump pump drains are flowing directly into the backyards of Harvest Cres. lots. As a result of these drainage problems, large portions of the Harvest Cres. back yards are unusable for part or all of the year. The value of the property to the owner and to the city as a whole is reduced drastically by having such a disgraceful hazard and eyesore."



Mr. Hallam went on to explain that under the Home Ownership Made Easy program, responsibility for seeing that the Glenarden subdivision was properly drained lay with the builder, Stirling Lumber Co., the Ontario Housing Corp. and Central Mortgage and Housing Corp.

Last week's appeal to city council for help was the first step in a group approach toward solving the problem. Mr. Hallam said.

In the past, individual Harvest Cres. residents made representations to all three parties involved in the development of the subdivision, but nobiwe was done to rectify the situation.

By enlisting the aid of the city council and by banding together, the Glenarden residents hope to change that situation.

"We'll have to do something about it soon." Mr. Hallam said, "Last week's thaw gave us nothing but headaches. Several people ended up with flooded basements and there are pools nearly a foot deep in some yards. After Saturday's rain, I had water pouring though my basement windows. It's going to be a lot worse in the spring, though. When the snow melts and the ground thaws we are going to have more water than we can possibly handle."

Smith Soon to Take New Job

Belleville Man Will Manage Mall

As of Friday, Feb. 1 the store Quinte Mall will come under the guiding hand of a new general manager.

Fred Smith, 32, a life-long Belleville resident will step into the management shoes vacated by George Pouparé. Mr. Pouparé will become manager of another enclosed mall once it is complete in spring 1974 in Newmarket.

Mr. Smith, formerly the manager of AVCO Financial Services in the mall, said Monday, the change in jobs has been "in the fire for some time."

During the past year and a half, he has been studying the job he will occupy at the week's end. Literature from Cambridge Leaseholds Limited, the mall's owner, has been the source of most of the self-training he's done.

At present, Cambridge controls six enclosed malls along with 18 strip plazas. The Quinte Mall, valued at $7 million at time of construction, employs 200 people full-time with parking facilities available for 1,700 cars.

City and Albert College Negotiating Land Swap

The city traffic and light committee still feels council should hold out for the 66-foot right-of-way between Wellington and Sidney Streets at the north end of Albert College property in exchange for the closing of Hentry Street.

This was the recommendation Monday at the request of the college was returned to the committee for further consideration.

Last year the college asked the city to close the unopened Henry Street right-of-way which runs south from Parker to Dundas Street near the east end of their college buildings.

Since the college site was changed to Dundas Street from College Street about 50 years ago, the unopened Henry Street has been used as part of the institution grounds.

Now the college would like to see the street officially closed to enable it to build additional staff residences on Parker Street.

But the city does not wish to close the street unless it is given another right-of-way across college property to provide a westerly exit from Wellington and Parker Streets. Negotiations between the college and the city regarding a possible new right-of-way have been going on for several months.

Monday, traffic committee chairman Alderman Jack Ireland said the position being taken by the college board was that the failure of the city to close Henry street years ago was actually an error and that the municipality should now act on the college request.

But City Solicitor John Miller said it appeared the city had deliberately allowed the street to remain open or steps would have been taken to close the unused right-of-way.

The last offer of the college was that it would exchange 30 feet across the north end of its property in exchange for closing of Henry Street.

But this is unacceptable to the city because an additional strip of land would be required from Emerson Optical to provide the necessary 66-foot right-of-way. Also, a hydro easement would run down the centre of the 66-foot right-of-way.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey wondered whether the city is being "just and fair" in asking for the 66-foot strip.

City Engineer Wilbur Purcell said the actual areas of the two sections of land involved in the trade-off were almost the same.

The Henry Street right-of-way is 50 feet wide and is

Pleads Guilty To Fraud

A Belleville man was sentenced to five months in jail yesterday after he was convicted on 11 criminal court of seven fraud and false pretences charges.

Gordon Allen Stewart, of Belleville, pleaded guilty to the seven charges that involved a total of $167.17 when he appeared before Judge J. L. Clendenning.

All seven charges arose from incidents during December and January in which Stewart purchased merchandise from a variety of Belleville merchants using cheques drawn on non-existent bank accounts.

OPP Don't Have Road Information

When it snows, the bells ring and ring at the Ontario Provincial Police detachment in Belleville.

Police report that during a bad winter snow storm they receive as many as 125 telephone calls an hour from people who want to know what the driving conditions are like throughout the province.

The police would mind the company so much, but they say that they are unable to help the callers.

The OPP does not have a road condition referral service in Belleville.

That job is done by the department of transportation and communications in Kingston.

Callers who want to know what the road and weather conditions are like throughout the province can call the 24-hour road report service by dialing — 544-2220.

If you call the OPP that's the number they will give you.

Convicted, on Probation

An Oshawa man, convicted Jan. 7 of three charges of possession of narcotics, one charge of false pretences and one charge of theft under $200, was yesterday given a suspended sentence and placed on two years' probation when he appeared before Judge J. L. Clendenning in provincial court here.

Stephen Andrew Soules, 20 was arrested by police Nov. 30 after he was found driving along Pinnacle Street in a car he was exhibiting for sale some plates that belonged to another vehicle.

An investigation into the incident revealed that Soules also had two stolen credit cards in his possession.

Soules had used the credit cards and the licence plates, which had been taken from an abandoned wreck, to fraudulently obtain gasoline, oil and cash from service stations in Sidney Township and in Oshawa.

When he was a service station attendant in Oshawa, Soules had used the two credit cards to hide the theft of $70 that he had taken from the till.

On Nov. 10, he used one of the stolen credit cards to purchase $12.28 worth of gasoline and oil from the Towers Gas Bar on Dundas Street West.

In passing sentence, Judge Clendenning said that he had taken into consideration the fact that Soules had spent three weeks in jail while awaiting the completion of a pre sentence report. That period of incarceration was warranted, the judge said, because of the nature of the theft charge from the service station in Oshawa, where Soules had been in a position of trust.

Terms of the probation order included a stipulation that Soules pay $182.26 restitution to the court and that he not drive a car for the next 12 months.

Classes to Move

Grade 7 and 8 home economics and industrial arts courses will be transferred from Queen Alexandra School to Queen Victoria School.

Queen Alex is soon to open as administrative headquarters for the board, and students from Harmony School in Thurlow and Queen Elizabeth School were to continue to use the basement home ec and shop rooms, on a temporary basis.

Permanent rooms for these courses were to be built as an addition to Queen Elizabeth.

But, trustees were told last night, the Queen Elizabeth addition would not be available until September, 1975 and the building program at Queen Alex is hazardous for pupils.

Cost of moving equipment from Queen Alex to Queen Vic and reconnecting it will be about $4,000.

Harmony students will be bused to classes at Queen Vic and Queen Elizabeth students will walk.

Hold up on the Queen Elizabeth addition is mainly out of education approval and money.

Conference Cutback For Education Board

As part of the educational belt-tightening, the number of approved conferences and conventions has been cut this year from 35 to 21.

Six of he approved conferences will be held in Canada, the remainder in the United States.

The board of education, in consultation with administrators, each year approves conferences it feels are meaningful for delegates from the county system. The list include conferences for trustees, administrators, business personnel, teachers and principals.

Director of education Eric Runacres said that only 16 of he 33 approved conferences were attended by county delegates last year. Of last year's budget of $9,000 for conference expenses, only $6,000 was spent.

This year's tentative budget allocation is $6,000., subject to approval when the budget is passed.

Hit-run Trial February 5

David James Harold Bolton, the 19-year-old Peterborough man charged with criminal driving and failing to remain at the scene of an accident following the hit-and-run death Friday of Frederick McDonell of Stirling, appeared before a justice of the peace in Belleville yesterday and was released on his own recognizance.

In a brief courtroom appearance, Bolton was released on a promise to appear in provincial court in Belleville Feb. 5.

Math Contest February 6

Elementary school students will now have a chance to compete in a mathematics contest.

Several provincial and national contests exist for high school students, but the BCI Math Contest will be the first for students in lower grades.

Contest manager is BCI teacher David M. Handley who compiled the test that will be written by grade 6 to 8 students.

Schools participating are Queen Victoria, Queen Elizabeth, Queen Mary, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Sir Winston Churchill, Kente in Ameliasburgh and St. Michael's.

Alderman George Zegouras felt the suggested even trade of Henry street for a 66-foot right-of-way between Wellington and Sidney Street was fair, even though the right-of-way the city would be getting was slightly larger in area.

"Frontage on Dundas Street is more valuable than that on Sidney Street," he said.

The committee recommendation to council was for an even trade of the properties.

Ann Landers

Reader Feels Better Not Sending Letter

Dear Ann Landers: I know I will never see this in print because you don't believe people like my mother exist. Well, I'm writing to you anyway. It will make me feel better.

My mother drove me absolutely nuts. We moved 1,100 miles away in the interest of self-preservation. Even that didn't prevent her from making my life miserable—by mail.

She wrote nearly every day, giving me hell for something I said or did 10 years ago. Each letter described a new illness. Last year she was sure she was suffering of cancer. I phoned her doctor and he said it was ridiculous. Her tests were perfect.

After that scare I bet her what I'd laid her that I hope I will have her strength and vigor when I am her age—that she should be thankful and stop complaining. Her reply: "If you can't write a decent letter to your sick old mother, I'd rather not hear from you."

It took her six years and she stopped writing. I send a gift on her birthday and at Christmas and she receives a plant for Mother's Day, but we have no other communication. Maybe I'm a rotten kid in your book but at least my stomach is no longer tied in knots and I don't shake when I see the mailman coming.—Free At Last.

Dear Free: There are some extremely exasperating mothers in this world, and to pretend they don't exist is sheer lunacy. But it's too bad you didn't get those letters years ago and learn to cope with the situation instead of running away from it.

Children can't change their parents but they can unload their anger on professionals, get to know the whys and wherefores and learn to look on themselves against a positive, dumbowning or dependent relative.

It's difficult but not impossible to love the unlovable, and they, of course, are the ones who need love most.

Dear Ann Landers: How about printing the other side to the "Shistered Ear Lobes" sad story? Sometimes the girl who sold magazine subscriptions on the phone and was cussed out regularly for "a lousy $2 an hour."

I'm Average Joe Citizen. I am sick and tired of being blasted by billboards, neon signs, TV and radio commercials, newspaper and magazine ads night and day. To have my personal telephone used as a cheap method for selling is an invasion of privacy and it burns me up.

I invariably get those pesky phone pitches when I'm in the shower, eating, or reading something fascinating or trying to sleep. (My wife is a nurse and we both work irregular hours.) People should be able to leave their lines open for important calls and not have to pull out the jack in self-defence.

I agree with Lobes that foul language is inexcusable, but I can see how those calls could make a person lose his temper. I have a stock answer. Here it is: "This is a private phone for MY convenience. It is not intended for soliciting." Then I boycott the product.

If you are fair, I will see this in print.—Peace Weary

Dear Weary: A surprising number of readers agree with you. I'll tell you what I told them.

You have a right to privacy and you can insure it by getting an unlisted number. It is, however, a legal method of selling and some people appreciate the convenience of buying something over the telephone.

Nutritionists Focus on New Problems

TORONTO (CP) — There is a shifting of gears going on as a result of the first Nutrition Canada report; as nutrition experts look for new ways to get at Canadian dinner tables.

Prof. Heather Milne, says the first results of the nation-wide nutrition survey, published in November, showed up problems that have not been a focus of professional concern.

Prof. Milne is a nutritionist with the department of nutrition at University of Toronto.

"The scope of nutrition problems is bigger than it would have predicted, and many of the problems occurred in adults and older people," she said in an interview.

"The report can help us focus our attention. This country doesn't suffer from a lack of programs, but traditionally we work on programs for children and pregnant women.

"We may have to change programs. Some of the materials and techniques are not sophisticated enough. Canada's Food Guide isn't useful for everyone."

She said there is no one solution to the approach to Canadian food problems. Some foods may have to be given a nutritional boost, some food habits may have to be altered, and in some cases more money will have to go to poor people.

"In spite of rising food prices, we still consider ourselves to be affluent in terms of food supplies. But if we get people on the economic borderline, their diets may get worse.

"There are nutritional programs, but there is no compensation for the working poor. You can reach a point where there's simply not enough money. That's when I think we have to take a look at some of our social policies.

"Health, education, agriculture and social services are all involved."

She said she believes the publicity surrounding the Nutrition Canada report is useful because it makes some people aware of potential problems, and therefore reachable.

"Now, if the challenges a homemaker faces is food and nutrition. If she recognizes it as a challenge, she can do something about it."

Prof. Milne acknowledged that for such a person, the current flood of nutrition information and apparent disagreement among nutrition spokesmen is confusing.

"In some respects nutrition is an old science. You can trace diet and diet therapy back to the Book of Daniel.

"We know a lot about nutrition, but we don't know enough. For instance, we can trace elements. Even if we fortify convenience foods, will we miss some of the things in natural foods?

"We don't know all about the inner-relationship between nutrients, between nutrients and health, nutrients and drugs."

Prof. Milne has two suggestions for those concerned about nutrition.

If you think you might have a physical problem related to diet, check with your doctor. She says most provinces now have laboratories able to pinpoint some specific nutrition-related problems.

If your concern is more general, and you're not sure what authority to trust, she suggests you put your faith in university sources because they have no axe to grind, or in government information.

Blyth: Not Always Good Girl

LOS ANGELES (CP) — Ann Blyth hasn't always played good little girl roles—at 15 there was her movie role in Mildred Pierce as a sexy charmer who led to the murder of her mother's husband.

That role in the late '40s—one of the 30 or so movies she made—"let something to the imagination, instead of spelling it out as they do now." It is one reason she seldom sees a script nowadays she could accept.

"I haven't yet played in anything I'd be ashamed to let my children see and I'm not about to change. . . .

"Three of her five children are teen-agers; two are in college.

Looking far younger than her work years might suggest, big-eyed and reddish-haired, Miss Blyth is happiest talking about her 20-year marriage to Dr. James McNulty, the children and the theatre that has been a part of her life since she began singing at 5 on radio.

Although most people now think of her as retired, she has been active in theatre, supper clubs and television for the last 10 years.

In her opinion the theatre has changed because the players have.

"There is a whole new breed of actor emancipated. You cannot blame them at much as their parents or writers who influenced them during their formative years. The attitude was let them do as they like, good or bad, so now they have the ability but they don't know how to channel it. If everything were to cease for them, they wouldn't have anything to fall back on."

Discipline is important for anyone, she said, but actors really need it. Whether her own children choose acting careers is up to them; meanwhile they have been provided with a foundation of love and discipline which will help them in whatever they do.

"Our children have a sense of responsibility and they work for special things they want whether it is new skis or something else."

Discipline has made them accept her work in stride, too. They think of her as "mommy who also works."

"I took the girls to Milwaukee to watch me perform in South Pacific and Maureen, 18, observed, 'Gosh, you really do work hard.' They show no desire to be involved although Kathleen, 16, is especially talented."

The older girls make their own clothes and have worked at hospitals on summer vacations and after school.

"Lines of communication are always kept open with our children. I would much rather have youngsters explode so I know what they are thinking than to have them keep it all bottled up."

She feels religion is important because youngsters need that kind of direction, but she and her husband are prepared if they decide to give it up—they won't push them or they might drive them in the opposite direction. Recently they rushed home from a football game to hear Kathleen sing and play at her first guitar mass.

"Some parents miss the opportunity. If a young person wants a parent to accompany him to a religious service, no matter what the faith, a parent should go. Another week might be just too late. They might become absorbed in unfortunate substitutes."

Miss Blyth and her husband are engaged in many charitable enterprises involving children. The principal one right now is the right-to-life hot line.

"Jim and other doctors are offering their services to women who will have their babies rather than abort them. There is no longer a stigma about unwed mothers and many people are keeping their babies, but the situation rele is horrendous and some young women have died. Whether a woman is married or not, if a life has begun, it has a right to live."

Successful Living

Love Eliminates Injustice

By DORIS CLARE

When a person begins to say that a tradition is "crazy" he can be touching the very heart of the whole civilization.

There are very few men who, like Gandhi, have been able to question deeply one aspect of human without threatening its essence. Gandhi was able to say in the 1930's:

"If I discovered, if somebody tried to prove to me, that the untouchables are part of the real tradition of Hinduism, I would revolt against it."

Gandhi accepted an untouchable girl; he worked as the untouchables worked, cleaning latrines every day. He identified himself with the untouchables in such a way that whenever he went to the cities he should always live with them.

Ministers and ambassadors who wanted to see him would have to go into the slum areas where the untouchables were. This is how Gandhi felt —He tried to live the essential traditional love — eliminating the exterior rituals or laws which in many ways took over to safeguard a way from it.

— Jean Vanier, in "Followers of Jesus".

Dear Doris: It is comforting to have you express conviction about the importance of faith in our lives. When someone is placed, as you are, in a position to exert influence in human lives, and have a sturdy Christian faith as the foundation of your counselling, it stirs real hope in the hearts of many of us.

So many people who are occupying similar roles scoff at anything not coming out of a test tube! It is oh, so true, that "man does not live by bread alone", and to find you agreeing is wonderful.

Dear Thoughts: I have often found that there are many persons among us who cling with great determination to the Faith of Our Fathers, but hesitate to affix their necks out in company — or in print.

For some reason or other, we become uncomfortable or diffident, about mentioning the name of God or His Son.

I know one theologian-educationist-social worker who says he tries to make it a practice, every day, to at least register once the fact that he is a practising Christian. How many of us have the courage to do that? And yet, the believer on the ones who can stay on a steady keel when amicable storms make the unbelievers stumble.

Dear Doris: My father was only six months old when he came to Canada with his parents from Russia. If we remind to China and had a child there would that make the baby Chinese?

Who Am I?

Dear Who Am I? Anyone who was born in Canada is a Canadian — and that means, just! You can't even lose your Canadian status if you marry an alien (which you didn't) without legal action. (There is a Canadian Citizenship Act which enables a Canadian woman married to an alien, whose husband has been accepted on marriage, to get rid of her Canadian citizenship by filing a declaration of renunciation.)

Anyway, that sister-in-law is just trying to make trouble. You may have attended the Mennonite Church, but you did not join. And you are now United Church members. You are Canadian. Your S.I.L. is one who is showing her ignorance.

Working at her craft is Joan Ellis who with husband Bob has opened a needlecraft shop in their home. Long-time needlepointers, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis planned the shop as a retirement project. Mr. Ellis soon retired from the Canadian Forces.

Needlepointers Open Shop

Twenty years ago, needlepoint became a hobby for the Ellis family. Last October it became an avocation. Next year, when Bob Ellis retires from the Canadian Forces, it will become a "livelihood for Joan and Bob Ellis.

The Ellis's needlework shop in the family home west of the city, was opened in October.

"We decided it would be a good idea as a retirement project," Joan Ellis says, "and we opened the shop, too, because we couldn't get all the supplies we needed for our own work here."

The lack of supplies, which plagued the couple through 20 years of moving from one Canadian Forces Base to another, planted the idea of the shop.

"Everywhere we lived there was a shortage of supplies."

The family interest in needlepoint began when Mrs. Ellis bought a petit point kit of Little Bo Peep and Little Bo Peep at the Canadian National Exhibition.

After struggling with the intricate work, she gave up in disgust.

"My husband decided he'd fit up the mistakes and finish it and we were started."

A specialist in petit point, perhaps the most refined form of needlepoint, Mr. Ellis works on fine silk mesh or gauze with cotton or silk floss. There are from 18 to 40 stitches to the inch.

Called chart work, Mr. Ellis follows a printed diagram to carry out a design on the unmarked mesh.

Mrs. Ellis also uses the chart method of working. She carries designs by hand on Penelope or canvas with five to 16 stitches to the inch. She, too, sometimes does petit point.

All of the supplies necessary for needlepoint - - retrieving years of frustration for the Ellis - - are carried in the shop. They sell any sizes of canvas, needles, painted canvases in both needlepoint and quick point, and worked center canvases requiring only the background to be filled in. And, of course, wools.

"We decided to be successful we had to carry all colors of wool," Mrs. Ellis says. They have a range of 197 colors in tapestry yarn, besides crash yarns, persian yarn and some cotton floss.

Now permanently settled in Belleville - Mrs. Ellis great-grandmother, grandmother and mother lived here - - the pair hope to expand the business to include a framing service for their clients.

Women in Pantsuits — Not a Local Issue

Cynthia Campling, a law student articling with a Kingston law firm, lost her job a month ago as a result of her dress.

Or rather, for not wearing a dress.

Mrs. Campling insisted on the right to wear pantsuits to work, and refused to bow to her employer's regulation that women cannot not wear pants in his office.

Walker Visser, of the law firm Speal and Visser, told Mrs. Campling it was a "standing rule" not to wear pantsuits in the office.

He said they were unfeminine, and made the secretaries jealous, and gave the office a bad image.

"I was informed I was a woman first and an articling student second," said Mrs. Campling in her statement to the Ontario Status of Women Council meeting in Toronto last week.

When, she continued wearing pantsuits, Mr. Viner spoke to her again about the feelings regarding womanly attire. Mrs. Campling explained that since she had no car, and walked more than a mile to work, pantsuits were a practical and warm fogon of clothing.

Finally, Mr. Viner issued a three-part ultimatum giving Mrs. Campling the choice of conforming to his ruling or leaving his employ.

Mrs. Campling chose to leave, and is now with the firm of Cunningham and Little.

In Belleville, the pantsuit issue seems to have been long settled.

A phone survey disclosed no employer who regulates against wearing slacks or pants to work unless there is a uniform to wear. Even then, nurses have white pantsuits to wear, ideal uniforms for the type of work they do. There seem to be no problems for women here to overcome other than occasional negative comments from men, who prefer to look at stocking-clad legs.

The change in attitudes took place between two and three years ago in most offices and schools. Women now wear pantsuits to work if they want to, as do staff in lawyers' offices.

The matter is left to personal taste in real estate offices, stores and banks.

The Bank of Montreal, for example, instituted a trial period in September 1971, during which tellers were "allowed" to wear pantsuits if they wished. The only stipulation was that the jacket of the suit should be threequarter length.

When sloppy and unseemly dress habits did not develop, the trial period simply extended into accepted custom.

The worry that pantsuits could lead to a female spree of tight jeans and baggy sweaters has gradually been dispelled as it inevitably intended men have had to admit that women in pants don't look so bad.

However, Belleville's only lady lawyer, Sidney Murray, doesn't ever wear pantsuits to work, and doesn't think other women in her profession should.

"A woman's image is very important in a job like this," Mrs. Murray says. "Men don't like pantsuits, and could be influenced adversely by a woman lawyer wearing pants.

"After all, men dress for work in suits and ties. I see no reason women shouldn't put the same amount of effort into their apparel.

"Nevertheless, I think Mr. Viner acted rashly in giving Mrs. Campling such an ultimatum. Surely a compromise could have been worked at."

Abortion Supporters and Opponents Hold Rallies, Marches Across USA

NEW YORK (AP) — Abortion supporters and opponents rallied, picketed, petitioned and staged symbolic funerals to mark the one-year anniversary of a Supreme Court decision which invalidated most anti-abortion laws.

In New York City, several hundred midtown Manhattan strollers crowded the steps of St. Patrick's Cathedral as a feminist group crowned a woman "pope." The bogus pontiff then issued an "encyclical" denouncing "1,000 years of blasphemous sexist oppression by the Catholic Church."

About 20 members of the New York chapter of the National Organization for Women demonstrated outside the Manhattan offices of Senator James Buckley, sponsor of an anti-abortion constitutional amendment. They carried chains and chanted: "Compulsory Childbirth Slavery for Women."

Terrance Cardinal Cooke, the Catholic archbishop of New York, repeated his support for the Buckley amendment.

About 10,000 persons gathered Tuesday at Independence Mall in Philadelphia for an anti-abortion [illegible] sponsored by the National Right to Life Committee, a constitutional amendment that would overturn the high court's ruling.

John Cardinal Krol, Roman Catholic archbishop of Philadelphia, told the crowd:

"No human has the right, the power, to say a human being is not worthy to life. A fetus is not a wart, not a tumor, it is not anything else but a human life. I do not stress it as a Catholic issue. This is a human issue."

Many at the demonstration were black arm bands. They carried signs reading "I'm Glad You Were Born" and "Thank God Mary Didn't Have an Abortion."

In Miami, members of a local Right to Life group, in more than 30 black-bannered cars, rode slowly past the Dade County abortion referral clinic at Jackson Memorial Hospital.

"This is a day of national mourning," said one demonstrator. "Since these babies killed by abortions are thrown in a garbage can and later incinerated, having no funeral or even burial, we are holding a symbolic funeral motorcade for them."

In Washington, D.C., hundreds of demonstrators took part in an anti-abortion March for Life that began and ended with speeches on the Capitol steps. Buckley urged the demonstrators to petition their legislators to seek discharge from committee of his amendment.

Meanwhile, a coalition of pro-abortion groups held an interreligious service at St. Mark's Church on Capitol Hill.

The Supreme Court ruled that state laws prohibiting abortion in the first three months of pregnancy were unconstitutional. It said that abortions after that were subject to state regulation.

Business and Professional Women met January 21 at the Sun Valley Motor Inn for the club's annual Public Affairs night under the chairmanship of Ellen Butler.

John Lenan of the Department of National Revenue was guest speaker and, to introduce his address, presented a film showing what happens to income tax returns forwarded to the Data Centre in Ottawa.

Mr. Lenan described the opportunity there is for members of groups and organizations to assist those senior citizens unable to prepare their own tax reports. He said training is available from the department for volunteers.

He outlined some of the problems arising like a tax payer using a coded form from another district, a husband filling out a return intended for his wife, missing T5 slips and the reporting of salesmen's commissions.

He described the income tax department's help as "approachable" by the public.

Mr. Lenan's advice was to read the guide and follow instructions carefully. He said payment of tax is investment in Canada.

After the speaker's address, the club's business period included discussion of plans for the coming year starting with International Night in February.

No Outward Indication Of Rhodesia Sanctions

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Shops and streets give an impression of abundance, with no outward signs that Rhodesia is subject to United Nations economic sanctions.

Eight years after the country's unilateral declaration of independence from Britain, which led to sanctions, shops in Salisbury are full of luxury goods.

The streets are lined with new cars. And though the Rhodesian motorist is being hit by the worldwide shortage of fuel, when the gas stations are open he can choose from the major brands.

French perfumes, English confectionery and American soft drinks are available.

A closer look reveals some effects of sanctions but for many consumers, particularly whites, they appear to be merely irksome.

Asked if anything was difficult to obtain, one Salisbury citizen's instant response was "razor blades."

A young woman complained about the lack of variety and style in women's clothes. "Whenever a new batch comes in, the prices are skyhigh," she said.

In restaurants, wine lists are often decorated with crosses to indicate what is no longer available. Scotch whisky is at a premium. Some firms are now producing Rhodesian whisky and one brand offers "imported Scotch malts blended with matured Rhodesian spirits."

A lack of foreign capital has caused shortages.

Companies are given a quarterly foreign currency allocation. In the case of the wine and spirits trade, for example, there is not enough to satisfy demands.

Import duties and sanctions have led to a thriving local industry in commodities. Many goods carry "Made in Rhodesia" labels.

Sources of external supplies are secret, with heavy penalties for anyone who discloses them.

But a glance at the map of southern Africa will provide a ready answer: The Rhodesian government was fortunate in having South Africa and Mozambique as neighbors.

The Johannesburg newspaper Rand Daily Mail said recently: "Ever since 1965, it has been an open secret that the country gets much of its oil supplies from South Africa."

South African influence is noticable in other ways. The theatres, run by Johannesburg-based corporations, show South African newsreels. Television, not in operation in South Africa, provides an outlet for South African performers.

The bulk of tourists who visit Rhodesia come from South Africa. Even though the oil crisis and reports of guerilla activity have led to a significant drop in numbers, new hotels have been built in several centres by South African-based concerns.

In a pre-Christmas boost for Rhodesian travelers, Finance Minister John Wrathall raised the holiday travel allowance by 100 Rhodesian dollars (about $175) to 400 dollars a year.

Wrathall said "good housekeeping" by his department had made this possible.

All of which makes some Rhodesians rather sensitive and led Prime Minister Ian Smith to say recently: "Even our enemies have conceded that we have beaten them in the economic war."

Free Driving Urged

TORONTO (CP) — The Canada Council of Young Drivers has recommended that driver education be offered without charge in all secondary school students in Ontario. In a brief to the Ontario government, the council contended that while only 19 per cent of the province's drivers are aged between 16 and 24, 30 per cent of all collisions and 32 per cent of fatalities on the roads involve this age group.

Airborne Music

Oil Disaster Studied

TORONTO (CP) — A group of Toronto scientists is studying the possible effects and the problems that would result from a big oil spill in Canada's North.

In 1970 the tanker Arrow ran aground releasing 16,000 tons of heavy busker oil into the ocean. The scientists say that oil still is present along the beaches of Chedabucto Bay in eastern Nova Scotia.

The question before them is their current study, says the University of Toronto news bureau in a release, is what would happen if a break occurred on land in the proposed pipeline pumping crude oil from the Arctic frontier down the Mackenzie Valley.

A multidisciplinary team from the university's Institute of Environmental Sciences and Engineering has been studying these questions, as a small part of the Arctic land use research program. This is a $20-million federal program to investigate the likely environmental and social effects of pipelines in the North.

The Toronto scientists have developed a detailed script of a pipeline disaster. They believe that a rupture would allow about 50,00... gallons of crude to drain onto the delicate Arctic tundra before the leak could be contained. In summer this would soak down in permafrost level, and spread like any other fluid through the extensive drainage system. In winter the contaminated area would be smaller since oil thickens with cold and is absorbed by snow.

In either case, the oil is lethal for many animal species and also to the sensitive mosses and lichens on the tundra.

This script has been prepared for observations in the laboratories and in the field. The team has made controlled spills of oil into an Arctic lake to measure the spread of the slick and its effects on living things.

They have spilled oil on snow, and have observed its flow under snow cover. They have returned to their spills to measure th crate at which different hydrocarbon components evaporate from exposed oil, and how this changes the oil's toxicity.

But, the news bureau says, the scientists still don't know how to clean up such a spill.

"What Canada needs is a co-ordinated and effective oil pollution research program," Dr. Donald Mackay of the oil and gas working group in the institute told the news bureau.

"There is an appalling lack of communication between government, industry and the universities on the subject."

Bowman and Francis In Battle of Words

CHICAGO (CP) — If the National Hockey League's 37th annual all-star game provides as much action as the pre-game verbal sniping, tonight's contest should be an exciting one.

More than 17,000 fans are expected to jam Chicago Stadium for the clash between the East and West Division all-stars that will be televised across Canada by the CBC starting at 7:30 p.m. EST.

Coach Scotty Bowman of Montreal Canadiens piloted the East Division team, and manager-coach Emile Francis of New York Rangers were the chief verbal adversaries Monday.

Bowman, chagrined by the loss of at least five key players through injuries, accused Francis of without player reinforcements for his team.

Francis lambasted Bowman for what he called an effort to embarrass the Rangers hockey club and said the East Division coach has "diarrhea of the mouth."

Meanwhile, Billy Reay of Chicago Black Hawks, who will guide the West Division team, has no injury problems.

Reay said Phil Esposito and Goldsworthy of Minnesota North Stars is the only doubtful starter on his 20-man roster.

Goldsworthy injured a knee Sunday night and Reay said he would go with 19 men if necessary.

Bowman has added defencemen Larry Robinson of Montreal and Jim McKenny of Toronto Maple Leafs and forward Red Berenson of Detroit Red Wings to complete his 20-man squad.

Bowman said Robinson and McKenny were added when Carol Vadnais of Boston Bruins and Serafim-born Bjorn Skaming of Toronto were not available.

Berenson agreed to play after centre Darryl Sittler of the Leafs and right-winger Rod Gilbert of New York Rangers declined invitations to appear.

Defencemen Jocelyn Guevremont of Vancouver Canucks was added after Guy LaPointe of Montreal and Bobby Orr of Boston were injured in Saturday and Sunday games respectively.

Bowman, who was allowed to add eight additional players to the 12 selected in a poll of Professional Hockey Writers' Association members, said centre and defencemen Serge Savard and centre Jacques Lemaire of the Canadiens, also due to injuries.

Bowman selected Henri Richard of the Canadiens as one replacement.

Centre Gilbert Perreault of Buffalo Sabres, one of Bowman's eight picks, also bowed out because he had not fully recovered from a broken leg.

Bowman said he asked Francis last week for Gilbert or centres Walt Tkaczuk and Jean Ratelle. But Francis said he told Bowman that Gilbert was having back problems.

"He (Bowman) didn't think it appropriate to pick any Ranger for a fill," Francis said. "If he wanted these players so badly, why didn't he ask them across his eight additions? I think he just tried to embarrass our hockey club right from the start."

Bowman said his choice of the additional eight players was made on the basis that each of the eight East Division clubs must, under NHL regulations, have one representative on the team.

He said he had added such players as right winger Mickey Redmond from Detroit, defenceman Denis Potvin of New York Islanders and right winger Bobby Schmautz of Vancouver to round out the division's representation.

Bowman said veteran forward Frank Mahovlich of Montreal also was in the fill-in group because, if necessary, he could be used as an extra defenceman.

5-goal Third Period Produces Whaler Win

BOSTON (AP) — Anytime a hockey team scores five goals in the final period it deserves to be called a great comeback.

Whalers did Monday night.

"This is a great win and a great comeback," New England head coach Ron Ryan said after the Whalers rallied for a 6-4 World Hockey Association victory over Vancouver Blazers.

It was the only WHA game played.

The Whalers spotted Vancouver first-period goals by Cecil Campbell, John McKenzie and Rob Wallon before rebounding to boost their lead in East Division to six points over Toronto Toros.

New England began its comeback with a second-period goal by Tom Webster. Then the Whalers tied the game on goals by Brad Selwood and Tom Earl.

Mike Byers put the Whalers ahead for the first time midway through the final period, but John Miszuk tied it for Vancouver 30 seconds later.

The Whalers kept shining and regained the lead on John French's 17th goal at 11:05. Two minutes later Dave Ley added an insurance goal.

Ali Gets the Nod

The Master Craftsman Too Good for Slugger

NEW YORK (AP) — "All hail Ali!"

The yells of the crowd in Madison Square Garden were music to Muhammad Ali who won a unanimous decision Monday night over Joe Frazier to avenge an earlier defeat at the hands of the one-time world heavyweight boxing champion.

The verdict in the 12-round slugfest brought the crowd of 20,748 to its feet and made Muhammad the No. 1 threat to the title held by big George Foreman.

"George Foreman...fights like a girl," Ali said. "Joe Frazier is a good fighter, "I think he should fight again."

Foreman, who knocked Frazier to the canvas six times and won the heavyweight crown in a second round knockout a year ago in Jamaica, will meet Ken Norton, who broke Ali's jaw and split two decisions with Muhammad, in a title defence at Caracas, Venezuela, March 26.

Bob Arum, Ali's lawyer and head of the agency that handled the world-wide television rights to Monday night's fight, would like to match Ali and the Foreman-Norton winner in the spring.

"I want him again—you believe it," Frazier said after the fight.

"I think I won, but it could have gone either way. I hurt him more than he hurt me. He was wrestling and holding on."

"I'm not gonna duck Joe," Ali said. "I'm not gonna be like Foreman. I thought Joe was finished. He surprised me. He was much better than in the first fight."

It was another great battle of contrasting styles—the slugger against the master craftsman—but it had a different ending. In the first fight, March 8, 1971, when the two were unbeaten champions, Frazier was the unanimous 15-round winner.

The two judges gave Ali wide edge Monday night; Tony Castellano 7-4-1 and Jack Gordon 8-4, while Tony Perez scored it 6-5-1, all for Ali.

Ali, 32, came out dancing and flicking his long left like a serpent's tongue. Frazier, 30, snorting like an angry bear, came out flailing away, disdaining punches thrown at him. That was the tenor of the fight.

Ali, 212, took the first two rounds handily, beating a tattoo on Frazier's angry face.

"I'm gonna get you," snarled Frazier in the third. It was a round he won twice snapping Ali's head back with vicious left hooks and pounding telling blows into Muhammad's midsection.

Ali's jabs to Frazier's face began to take effect. A knot bore. A bruise here. No blood. Ali appeared to win the fourth, fifth and sixth rounds. He was an elusive target. Frazier, 206, swung wildly, missed often.

In the sixth round, Ali shot a glove to Frazier's mouth.

Frazier, obviously irked at his failure to drive home a telling or a knockout blow in the early rounds, picked up momentum in the seventh. He danced and taunted Ali, nailed Muhammad with thunderous left hooks.

Frazier fought well in the seventh and eighth, maybe winning both, as Ali showed signs of tiring.

Marcel Bounces Back

MONTREAL (CP) — It is hard to believe that a player who went 20 games without a goal during October and November is the hottest scorer in the National Hockey League today.

Marcel Dionne, the diminutive centre of the Red Wings, has scored 13 goals and 26 assists in his last 16 games, a better production than Boston Bruins' superstars Phil Esposito and Bobby Orr.

Ottawa Senators' Jean-Claude Tremblay, Montreal—1st add 3rd star 2nd ... average.

Carleton, the Toros' outstanding centre, has 25 goals and 72 points in 51 games.

But Gordie Howe, Houston Aeros' veteran winger making a comeback after two years in retirement, is fast closing on the leader and has five games in hand.

ARRAL
The income tax help system and how it works:
Your part.
The big thing, the most important thing is simply that you do your income tax.
With a self-assessment tax system such as Canada's, the whole thing depends on the co-operation of the taxpayers. It depends on you.
Filing deadline is April 30.
Which also explains why we're using the term "April Aid" for the help we're going to provide between now and then. (By April 30, it's all over.) Step 2 for you then, is to file as soon as you can.
Third—read your Guide.
Always, before you fill in any part of your return, read the section in the Guide that applies. Most questions you'll have are answered in the Guide. (Incidentally, "read your Guide" is a phrase you'll be seeing and hearing over and over—because it's true.)
Fourth—take time to re-check your arithmetic.
Even the smallest error holds up the processing of your return. And not only is the correction process costly—but it also means your refund is delayed.
Fifth—use the help available when you do have questions or problems.
Phone, drop in, or write to your own District Taxation Office. Follow April Aid. Use it. Remember the help is there, it's free and it's for you.
Our part.
First—the Guide.
We've tried to make it as easy, as straightforward, as simple-to-follow and helpful as possible. It's included with your own Tax Pack, and we encourage you to refer to it first, always, for answers. If you need extra copies of the Guide, just call your District Taxation Office and they'll be glad to get them to you.
Second—we've got aids, with lots of facts.
From now until mid-April, aids will be appearing in this newspaper that deal with areas of Income Tax that generally cause the most questions. We'll be explaining things like Calculation of Canada Pension Plan Overpayment and Unemployment Insurance, how Personal Exemptions work, how to figure out Moving and Child Care Expenses and much more. The ads will appear on Tuesday and Thursday, so watch for them and when you see something that applies to you, clip the ad for reference for when you're doing your own return.
Third—we've got people to talk to you on the phone.
The telephone number of your own District Taxation Office will be listed on all ads. It's also on the back of your Guide. And we've set up a free Zenith line, (Zenith 0-4000) you can also use anytime. And, on Mondays and Tuesdays, phone lines are open 'til 6 p.m. if you're unsure—call.
Fourth—we've got people you can talk to in person, too.
Without appointment or charge. If you want to drop by your District Taxation Office and discuss anything you're not clear about—don't hesitate. That's what the people are there for.
Fifth—we answer letters.
All of them. As quickly and thoroughly as possible. If you want to write about anything, please do.
DONE!
Together, we can get it done.

Golden Mile Moves On Top with a Bang

Golden Mile moved into a tie for first place in the Gas House Hockey League last night, and looked like a first place team in doing so. They defeated Rosebush Fuels by the lopsided score of 21-3, racking up no fewer than 49 scoring points enroute to the decisive win.

The victory moved the Millers into the tie with Mead Johnson, idle last night, both with 28 points.

In other games, The Intelligencer shutout Rolleri Lumber 3-0, The Yardmen edged Stanley Structures 3-2, and Fraser and O'Neil Real Estate plazed Stewart Warner to a 3-3 tie.

Terry Pope led the charges for the Millers, potting five goals and two assists, while Ralph Boonhower had five markers and one assist. Carl Boonhower fired four goals and three assists, with Randy Lambert adding two goals. Checking in with singles were Gary Sero, Al Ray, Jim McKay, Dave Middleton, and Jerry Lucas. Middleton has six assists to add to his single score.

Bob Anderson fired a pair of goals for Rosebush, with Jim Drummond adding the other in defeat.

Warren Ray chalked up his third shutout of the season in the Intell nets, with backup goal scoring efforts by Fred Sickle, Chuck Powell, and Barry Marshall.

Pete Enright scored twice for Stanley Structures, but enough, as the Yardmen recorded their fourth win of the season.

Doug Thompson, Dennis Plesch, and Steve Boardman each scored once to give the Trailmen the victory.

Kingston Uses Height To Advantage

Rebounding is a very important part of basketball. When a team loses 24 of 33 rebounds under its own backboard, it spells trouble.

That's what happened to Bob Stinson's Loyalist Lancers in Ontario Colleges Athletic Association Eastern Division action on the weekend.

Using a distinct height advantage to control the boards, St. Lawrence of Kingston rolled to an 88-56 win.

"More height would certainly help our cause," observed coach Stinson.

But the coach admitted he was "reasonably pleased" with his squad's showing against the Kingston aggregation.

Mike Dowling's 19 points made the Kingston shooter the game's top scorer. Team-mate Dave Dundon was right in step with 18 points and Ken McKenzie hooped 16.

Dave Cuhner was Lancers' top hand with 15 points. Bill Kyle was good for 12.

Two in a Row For Ted Waite

Ted Waite is the 1973 - 74 Bell Telephone League sporting champion, the second consecutive year in which the stocky Reid's Dairy winger has taken the title.

After the final league games, which were played last Thursday evening, Waite had a point total of 29 the same as that of Kevin Allen of Stinson Construction and Reid Mallory of the Dairy team.

However, Waite has scored 16 goals over the course of the 34 game schedule, one more than Allen with 15 and five more than Mallory with 11, giving Waite the nod for the trophy.

Finishing in fourth spot was Doug Jodoin of the Cornerstone Engineers with 26 points, including 10 goals while Andy Prudden of Stinson's had seven goals and 17 assists, good for 24 points and fifth place.

League playoffs start this Thursday night, with first place Stinson Construction taking on Cornerstone in the first game at 8:15 in the second game of the doubleheader, Belvedere Hotel takes on fourth place Reid's Dairy. Both games are the first in best of seven semi-final series.

Schedule Changes An Aid to the Press

Doug Maxwell, executive director of the World Curling Championship, has announced a minor change in the schedule of the Silver Broom games, set for Berne, Switzerland, March 18-23.

After discussion with the organizing committee, the starting times of the games on Monday to Thursday, March 18-21, have been advanced half an hour. Afternoon games will now begin at 1:30 p.m. and evening games at 7.30 p.m., rather than 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. as originally announced. The last morning game -- the last of the round robin series - will be played at 9 a.m., available for any tie-breaking draws.

There has been no change in times of the semi-finals and final games set for Saturday, March 23 at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. respectively.

"The game time was advanced," said Maxwell "after we received requests from members of the European press. The times originally announced made it too difficult for reporters to file their copy, and so the games were advanced by half an hour to accommodate them." The change in times is not expected to cause any problems for North American reporters.

Sports Events Planned For Winter Carnival

Sports events enjoy prominence among the list of varied activities on the program as Belleville's Winter Carnival gets under way this week.

Everything from lacrosse on ice to tug-of-war competitions are featured for the enjoyment of participant and spectator alike.

At least one of the chalmen in charge of sports events' sensations admits he is amazed at the response his event has received from enthusiastic team representatives applying for a spot in the list of entries.

Tim Boisvert, a member of the sports committee of the ANAF, Duke of Edinburgh Unit, is responsible for organizing an open dart tournament as part of Carnival proceedings. He's received a deluge of entries from Ottawa to Toronto.

The dart players will hold forth at the ANAF, Front St., Saturday, February 2, from 10 a.m. There will be trophies and prize money for winners in team, doubles and singles competitions.

Early indications are one-third of the 30 entries expected to take part will be women's teams. And they will not be playing in a separate event. They'll have a shot at the top prizes. On your guard, men.

Among the city entries taking part will be Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 99 (two women's teams, one men's), post office, firemen, ANAF (Dukes, Dukettes, Warriors, Sets) and the Elks and Shriners.

Following the tournament, there will be a dance in the ANAF Tartan Lounge.

Cribbage and euchre tournaments sponsored by the Belleville Lions Club, are on tap when the Carnival is opened officially, Wednesday, January 30. Chairman is Art Osmond. Both games take place at the Branch 99 Legion hall.

If bowling is your game, the place to be Friday and Saturday nights is Brunswick Bowl where manager Jon Swatuk has a "moonlight bowling fest" lined up.

Bowlers will compete for prizes donated by Belleville merchants. Play begins at 11.30 p.m. each night and winds up at 2:30 a.m.

Other Saturday events besides darts and bowling are a fishint derby sponsored by the Belleville Winter Carnival and McDonald's Restaurant, chairman Les Middleton; broomball games, organized by the Belleville Jaycees under chairman Don Bruce; elimination games in the Secondary School Hockey Tournament, sponsored by Quinte and District RKL Estate Board, chairman Mike Dollack; and lacrosse on ice, sponsored by the Belleville Minor Lacrosse Association, chairman Roy Payne.

Zwick's Island Park is the site of the fishing derby, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Broomball action startsat 1 p.m. at the Quinte Skating Club with the teams shooting for the Quinte Real Estate Trophy. The high school hockey teams square off at Memorial Arena with games at 7:30 and 10:30 p.m. In between hockey games, the lacrosse players take to the ice at 9 p.m.

Loyalist College Outward Bound Club takes over Sunday, presenting the tug-of-war competition, shoeshoe race and a cross country ski race.

The tug-of-war and the snowshoe race, both scheduled to start at 2 p.m. will be held at Zwick's Island. The cross country ski race starts at Loyalist at 2:30 p.m.; with the finish line at Zwick's.

East Zwick's Island will be the scene of the Belleville Jaycees' tyke toboggan tournament at 2 p.m. Children 5-10 years of age will be competing in a distance race, for prizes donated by McDonald's Restaurant.

Hugh Pepper is chairman for the events organized by the Loyalist club while Ted Tedesco and Bill Preston are chairmen for the toboggan race.

Hopes Dashed in Track and Field

Canadian Shooters Are On Target

CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z. (CP) — Canada's track and field team descended abruptly from Cloud Nine to earth Tuesday at the Commonwealth Games but the shooters still were up in the stratosphere.

While Dr. Jules Sobrian of Omemee, Ont., picked up the third Canadian gold medal in four shooting events in the free pistol event, a seemingly endless procession of Australian, Kenyan, English and Jamaican athletes buried Canada's hopes on the track.

It was the second medal in two days for Sobrian, who took the silver behind Rex's William Hays of Renfrew, Ont., in the rapid-fire pistol Monday. The 38-year-old physician won silver and bronze medals in the 1966 Games at Kingston, Jamaica.

Together with an earlier victory by Harry Sallstrom of Montreal in skeet, that gave the Canadians a near-monopoly in shooting, broken only by Australian housewife Yvonne Gowland in the smallbore rifle.

A fourth gold appeared unlikely in the fullbore rifle, a three-day competition which ends Wednesday. After two days, Alain Marion of Quebec was fifth, behind two Englishmen, a Scot and a marksman from Northern Ireland. Edouard Warner of Lennoxville, Que., was 12th.

Buoyed by earlier victories in track and field, two by Jane Haist of Thornhill, Ont., in the women's discus and shot put and a third by Yvonne Saunders of Guelph, Ont., in the 400 metres, the Canadian team had gone into today's action with high hopes.

They had the three top-rated male high jumpers in the Commonwealth. And after Miss Haist's unexpected pair of victories, they were looking for upsets elsewhere.

As things turned out, the only upset was in the high jump, where two Australians consigned the Canadians to third, fourth and fifth place.

The winner was the second string Aussie, Gordon Wingeyer, who foiled the bid of veteran Laurie Peckham to win the event for the third time and broke his Games record with a leap of seven feet one inch. Peckham equalled the old mark, jumping a quarter-inch over seven feet and the Canadians, all seven-footers at home, fell short of the mark today.

Claude Ferragne of Montreal took the bronze medal by clearing 6-11¼. John Beers of Merritt, B.C., and John Hawkins of Courtenay, B.C., both managed 6-10¾. Beers takes fourth place because of fewer misses.

The establishment trimphed in most of the other events.

Don Quarrie of Jamaica and Raelene Boyle of Australia both completed sprint doubles, as they had done in Edinburgh four years ago, by winning their 100-metre races.

Petra Rivers of Australia was a repeat winner in the women's javelin and the Kenyans continued their dominance of distance races. John Kipsgrat winning in the 800 metres and Ben Jipcho adding the 5,000 metres to his previous steeplechase crown.

Jipcho got a spirited argument from Brendan Foster of England, who chased him to the wire in near world-record time after leading him until the final turn.

England had its best day yet on the track with victories by Alan Pascoe in the 400-metre hurdles, Alan Lerwell in the long jump and John Warburton in the 10-mile walk.

Pascoe gave the crowd a comedy turn after his victory. He tried to celebrate by jumping another hurdle but hit it and fell to the track. Picking himself up, he tried again with the same result. He got up, gave the hurdle a playful kick and trotted off.

Charlene Rendina capped a big day for Australia by winning the women's 800 metres. She had been the bronze medallist behind Miss Saunders in the 400.

In badminton, defending champion Jamie Paulson of Toronto reached the final of the men's singles, and the Vancouver pair of Mimi Nilsson and Judy Rollick lost a playoff for a bronze medal in the women's doubles.

Two cyclists retained championships they won in 1970. Jon Nicholson of Australia in the 1,000-metre sprint and Ian Hallam of England in the 4,000-metre individual pursuit.

IN MEMORIAM

SMITH — In memory of my beloved mother, Ida Smith, who passed away January 29, 1965 and my beloved father, Thomas Smith, who died August 9, 1972.
Inserted by daughter June, son-in-law Jack and grandchildren Barbara and Karen.

MEMORIAM
VANCE — In ever loving memory of my beloved husband, Jack Vance, who passed away one year ago, January 29, 1973.
Sad are the memories, sacred are the tears,
And secret hearts still flow.
What I would give if you could see me darling,
What I would give if you could hear,
And everything around me would quiet down,
I seem to hear you sorrow,
Each time I see you smile,
You seem to smile back at me,
Then it's only sleeping.
Dream on darling dear,
We'll meet again some day.
—Lovingly remembered by your ever loving husband, Donald

OSIER — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Lloyd Osier, who passed away January 29th, 1973.
We think today of you as we do each day,
We little know when we will see that you return.
We borrow the day would bring,
The sun to shine and the flowers to grow,
To part with one we loved so dear,
Remember it's hard to understand,
Why sometimes here to be.
In life we're parted,
But memories live on forever.
—Sadly missed by wife and son.

VANCE — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Jack Vance, who passed away January 29, 1973.
Loving and kind in all her ways,
Upright and just to the end of her days.
Sincere and true, in her heart and mind,
Beautiful memories she left behind.
—Sadly missed by Daisy, Betty Ann, Vance and Daisy.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Wednesday, Jan. 30

Aries(March 21-April 19) You tend to be somewhat wasteful with money. Above all, don't spend needlessly to make an impression on another.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Don't let a thoughtless remark slip out regarding views a friend of yours takes seriously but you don't.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Keep everything out in the open today. You'll have no luck trying to get away with something you know you shouldn't do.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) A friend will appear to be less affectionate than usual. Don't be hurt. It's because she has a problem she's concealing.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) If you take credit today for work you didn't do, you'll lessen the esteem in which another holds you.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A philosophy that fits and is good for you is not necessarily tailored to fit another. Don't force your ideas on her.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Something you do today will inconvenience another party even though she is not involved in your decision.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You will not be able to effectively use excessive flattery to win someone else over to your views. Don't try it.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Do considerable shopping around before you have any special work or service done at this time or you'll pay more than you should.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be as gracious as you can be in social activities today. Bad manners or poor taste won't get you invited back.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You're still putting some one off you've been promising to invite to your home. This person is wondering why.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Be sure you look at your problems today as they really are, not through tinted glasses. Don't kid yourself.

Pills May Cure Child's Goitre

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My granddaughter, 11, has an enlargement of the thyroid gland and is taking three little white pills aday. Surely you can see the enlargement very well, but times it is not as noticeable.

She is very faithful in taking her pills and doesn't want it to get any larger.

Will you answer these questions:

1—Can it get larger?

2—Will it be a goitre?

3—Will she need an operation?—Mrs. V.M.

1—Enlargement may or may not continue. Or it may subside—which obviously is the hope of the doctor who is treating her. That's why he has her on medication.

2—Certainly, enlargement of the thyroid, so let's say it in plain English. She has a goitre.

3—Since treatment is starting early, there is a better chance that medication will control the gland and she won't need surgery, but there are certain things that cannot be predicted accurately, and whether she'll happen or not is one of them.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What causes the white, feel-something particles that appear on my tennis? What can I do to prevent them?

I've tried gargling and "attacking" them with cotton swabs and often they still do not dislodge. They are not patches of infection.—Mrs. H.E.

Tonsils have crevices in them and with some people these crevices are larger than with others. Food particles can become lodged in them and often they are difficult to remove.

Eventually, of course, they simply disintegrate and disappear.

There is really little you can do about the situation short of removal of tonsils, which I would not recommend having done for such a relatively trivial reason.

You had best start looking for a good mouth wash and brushing mint.

In my experience, though, most people who worry about mouth odors are their own worst critics. If all the letters I get from folks complaining about their bad breath were valid, then we would be a nation of people you wouldn't want to get closer than six feet to.

If you don't believe this, let me ask you when was the last time you ran into a case of genuine bad breath?

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What would cause excessive sweating of the hands and feet? My ulcers palms are usually dripping.—Mrs. J.W.

The usual cause is excessive nervous tension.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is "palpable liver" and how serious is it? What treatment would be recommended?—J. L.

All the term means is that the doctor can feel it. You have to know more than that before you can estimate whether it is a serious condition, or a harmless one or in between.

Generally speaking, a doctor cannot feel a person's liver. When he can feel it, it usually means the liver is enlarged—but not necessarily so. Some normal livers are palpable if they happen to be located lower than usual. A liver is more likely to be palpable in a lean person.

But if the enlargement is due to disease, a variety of possibilities may be involved: infection, cirrhosis, a tumor, heart disease.

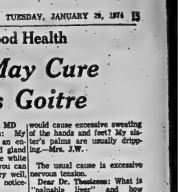
Only when your doctor found that your liver was palpable, that means the next step would be other tests to learn whether something is wrong with it, and if so what.

Treatment, of course, would depend on what if anything he finds wrong.

Exchange Planned

EDMONTON (CP — Fred Hutchins, Alberta's dairy commissioner, is looking for 10 dairymen to spend six months in Japan while 10 Japanese counterparts come to Alberta for an information exchange program. The exchange will expose Albertans to different techniques and practices.

At Birth No Deaths



TORONTO (CP) — The health department reports that for the first time in Toronto's history, no mothers or babies died during childbirth in 1973. In other health areas, the number of tuberculosis cases in the city exceeded 300 for the first time since 1959 and two cases of polio showed up after a nine-year absence.

Gun Gases Poison Men At Range

MONTREAL (CP) — Indoor shooting ranges at the Police Institute in Nicolet, Que. and the Montreal police training school have been closed indefinitely after 19 officers were poisoned by gases from weapons being fired.

Police spokesmen said Monday six of the officers remain in hospital. Hospital officials declined to give conditions of the men, who have been under treatment since early this month.

Engineers are working to improve the gas ventilation systems on the two ranges.

Dr. Yves Lacasse, head of the toxicology department at Santa Cabrini Hospital, said he believes the cases are the first ever diagnosed in connection with a shooting range.

Symptoms of the poisoning include fatigue, loss of weight and periods of amnesia.

The Montreal police spokesman said two Quebec Provincial Police officers serving as shooting instructors at the Nicolet range, 60 miles northeast of Montreal, complained of the same symptoms last November and consulted Dr. Lacasse.

After the two cases were diagnosed, Montreal police officials decided to have all officers who served as shooting instructors during the last 10 years tested for the illness.

Cases serious enough to require hospital treatment were found in six officers, while some former shooting instructors were found to be unaffected, the police spokesman said.

Not Combine

TORONTO (CP) — The $10-million sale of The Telegram subscriber lists to The Star two years ago is not sufficient basis for criminal proceedings under the Combines Investigation Act, a Toronto lawyer has been officially advised.

In a letter to lawyer Paul Copeland, who with five others applied for an inquiry under the act, J. S. Quinlan, deputy director of investigation and research under the Ontario consumer and corporate affairs department, said the decision was placed in the hands of the federal justice department.

After consulting with "outside counsel," the federal department added Mr. Quinlan "that the evidence is not such as to warrant criminal proceedings"

Wages Rise

OTTAWA (CP) — The average weekly wage of some four million workers rose 86 cents in November over October, but over a year earlier, Statistics Canada estimated Monday.

In terms of purchasing power after deduction for rising living costs, the average wage—$165.67—was still lagging behind 1972 figures for the fifth straight month, unofficial calculations show.

Damage-prone

WASHINGTON (Reuter) —A congressional committee was told Monday that 1974-model American cars are generally more damage-prone in low-speed collisions than their 1973 predecessors despite federal government safety regulations.

William Haddon, president of the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, said this is the conclusion reached after tests on various cars.

Posties Irked

OTTAWA (CP) — Planned automation in the post office in 1974 is creating tensions that could lead to widespread strikes this year, some officials of the 21,000-member Council of Postal Unions are predicting.

The walkouts could come, they say, even before the existing contract does not end until Dec. 31 and the agreement specifically forbids wildcat strikes.

Vision of Flood Leads to Arrest

NIAGARA Falls, Ont. (CP) — A deportation hearing is scheduled today for eight men who fenced their way into Canada with a group of religious zealots fleeing a tidal wave predicted in a vision.

The eight in custody here, all from Atlantic City, N.J., sought entry into Canada Friday in a group of 18 in three cars. They failed to show sufficient funds and were turned away, an immigration official said.

The group, 20 of them women and children, said they were fleeing a tidal wave that would wipe out Atlantic City and Philadelphia and they wanted to reach safe refuge at a location near Montreal.

Members of a pentecostal sect, they said a 14-year-old girl in their group had been "talking to God," and was informed in a vision of the impending disaster which they were told to flee.

Allan Highfield, officer in charge of immigration at the Peace Bridge in Fort Erie, Ont., said the group was first refused admission at mid-day Friday and they returned across the Niagara River to Buffalo.

Three hours later they attempted a second entry, he said. When they were again denied, the three cars pulled away from the immigration station, veered quickly into a ravine and sped away on the Queen Elizabeth Way which leads to Toronto.

Ontario Provincial Police and the RCMP pursued the vehicles and the chase ended about 12 miles from the bridge when one of the U.S. vehicles landed in a ditch, the occupants uninjured.

Islands in Sun Want Canadian Economic Aid

TORONTO (CP) — Members of a delegation from the Turks and Caicos Islands in the Caribbean about 100 miles north of Haiti, said Monday they want some form of economic association with Canada that will enable the islands' economy to develop and give Canadians a winter home in the sunny south.

The islands, between 30 and 40 of them with a population of about 6,000, are the ones Max Saltsman, New Democratic Party member of Parliament for Waterloo-Cambridge, wants to become part of Nova Scotia.

The three-man delegation, sent by the islands' tourism board, is in Canada this week pushing the idea of economic association and publicizing the tourism industry.

At a news conference, Liam Maguire, member of the state assembly, the islands' legislative assembly, said the islands' main economy for hundreds of years was the production of salt—has collapsed.

He said Britain no longer is interested in the colony and big interests have moved in favor of the European Common Market.

The islanders want to develop the tourist potential of the area in a manner compatible to their way of life and are willing to barter for it.

Other delegates are Norman Saunders, a constituency member, and Hubert James, vice-president of the islands' hotel association. Today they travel to Ottawa to meet Mr. Saltsman and other MPs and go later this week to Montreal.

Mr. Hubert said islanders see Canada as a wealthy country able to provide funds for development.

Canadians in return would get a vacation spot in the sun and opportunities for investment, on major air and sea routes—as distribution point for merchandise to the Caribbean, Central and South America, he said.

Mr. Saunders said there are plenty of opportunities for Canadians to set up businesses. The island needs hotels, water and power structures, stores and shops.

However, the islands also need an airport large enough to handle non-stop flights from Canada. Flights now have to stop in either Miami or Port-au-Prince in Haiti.

Any move towards association would require the approval of Britain, which takes care of the islands' foreign affairs But Mr. Saunders said there would not be no problems if the people wanted it.

Report Urges Users Should Pay for Roads

OTTAWA (CP) — A recent study concludes that road users should life a real cost burden of almost $1 billion annually from the shoulders of municipal and provincial taxpayers.

This can be done by raising the typical operator's and vehicle licence fees, says the study prepared for the Canadian transport commission.

It also proposes a vehicle-distance-usage-tax something like a taxi meter—or reorganizing road charges so that users types of vehicles pay more than others.

The report, written by economic researcher Z. J. Harlos of the transport commission, is an attempt to allocate road costs fairly. A commission spokesman said the report has been circulated across the country to provincial governments and other interested agencies.

The commission says it takes no position on the views expressed by Mr. Harlos. Authority over highways lies mainly in the hands of provincial governments.

Using 1968 figures,[1] Mr. Harlos says road costs which could be traced to users amounted to between $1.8 billion and $2.2 billion depending on estimates of road life and different accounting procedures.

But revenue from road users was only $1.3 billion, leaving a "road deficit" of $500 million to $900 million This deficit was paid by municipal and provincial taxpayers.

Mr. Harlos says he leans toward the higher deficit figure.

Road costs include right-of-way, construction and maintenance, traffic control and police.

The author suggests shifting of responsibility for 50 per cent of the municipal police and provincial police budgets to the road users from the taxpayers.

The road user should also assume the total cost of maintenance and construction of municipal roads, all municipal traffic control costs and part of the municipal right-of-way expenses. Municipal sidewalk costs would still be borne by the property tax payer.

Farmers Oppose Madawaska Dam

ARNPRIOR, Ont. (CP) — Elmer Bennett, president of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, also was on the farmers' side.

"Farmers have been trumped for 50 years and we're getting sick and tired of it," he said.

The minister would not answer questions about the economics of the dam and possible alternative solutions to an erosion problem.

U.S. Will Go Ahead With Dakota Project

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States is preparing to tell Canada that it plans to continue its current work on the controversial Garrison Irrigation project in North Dakota, but will consult with Ottawa about any future expansion which may affect rivers flowing into Manitoba.

This disclosure of the American position came Monday from a variety of informants in the U.S. government and Congress.

However, all stressed that the official note to be delivered to the Canadian government in the state department is still being drafted and its exact wording has not yet been determined.

Canada asked the United States last October to halt all further work on the Garrison project until it is assured that Canadian rights will be protected under the Boundary Waters Treaty of 1909 It said the $300-million project, as envisaged, would harm the quality of water flowing into the Red and Souris rivers of Manitoba.

The U.S. reply to Ottawa's demand is expected to be delivered within a week or so. The state and interior departments are reported to be still consulting about some minor points on wording

A further indication that Canada has not succeeded in stopping the project altogether came from congressional sources who said the powerful White House Office of Management and Budget (OMB) has agreed to include funds for Garrison in the 1974-75 federal budget.

One congressional aide, who asked not to be named, said the budget office bowed to pressure from North Dakota's influential congressional delegation to continue allocating money for the project, but the amount would be substantially less than the delegation wanted.

The U.S., in its reply to Ottawa's demand for a temporary halt to work on the Garrison project, is expected to contend that portions under construction now will have no effect on the quality of water flowing into Canada and there is therefore no reason to stop the work.

Nobody Accepts Responsibility For Checking Hospital Gas Lines

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — After 11 days of evidence at an inquest into the death of a Bury General Hospital, no one has yet admitted responsibility for a switch in medical gases known to have caused at least one of the fatalities.

So far—and with perhaps less than half the testimony in—coroner Dr. Donald Reid and a five-man jury have been hearing from witnesses that it was up to someone else to check how the oxygen and nitrous oxide lines were working.

Two witnesses Monday, representing the architect and the designer of the central gas system, confirmed this stand.

Comstock International Ltd., installed the system in a new wing of the hospital last year while Canadian Liquid Air Ltd. supplied the gas. Neither firm has given evidence yet.

Walter Yawney of Toronto, project manager for the architect on the hospital job, testified Monday he believed there would be tests of the system before the hospital took it over last spring.

"I would have assumed that Comstock would check with Canadian Liquid Air to see that the tests were carried out," he said.

Edmund B. Wong, mechanical engineer for Reed, Crowther and Partner, which designed the system, said his responsibility was for a "visual" inspection only and that the major obligation lay with the mechanical contractor—Comstock.

"We ask the contractors and use the gas supplier's expertise to ensure that the right thing is coming out of the outlets," he said.

White Envisages Specialized Cities

TORONTO (CP) — A series of "specialized" cities and towns could be developed in and around the Toronto area by the end of the century, Treasurer John White said Monday.

Mr. White told the annual meeting of the Metropolitan Toronto Industrial Commission that each should receive from Ontario or Hamilton would "provide whatever services and jobs were best suited to its size, character and location."

He said the concept now is being developed by a provincial investigating committee.

Toronto would remain the prime centre, providing a full range of specialized services. Hamilton and Oshawa would rank in the second of many other categories and Oakville, Burlington and North Pickering would operate in the third category.

"There would be several other categories, right down to the smallest communities, and each of these would look to the larger communities for their specialized services," Mr. White said.

Mr. White said that "as it evolved, the plan for the area would include new cities and towns yet to be designed and located."

The whole system would require at least three decades to achieve maturity and at that point, the entire structure would be re-examined and its component communities would have that each could receive from

The investigating committee has examined the industrial zoning of Lake Ontario and has placed each in one of three categories.

Mr. White said the first category would include the metal industries in Hamilton, the automakers in Oshawa, the airport at Malton and the one proposed for North Pickering and the research and development and education centres related to universities.

The second category is one the investigating committee calls "footloose industry" meaning industry that is not dependent on a particular location but is capable of functioning almost anywhere in the economic region.

In the third category would be the so-called city-serving industries oriented to the local community.

Care of Children a Full-time Job

Care of children isn't a part-time job, says the Industrial Accident Prevention Association.

As part of its annual safety program, IAPA warns parents that children are in constant danger, even when they are at home.

You can support IAPA's program by taking these precautions, and making your children's safety your full-time job. Here are some of the commonest hazards:

A child can suffocate in less than a minute. Keep loose plastic materials such as dry cleaning bags away from them. Destroy or discard plastic safety. No pillow or restraining device should be used in a baby's crib, and small objects such as coins, buttons, beans and pins must be well out of reach.

Propping a bottle in a crib to feed a baby is a dangerous practice which can lead to suffocation. Discarded and inactive refrigerators, freezers or dryers are potential death traps and should be made harmless by removing doors or securing them so that children cannot enter.

● Falls

Protect toddlers from falls by placing gates across stairways and barriers on windows. Keep a watchful eye on infants while dressing them and make sure crib sides are sturdy and high.

● Burns

Hot scalding fluids should be out of reach. Turn all pot handle to the back of the stove. Keep matches and cigarette lighters out of small hands.

● Cuts

Scissors, knives and other sharp utensils should be kept from small children. Teach older children to walk, not run, when carrying sharp, pointed objects.

● Toys

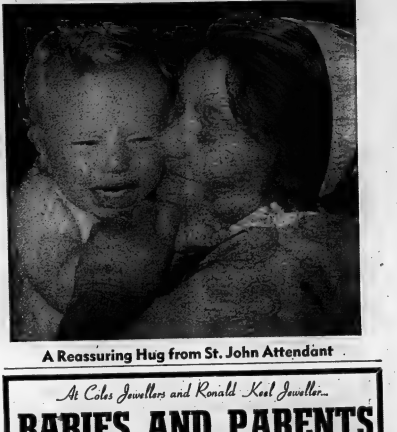
Purchase only toys of good quality which suit a child's age. Inspect toys regularly and carefully for possible wear or damage which may prove dangerous. Check play equipment for broken edges, splinters and safety of operation. Encourage older children to keep their toys in places where younger ones can't locate and harm themselves.

Electrical outlets and worn extension cords can be deadly. Don't let children play with outlets, lamp or appliance cords. Disconnect appliances when not in use. Keep cords and appliances in good condition.



The curious child is not deterred by tastes of medicines. Many common household cleaning products, cosmetics and insecticides can be poisonous. Keep them out of reach, under lock and key if necessary.

When bathing an infant, ignore all interruptions. Never leave a young child alone in a bathtub, wading pool, or any body of water, even for a minute. Teach children to swim at an early age and instruct them in the rules of water safety. Children should be warned about thin ice on bodies of water, especially during the early fall and spring seasons.

Leaving children alone in the home has been found to be the major reason for the high incidence of child deaths in fires. Never leave children unattended — even for a few minutes. Fire starts and spreads rapidly, often making rescue impossible in a very short time.

Teach children the rules of pedestrian safety and insist they observe and obey them at all times. See that children know about traffic regulations before letting them use bicycles on public roads.

Lawn mowers, snowblowers, power tools, appliances and machinery of all types are hazardous to children. Store and use them with particular attention to safety and keep children well out of the area while the machines are being operated.

Homemade, Fresh Foods Best for Baby

Homemade meals are better for your baby, and better for your budget than the products you buy in cans and jars, says Montreal dietitian and nutrition teacher Elizabeth Jones. What's more, it is perfectly easy to prepare fresh nourishing infant food, right in your own kitchen.

"You don't need a sterile lab, as people seem to think", Ms. Jones tells her class of graduate nurses at Loyola University.

"Just use normal sanitary precautions and regular kitchen equipment. If you don't have a blender or food mill for pureeing, an ordinary 89-cent strainer will do the job."

The more a food is processed - - cooked, then bottled or canned - - the more likely it is to lose some nutrients along the way.

Most baby foods, of course, must be cooked to make them more digestible and to destroy any harmful bacteria. But a fresh apple for instance, contains one half more valuable Vitamin A.

Do it yourself, using fresh ingredients, and you'll do your baby a favor. You'll economize, too. Because a baby-sized serving of fresh fruits and vegetables will certainly cost less than the prepared, preserved equivalent.

Plan the baby's meals to fit in with the family, Ms. Jones advises. No special recipes or cooking pans are required.

Boil the vegetables and stew the fruit for everyone. But remember one important thing: don't add salt, sugar or seasoning to the pan until after you have removed the baby's portion for mashing and straining.

"There's enough natural salt in food and milk to meet babies' needs," says Ms. Jones. "You don't have to add more. And, cooking it at home, you can also control the baby's sugar intake. That is most important, because too much sugar in his fancy creates a desire for cause dental caries and even sweet foods, which later, can obesity."

Though all baby foods must be strained, many fruits are better served raw. For fresh fruit, along with leafy green vegetables, are the principal source of vital Vitamin C.

Ripe bananas — easily digestible and with a high glucose content - - peaches, apricots, ripe - rich pears and grapes can all be peeled and pureed.

Sun-ripened strawberries and raspberries, another fine source of iron, need to be thoroughly washed if they are served raw. Cooked or uncooked, a little berry puree will add the necessary sweetening and a delicious taste to homemade, sugarless applesauce.

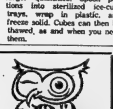
You can combine several fruits - - banana, pineapple and fresh orange juice, for example - - for an interesting flavor and maximum nutrition.

One fruit contains the full complement of B Vitamins, as well as A and C, and that's dangerous. Individual segments are easily strained, once the white fibre and membrane have been removed.

Fresh peas, spinach, sweet potato, cabbage and turnip greens are among the highest in total vitamin content. Carrots are laden with Vitamin A, and broccoli is a splendid source of calcium.

Root vegetables such as potatoes, turnips, beets, are no problem to strain, once they are thoroughly cooked. Freshly cooked green and lima beans - - high in digestible starches and calcium - take a little more effort to put through a sieve. But all vegetables are more nutritious and less expensive when prepared at home.

To get the best possible food value, buy the freshest vegetables you can find. Cook them quickly, without seasoning, and serve them at once.



Keep homemade baby food, if you must, in sterilized containers, tightly covered - - and for as short a time as you can.

If you have efficient freezing facilities, it can be prepared in larger quantities. Spoon portions into sterilized ice-cube trays, wrap in plastic and freeze solid. Cubes can then be thawed, as and when you need them.

Babies are Attention Getters

Babysitters Should Have Rules to Follow

When you leave your children with a babysitter, house rules are essential, says the Industrial Accident Prevention Association.

Hire only a mature, responsible sitter to take charge of your children. Make sure the sitter knows where you can be reached at all times, and when you will be home.

The Industrial Accident Prevention Association is conducting a campaign throughout 1974 with the theme, "Zero In On Pride Of Performance". This applies just as much to safety at home as it does at work, says IAPA.

The association of 52,000 member firms is urging employees to take greater pride in the work they do to achieve greater self satisfaction and safety.

IAPA suggests you give these "house rules" to your babysitter.

—Keep all doors locked. Draw window shades at night.

—Allow no one in on any pretense.

—Take message if phone rings, but do not identify yourself as the sitter.

—Use the phone only in emergencies.

—Keep television or radio volume down.

—If you think there's a prowler, stay locked in and phone police.

—Make periodic checks of children while they are sleep.

—Stay awake until the parents return.

—No guests of sitter allowed unless permission has been given.

IAPA has these suggestions to parents who want to ensure the safety of their children while they are away:

Tell sitter where you're going and how long you will be gone. If you don't know the phone number of the place you're going to, call her when you reach your destination and give her the number. If sitter is new, explain to her your "house rules".

Show the sitter emergency escape routes to use in case of fire. Also, inform the sitter of the telephone numbers of the police, fire department and your family doctor. Give her instructions for feeding and to handle the child if he awakens. If you find you will be home later than planned, phone the sitter. Lock up before you leave, and make sure the door is locked behind you.

If the sitter is new, allow time for a get-acquainted period between sitter and child before you leave. Have a clear understanding with the sitter about fee, use of refrigerator, kitchen, television, etc. On your return home, ask the sitter about any phone calls, visitors, emergencies, accidents or unusual occurrences. Always escort the sitter home at night.

Farm Organizations Have Busy Time

It's that time of year again! The time of year, that is, for farm organizations to hold annual meetings and plan programs for the new year.

Big event this week for Hastings county farmers is the annual banquet of the Hastings Federation of Agriculture scheduled for Friday evening at the Kiwanis Centre in Madoc. Guest speaker for the occasion will be H. Gordon Green.

Also this week was the annual meeting of the Hastings Farm Service Club, and the regular meeting of the Hastings Federation of Agriculture, both held last night at Stirling.

Early in February a series of income tax information meetings for farmers will commence with the annual meeting of the Hastings county milk committee scheduled for Stirling on February 17. Also two maple syrup information meetings of interest to county producers are scheduled — one at Combermere on Feb. 4 at the co-op boardroom in Combermere, and the other on Feb. 8 at Westminster United Church in Sidney township.

Hastings county club leaders will hold their annual banquet at the Sacred Heart Parish Hall in Madoc on Feb. 13, while the Hastings county section of Eastern Breeders will hold their annual meeting in Sidney township hall on Wallbridge Road.

New Rehabilitation Program Launched

There's a new federal program in the Belleville area to help people adjust again to a working conditions after unexpectedly suffered physical or psychological handicaps.

So far there are only five participants in the Work Adjustment Training project organized by Canada Manpower, the Belleville and District Employment Committee was told Wednesday.

"It's still a relatively small budget we have for it but we look for it to increase," said Frank Martin, Belleville Manpower official.

To qualify for participation there has to be an "identifiable handicap - for instance a person suffering the physical or psychological effects of an accident."

Object is to assess the participants' ability to perform in the labor market. Since it's impossible to "fabricate" a work environment, best results come from on-the-job placements. The employer's sole responsibility is to report back to Manpower on the individual progress, said Mr. Martin.

The program also provides for in-depth psychological diagnosis if required, said Mr. Martin. Agreement for such service exists with Kingston General Hospital, since Belleville-area facilities already are under heavy caseload pressure.

City Delegate

Among delegates to the Cancer society's campaign conference in Toronto Jan. 19-20 was Mrs. Doris Hardie of Belleville. She represented this district at the meeting that set a goal of $4.7 million for cancer research commitments this year. The society's campaign will be held in April.

Two to Conference

Among the resource people participating in an Ontario Teachers' Federation conference in Toronto Feb. 12 will be Hastings county board of education superintendent Robert Horwood and Centre Hastings educational assistant Eugene Moreau. The conference will discuss organization development, described as a planned, constructive approach to change.

Keep Danger Locked Up

Even if something tastes bad to you, that doesn't mean your toddler won't eat enough to poison himself, cautions the Industrial Accident Prevention Association.

Throughout 1974, IAPA is encouraging employees to zero in on pride of performance at work and at home. That means taking pride in the safety of your children.

If you have a toddler at home, he's crawling, climbing, sniffing, touching, gnawing, tasting, and sampling everything in reach.

You can support IAPA's safety drive by keeping all medicines, paint, detergents and cleaning fluids locked away, out of the reach of young children.

Phone Books Will Be Late This Year

Belleville residents accustomed to getting their phone directories in January will have to wait until May this year.

Reason for this is a change of schedule in their production in the Montreal plant that produces them, said Bell Canada manager George Thompson.

New listings and changes in listings will be accepted until the third week in March. Altogether, 100,000 phone directories will be printed for Hastings and Prince Edward counties. Initial distribution in May is 60,000 copies with the rest used as the need arises.

It will take about 100 distributors in Belleville and Trenton to deliver all the books. Last year, the Eastminister Church distributed the directories in Belleville, while in Trenton, the Kiwanis Club handled this job. Mr. Thompson said he wasn't sure if those groups would be doing it this year.

The switch to May delivery of the phone books makes Belleville consistent with other communities such as Kingston which receive May delivery.

Wedding Anniversary Party Highlight

A capacity crowd filled Club Canara for the President's Ball Saturday evening, providing a fitting climax to the quarterly meeting of the Ontario Command ANAF. Special guests of honor at the dance were Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Ford who were celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary. Choked with emotion "Dad" Ford thanked his many friends for their gifts and well wishes. Jack Ellis brought greetings from Ottawa, while letters and telegrams were read from civic and provincial authorities. Mabel Galbraith presented a bouquet of flowers to Mary Ford from the ladies auxiliary, being a fitting presentation since both were charter members of the ladies' auxiliary which celebrates its 30th anniversary this year.

At opening ceremonies of the command meeting on Saturday morning, conducted by Provincial President L. J. Murphy, Mayor Robin Jeffrey brought civic greetings and unit padre, Rev. Cyril Betts provided the opening prayer. Other guests piped into the auditorium included Brig. Gen. J. L. Melville, J. C. Lundberg, J. C. McArthur, Mrs. Ellen McKay president Ontario Command Ladies Auxiliaries and local unit presidents Mrs. Alice Storms and H. G. Ford.

The daytime sessions for both the men and the ladies auxiliaries ended in complete harmony as Honorary Dominion President Brig. Gen. J. L. Melville and Past Dominion President J. C. Lundberg unveiled their new youth development program which will enable 100 youths to attend Royal Military College, Kingston for a week each summer sponsored by units across Ontario. Complete details of this program will be covered in a special news release in the local press.

The next quarterly meeting of Ontario Command ANAF will be held in Barrie the last weekend in May.

The dart tournament being held in conjunction with the Belleville Winter Carnival saw a closing entry of some 30 teams with entries being received from Ottawa, Kingston and Oshawa as well as many local and district teams. Included in the tournament are some 10 female teams, who will compete against the male entries as well as in a separate competition of their own to declare winners.

Starting time for the tournament will be 10 a.m. sharp and all unit darts including the Saturday evening mixed darts are cancelled for this week. The next Saturday evening mixed darts will be held in two weeks, on Saturday Feb. 16.

The most recent Saturday evening mixed darts drew the largest number of contestants to date. Pat and Larry Maracle were the winners, with Lois Semark and Rod Salter as runners up. Daisy Hancock took high three darts for the ladies with Larry Maracle capturing the high three for the men.

The Saturday afternoon darts results conducted on the same date were: 1st round winners, Cash Mahaffy and Dimp Young; runners-up Matt Marshall and Rick Hay. 2nd round winners Russ Bland and Ed Latham; runners-up Rick Hay and Dimp Young. 3rd round winners Neil Goyer and Tim Boisvert with Cash Mahaffy and Frank Freeman as runners-up.

Sports chairman Dimp Young has arranged mixed euchre in the clubrooms each Tuesday evening for the card enthusiasts and plans a shuffleboard tournament in the near future. Watch the new sports bulletin board for further details.

Commissioner Dislikes Name

Belleville's industrial commissioner, Fred Bemis, doesn't approve of the name Ash Court suggested by the subordinate planning advisory committee for a new street extension in the city's northwest industrial area.

The street in question is west of Sidney Street and runs north from Hanna Street.

The industrial commissioner said the name proposed sounded too much like ashes.

Council Monday referred the street naming back to the committee.

MacDonald in U.S. to Explain

U.S. Senators Ask Retaliation for Tax

WASHINGTON (CP) — Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said today Canada's export tax on crude oil to the United States will be reduced if American oil prices fall as a result of price cuts by other exporting countries.

On the eve of his arrival, the Senate adopted a non-binding resolution warning of possible U.S. retaliation against Canada, Venezuela and Arab countries which have increased oil export prices.

Urging strike against Canada's industrial "jugular," Senator Lawton Chiles (Dem. Fla.), who introduced the resolution Tuesday, accused Canada of "hijacking" U.S. consumers of 38 million a day through the new $8.40-a-barrel export tax effective Friday.

"If this kind of a game is going to be played, then we have to play it, too," he said. "We must send Canada a message that these kinds of one-sided actions won't wash".

Macdonald arriving here for a three-day visit to include talks with U.S. energy chief William Simon, was asked about reports that Arab oil producers may consider reducing the sky-rocketing prices for their oil.

"The export tax is related to the international price of oil in the American market," Macdonald said. "If the oil price drops back, then, correspondingly, so will the tax take."

He said he plans to "review a fairly broad spectrum of issues" with Mr. Simon, particularly the Feb. 11 conference" of oil-consuming countries convened by State Secretary Henry Kissinger.

"There are also a number of outstanding Canadian-American issues, including the effect of our Operation Independence on American expectations in relation to Canada's within the next decade."

Macdonald reiterated his view that confrontation of Canada's oil pricing policy by Senator Lawton Chiles (Dem. Fla.) indicates that "there is an information task to be done down here."

Macdonald said, before his departure from Ottawa, he does not believe there is any danger of confrontation or retaliation by the United States over the export tax" and indicated he hoped to clarify the situation during his Washington trip.

While only six senators were in the chamber when the resolution was adopted without a dissenting voice, those present included Majority Leader Mike Mansfield (Dem., Mont.), and the top Republican, Hugh Scott, of Pennsylvania.

The timing of the resolution seemed to suggest a concerted Senate action although U.S. administration officials have frequently said they understand why Canada decided to boost the export tax Chiles said U.S. energy chief William Simon should convey the Senate's warning when he confers with Macdonald Thursday.

Hatfield Fights For Big Payments

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canada's oil-export image grew somewhat tarnished abroad Tuesday, and the energy situation at home was posed a few problems as well.

New Brunswick complained that federal equalization payments are not coping with rising crude-oil prices, Saskatchewan defended its wellhead-price increase for oil and a union leader said the so-called energy crisis is strictly a policy problem.

In Regina, Resources Minister Elwood Cowley of Saskatchewan said there should be no difficulties selling that province's oil when the wellhead price goes up $1 a barrel in February. A second $1 increase may be imposed in March.

Mr. Cowley said the federal government wants to get most of the revenue from oil taxes and use it to subsidize Eastern Canadians who buy foreign oil and to finance the increased equalization payments to the so-called have-not provinces.

Meanwhile, Premier Richard Hatfield of New Brunswick, one of the provinces in the have-not category, was renewing his fight for extended equalization payments.

He said rising crude-oil prices might be countered by equalization payments, preferably [illegible] regional economic development.

Premier Hatfield said Ottawa should look at the energy problem in light of the overall picture of income disparities in Canada.

Neil Reimer, national director of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers' Union, said in Edmonton the energy problem is a policy crisis which should not exist.

"The industry created an artificial shortage because it was not willing to pay the investment costs when there apparently was little demand," he said.

Also in Alberta, nearly 90,000 gallons of 175,000 gallon crude-oil spill was cleaned up after a pipeline developed a leak in Strome.

Sharp Says OAS Tends To Divide

MEXICO CITY (Reuter) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Tuesday night the exclusion of Cuba from the Organization of American States (OAS) demonstrated that the organization tended to divide the American continent rather than aid its unity.

Mr. Sharp told a news conference with Mexican newspaper correspondents who visited Ottawa last week that Canada had never joined the OAS, which groups the United States with 24 countries of South and Central America and the Caribbean. Canada has been an observer since 1971.

The divisive influence of the OAS went further, Sharp said. "It tends to divide the region between the United States on one side and Latin America on the other.

"At present the OAS is an organization more concerned with ideologies than with economic problems and practical results."

He said Canada would only join an American regional organization concerned with more important matters for the unity of the continent.

Just in Case

U.S. Energy Bill Is Blocked By Dispute on Excess Profits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Controversy over oil-industry profits appears to have killed the emergency energy bill that the United States Congress struggled with for two months.

The Senate voted Tuesday to end the measure back to a conference with the House of Representatives in an effort to remove an excess-profits provision that critics said was unworkable and probably unconstitutional.

The move to reconsult received the endorsement of President Nixon, who wrote Senate Minority Leader Hugh Scott that it "would be most unfortunate" if Congress approved the energy bill in its present form.

But both House and Senate leaders of the conference indicated there was little chance the conferees will reconsider the bill. The White House has said it needs the legislation before it can order gasoline rationing and other energy-conservation measures.

"It's all in a shambles now," said Henry Jackson (Dem., Wash.), the Senate interior committee chairman. Harley Staggers (Dem., W.Va.), House commerce committee chairman, agreed the Senate vote probably will kill the bill.

"The administration is going to run this day," Jackson said, explaining that without the bill the president "will have to declare a national emergency before he can order rationing."

A source in the Federal Energy Office said gasoline rationing is a strong likelihood this summer if the Arab oil embargo continues.

In other developments:

—Three oil companies announced substantial earnings increases for 1973. Phillips Petroleum Co. said earnings in the fourth quarter of 1973 more than doubled those of the same period in 1972. Gen. Oil Co. announced a 38-per-cent increase in earnings during the fourth quarter. And Marathon Oil Co. said its operating income for 1973 increased 62 per cent.

Canada's Trade At Record Level

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's international trade rose to record heights for both exports and imports in 1973 and ended the year with a $1.3 billion surplus, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

Exports and imports rose about 25 per cent each to $53.5 billion and $52.3 billion, respectively, said the report based on preliminary figures.

The trade surplus—the excess of exports over imports—was $478 million greater than 1972.

"Nevertheless, this trade balance was significantly lower than the surpluses of $2.2 billion and $2.3 billion recorded in 1971 and 1970," the report said.

Canada's trade surplus with the United States, its largest trading partner, declined to $200 million from slightly over $1 billion in 1972 because the $3.7-billion rise in imports to $18.3 billion was greater than the $3-billion increase in exports to $17 billion, the report showed.

"More than half of the overall advance in exports to the U.S. was due to a small group of commodities, including automotive and related products (up $968 million), crude petroleum ($475 million), lumber ($336 million) and newsprint ($131 million)," the report said.

Two Cripples Plead Guilty To Hijacking and Robbery

TORONTO (CP) — Two crippled men pleaded guilty Tuesday to robbery with violence in the hijacking of a Toronto motorist to North Bay, Ont., last October.

Harvey Howell, 21, confined to a wheelchair, and David Godin, 21, who is partially paralyzed and walks with a cane, appeared in York county court before Mr. Justice Edward. They are to be sentenced today.

The two were acquitted on a charge of kidnapping Antonio Marchese, 36, when the Crown did not present evidence on that charge.

Crown attorney Franklin Mostoff said Mr Marchese suffered cruel mental suffering during the drive when he was beaten and threatened with shooting.

He said that the man, a baker, is unable to earn a living now because of his mental condition as a result of the incident.

Mr. Mostoff said Mr Marchese stopped at a traffic light while driving to work in Toronto early on the morning of Oct. 22. He said Howell, who was walking the light to change, went over to Mr. Marchese's car in his wheelchair and hit the driver's door Mr. Marchese rolled down the window and Howell asked for a ride.

Godin, the court was told, then hooked his cane around Mr. Marchese's neck and ordered him to move over.

Mr. Mostoff said both indicated they "were armed with guns".

He said that Godin took over the driving of the car, but lost control and it struck a traffic island, causing a tire to blow. Mr. Marchese was forced to fix the tire under threat of being shot.

The court was told that during the drive to North Bay, Howell hit Mr. Marchese in the face with a tire iron and his fist and took his wallet, containing $180.

Mr. Mostoff said that on arrival at North Bay, the two men got out of the car and gave Mr Marchese $10 for gas after telling him not to call police. But he drove to the nearest service station and called police.

Subpoena for Nixon Awaits Pen of Judge

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A subpoena ordering President Nixon to testify in the Ellsberg burglary case is awaiting the signature of a California state judge following his ruling that the president is a material witness.

The unprecedented subpoena was delivered to Superior Court Judge Gordon Ringer Tuesday by lawyers for Dr. Lewis Fielding, who sought to have the president testify voluntarily. Ehrlichman was Nixon's top domestic adviser until he resigned in the wake of the Watergate cover-up.

Ringer, who said this would be the first time a president has been subpoenaed by a state court, added he will sign the subpoena by Friday. The subpoena commands Nixon to appear at a pre-trial hearing Feb. 25 and at the trial April 15.

The judge ruled earlier Tuesday that Nixon is a material witness to the defence case of Ehrlichman and two other former White House employees, Gordon Liddy and David Young. All three are charged with burglary and conspiracy. Ehrlichman also is charged with perjury.

The White House declined comment on the ruling until it receives the judge's order, but sources later indicated the president will decline to appear as a witness.

Ehrlichman lawyer Douglas Dalton prepared the three-page subpoena. But Dalton and Ringer decided to study the subpoena's legal phraseology before signing.

Board Reorganization Will Shift Emphasis

A reorganization of administration of Hastings county board of education will put more emphasis on curriculum and the standard of instruction.

The reallocation of duties went into effect the first of this year.

We're stepping the drift in curriculum and getting more structure into it," said director of education Eric Runacres.

Senior academic administrators will be freed from business function to spend more time on supervision and curriculum.

Superintendent L. F. Reid is now assistant to the director of education. Superintendent E. T. Morris now becomes executive secretary to the board, responsible for services to trustees.

The four superintendents of schools will each continue to be responsible for two associate school groups. In addition, each one will be responsible for curriculum and instruction development in one of four curriculum areas.

Robert Horwood will supervise Moira and Quinte associate school groups and will be in charge of communications (language study).

Newly appointed superintendent Wally Beevor will supervise Trenton and Bayside ASGs and be in charge of pure and applied sciences.

Trenton and Bayside ASGs are the responsibility of Glen Watson, who is also in charge of arts.

Frank Tate will look after North and Centre Hastings ASGs and social sciences.

Each superintendent is assigned seven support people in the fields of special education, speech correction, psychology and curriculum. One co-ordinator of curriculum will be assigned to each ASG. For instance, the superintendent in charge of sciences might appoint a skilled teacher to assist with mathematics instruction for a year.

Business administration, under the direction of Kenneth Wormald, superintendent of business, has taken over some of the functions formerly assigned to academic superintendents. The business department will prepare enrolment and population statistics, and take charge of all budget preparation and administration.

Toronto Hunter Fined a Dollar

A Toronto man was yesterday fined $1 by Judge J.L. Clendenning after he was convicted in provincial court of trying to kill a goose on the Tyendinaga Indian Reserve without a valid permit authorizing him to do so.

Josip Grospic, of Toronto, appeared in provincial court with a Croatian interpreter yesterday and pleaded not guilty to the charge of violating one of the Tyendinaga Indian Reserve's bylaws.

Grospic told Judge Clendenning that he was not aware he needed a special permit to hunt on the reserve when he was arrested Oct. 20 while hunting rabbits within the western limits of the reserve.

A provincials pamphlet outlining hunting regulations on Indian lands to make the special status of Indian reserves clear, said, when he told the judge that he thought his Ontario hunting licence was valid on the reserve.

Station Robbed

Belleville police are busy investigating a break, enter and theft that netted thieves approximately $15 in silver early this morning.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said that thieves broke into the Sour service station on Cannifton road sometime between 1:30 a.m. and 7:30 a.m. today.

They gained entry to the service station by breaking a glass door and stole the money from the till, he said.

Council, Authority Meet

Talk Trent Greenbelt

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Casual rumor of a joint greenbelt project between the town and the Lower Trent Conservation Authority became official Tuesday with both groups coming together at a meeting filled with unanswered questions.

During past weeks announcements have been made that the authority is in the advanced stages of spending about $50,000 in redeveloping the west bank of the Trent river.

The authority envisages a strip — ranging in width from 50 to 600 feet wide — fringing the river as it passes through Trenton. At the moment the authority is in the land-acquisition business, assembling the property later to be converted to recreational sites.

It is this land acquisition stage and later maintenance of the property that brings a hail into the scheme.

Both Mayor Bob Patrick and parks board secretary Marion Baker claimed their respective bodies were "pretty much in the dark," about arrangements. The authority in recent weeks has made overtures to the parks board concerning property owned by the town. But the board refused even to vote on the subject, deeming the decision one that should be made by council.

Bill Lawson, secretary-treasurer of the authority considered the situation, saying his organization, prior to Dec. 31, had spent slightly more than $100,000 acquiring eight properties — "a number (eight) of other properties we hope will be turned over by the town."

During the project — expected to last some 10 years — property received from the town will be developed and turned back for town maintenance once each sector is completed.

Cost of the shuffle of land and its development will be split 85 per cent by the province and 25 per cent by the authority. Trenton's share of costs will be 25 per cent of the authority's contribution.

In a detailed set of questions, Miss Baker and the parks board thoroughly delved into legalities and consequences of the project.

Few answers were available but it is believed a meeting next Monday will clear up the queries.

One or the major steps to be taken at the meeting was the formation of a special steering committee that will investigate the parks board questions and present input to the authority's conceptual plan.

The group will meet Feb. 4 and will consist of three members from each of the participating groups.

In a word of advice to Miss Baker following a sceptical comment concerning plan content and direction, Mayor Patrick advised, "you can either accept it or tear it apart."

Store Fire: $80,000 Loss

BRIGHTON — Orland general store, six miles north of here, burned down Tuesday despite attempts of two volunteer fire departments.

Brighton fire chief Willard Tuckaberry today estimated damages would top $45,000 to the frame structure and another $35,000 for contents and equipment used in the store.

Both the store and an attached home were completely gutted by the time firemen arrived at the scene shortly after noon. Chief Tuckaberry said smoke was piling hundreds of feet into the air when trucks were still two miles from the scene.

Volunteer firemen from Brighton and Warkworth fought the blaze for more than four hours. They returned shortly after midnight when the ruins re-kindled.

The store was said to be over 100 years old. It is the only general store in the area. The nearest store now for the community's 700 residents is in Codrington, five miles away.

Owners of the store and home were absent during the fire which left the gas pumps on the parking lot untouched.

The Ontario Fire Marshall's office is expected this morning to help investigate the cause of the blaze which Chief Tuckaberry called "a mystery."

Kathleen Carter, owner, and her family is staying with neighbors until arrangements are made. It is not known to what extent insurance will cover the loss.

Bureau Gets Response

TRENTON — Landlords, automobile outlets and door-to-door salesmen seem to be the main areas of consumer complaints, according to the Citizens Bureau which opened here this week.

Bert Gerling, bureau manager, says reaction in Trenton has been good with calls coming regularly.

The bureau, sponsored by a $9,000 Local Initiatives Programs grant from the federal government, is a similar operation to the Belleville bureau which originated with LIP funds.

Much of it passes through Belleville to be transferred, from Belleville to Trenton. Both were organized by the same personnel.

Perhaps the most interesting item is the "hooky list," a document containing names of stores who have been the target of numerous consumer complaints.

Charles Hart, one of the bureau's three staff members, spoke to town council Monday, outlining bureau aims.

Mr. Hart said any business operating "at high standards "need not have any fear of the bureau."

Mr. Gerling said the operation would have a monthly budget of about $130 for office expense and at that "we'll just barely make it."

The sponsoring agency, the Quinte District Labor Council, is paying the rent for the second-floor offices in downtown Trenton, above Ostrander Jewellers.

This week more than 25 people have used the service since it opened here, a strong indicator staff say that it will be a busy six months before project money run out.

For information concerning consumer-related problems the bureau can be phoned at 392-3233.

Lloyd Thompson Talks Work

Need Repair Courses

PICTON — Technology education centres such as Loyalist College or Ryerson Polytechnical Institute could aid the photography profession by introducing courses in camera repair, Lloyd E. Thompson told Picton Rotarians Tuesday.

Mr. Thompson, local photographer with national awards to his credit, spoke of problems in camera repair for the professional as "almost intolerable."

Mr. Thompson noted that 1973 represented "a particularly good year" for photography, especially in the United States and Japan. Despite this, those in business for themselves as retailers or wholesalers in Canada had difficulty in balancing costs with profits.

The industry, as a whole, however, made "great strides", he said.

However, the German firm of Zeiss closed its doors and when the Rollieflex company moved from Germany to Singapore.

Mr. Thompson said that the Japanese are "the undisputed winners" as Germany falls behind.

On the local scene, the photographer reports that the demand for photography has increased in the past three years. Because of an expansion of industry in the Quinte area and the introduction of new industry, Mr. Thompson has been forced to re-equip his business.

Approximately three years ago the photographer worked principally in black and white. Today, 60 per cent of his commercial assignments are in color and about 90 per cent of his portraits, family groups and weddings.

Mr. Thompson also noted that many of today's graduates of photographic schools expect to begin work with major assignments. They resent doing the menial jobs required by their employers and feel qualified for something more challenging.

The photographer said that the schools should advise their students that there is an apprenticeship period.

In turn, employers should be more lenient and assist young photographers as they begin their careers.

Train Mishap

STIRLING (Special) — A Lindsay man escaped injury Tuesday when his car collided with the Marmora to Picton ore train and was carried 300 feet on the track.

The car, driven by Delbert Hickson, received $600 damage.

Stirling Fire, Cattle Die

STIRLING (Special)—Fifteen head of purebred Holstein cattle died in an early-morning fire that destroyed the barn of Larry May, RR 2, Stirling.

The $30,000 barn also contained a large quantity of hay and a hay wagon. The barn was partially insured.

Rawdon Fire Department answered the fire call at 12:30 a.m. Although the barn was located only 70 feet from the farm house, the May home was not threatened.

Dam Busting

WELLINGTON—A blast to clear a dam between West Lake and Lake Ontario was delayed this week because commercial fishermen had not yet removed their ice huts.

The original blast had been planned for Monday but did not take place until Tuesday.

Mother Objects to Soft Drinks Being Dispensed in Schools

BLOOMFIELD — A Carrying Place mother has questioned installation of soft drink vending machines in Prince Edward elementary schools.

Mrs. Brenda Townsend objected to the dispensers in a letter to trustees, stating that soft drinks have no nutritional value. She also said that they usually contain large quantities of sugar.

Mrs. Townsend whose children attend Keefe School in Ameliasburgh, claimed that milk is not available to pupils except through hot chocolate, which also has a high sugar content.

She said that children are being encouraged to form poor eating habits and there is little nutritional education in the schools to provide youngsters with a basis for deciding on what to drink to buy.

"Teaching a child what foods are good for his growth and health is something will benefit from throughout his life, just as much as he will from learning to read and write," she observed.

She said that the school board is selling a poor example by offering children soft drinks. If a beverage is provided, it should be milk.

"I hope the board will review its decision and take responsibility for the health of our children more seriously," remarked Mrs. Townsend.

Trustees authorized business administrator Ernest Short to advise Mrs. Townsend that a special committee had thoroughly investigated the matter and parents consulted about the vending machines supported them.

The beverages offered at the school machines are readily available from other sources and soft-drink profits from the school dispensers will be used by the students' councils to finance some of their projects.

The board also pointed out, in a letter to the concerned parent, that trustees were not encouraging the consumption of soft drinks. The decision lies with the individual.

It was observed by trustee Clare McFaul of Hillier that milk is sold at Sophiasburgh and Wellington schools.

Town Auditor

TRENTON — Town council has passed a resolution naming the Trenton accounting form of Wilkinson and Company as the town's official auditor.

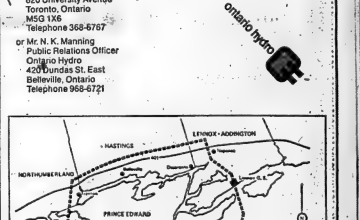
Notice of Public Meetings

Transmission Line Study for Prince Edward County

Ontario Hydro is conducting a study to determine an environmentally and socially acceptable means of transmitting the increased amounts of power needed to maintain adequate and reliable service in Prince Edward County. One or more transmission lines will be required depending on the voltage selected (44,115 or 230 kilovolts).

Questionnaires were made available throughout the study area to help in identifying broad alternative corridors within which rights-of-way could be established. Also, meetings have been held with local municipal authorities, environmental and agricultural organizations.

The meetings listed below have been arranged to further encourage public participation in the study, to discuss the alternatives, and to obtain information concerning any specific locations which the transmission lines should avoid.



Your attendance at one of the meetings will be a welcome contribution to the open planning process through which the most satisfactory solution can be found.

Draft Plan

The insert in Monday's Intelligencer containing highlights of the draft official plan for Belleville is just that — no more, no less — but it does at last, afford citizens some clues as to the shape of things to come in the city.

We are told that the plan will be of assistance to both private interests and public administrators so that, in brief, the former will be able to plan their operations accordingly, and the latter programs future municipal services as well as administrative staff requirements.

There is information under the headings of Planning Districts and Units; Land Use Policies (including such aspects as Environmental Control, Recreation, Residential, Community Facilities Commercial and Industrial); as well as Existing Land Use; Transportation; Engineering Services; Development Policies; Implementation, and finally, Interpretation.

Citizens will want to study the plan and this comprehensive is intended primarily as an encouragement in that direction. At the conclusion there is a note urging readers to have the insert for reference, an important action since this preliminary document is the forerunner of the long-awaited planning initiative where Belleville's future is concerned.

There is one reference in particular which should interest citizens. It comes under the heading of maintenance standards in the section about Development Policies, and it serves notice of a "balanced program of renewal . . ." providing for the conservation of areas of good and stable buildings, rehabilitation of stable buildings in need of repair, and redevelopment of areas which are neither stable nor in good repair.

In view of the somewhat cavalier fashion in which planning has been subverted in the not too distant past, with the growth of high-rise buildings in areas where their desirability was suspect, as well as the abandoning to speculative endeavors of historic buildings, this aspect of the official plan draft is significant and should go far toward correcting any such trend in the future.

All in all this is an important preliminary document on the plan, and we commend it to citizens.

Centennial Prospects

Belleville's centennial in 1978 will be a time of celebration marked by special events. Ideally, everyone should be involved.

Certainly the centennial committee will have to take note of what went before, as well as more recent accomplishments. Here is an example of local interest from a recent column in the Canadian Press Newsfeatures Affairs columnist Vincent Egan. He was writing about the energy crisis being a spur to inventors and about some new patents that had been granted. Stating that Canada's inventors had seldom found much support at home, being obliged to abandon their efforts or turn them over to foreigners to be developed, he went on: "Canada's list of inventions include the world's first successful electronic-wave organ (invented by Morse Robb of Belleville, in 1927), an automated system for machining turbine blades, able-pilot propeller, the jet airliner, the hydrofoil boat, even the telephone. . ."

We were not aware that jet airliners and hydrofoils were Canadian inventions (the latter vessels are used for the most part in countries like Italy and Russia while the only Canadian one, to our knowledge, is a naval gunnish vessel currently in operation in Halifax harbor).

However, a colleague informs us he believes a son of Mr. Morse worked on hydrofoils too, operating one on the bay here. The hydrofoil concept, its invention, on the other hand, is believed to have been earlier still.

Meanwhile if Mr. Robb's work on the organ has not been suitably acknowledged already, or is not widely known (it is going on half-a-century since he put it together) the city will have an opportunity to recognize it, and the work of any other local inventors, whether it achieved national prominence or not, during the centennial.

Challenge Expected from Diefenbaker

Pomp and Circumstance Missing From Leger's Induction

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Just before Parliament's mid-month adjournment, there was still another roaring row between former Conservative Prime Minister Diefenbaker and Liberal Prime Minister Trudeau.

Most of the time they seem to get along just fine.

The Prime Minister gives all the appearances of holding Dief's long parliamentary service and ever-continuing vigorous political life in respect, and perhaps, who knows even sometimes, awe.

The Old Warrior reciprocates, often sympathizing with and supporting the younger Prime Minister in what, from experience, he knows to be burdens of responsibility borne by no other Canadian in no other position.

But when it comes to the Monarchy, and the role of the crown in Canadian affairs of state, the two part company, spitting sparks.

When the Commons rose for the mid-Winter recess, Dief was storming again about what he long has charged, if not actually a "republican plot," has to be a deliberate and calculated "downgrading" as he calls it, of the Monarch by the Liberals whose loyalty he continues holding in worried question.

The Government, he growled, again was fiddling with traditions and symbols of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

The Prime Minister exploded in raging denials.

And he might well have been upset by the accusations, remembering, as he must, how Dief's charges — then well-grounded and substantiated — prior to the last election that the Liberals were lifting the "royal" from the honored name of the RCMP to leave the force known simply as "police," had so damaged the Government in the ballot boxes west of the Lakehead.

The pre-adjournment spat scattered out with the Prime Minister flapping his hand in obvious distaste at Dief, as much as to signal "get lost," or even "drop dead," and the Old Warrior, turning his back in scorn on Mr. Trudeau.

Both sides of the House joined joyously in the tumult.

But now, though, unless something happens to disperse the gathering storm, a gale of turmoil will howl across the Commons floor when Parliament reconvenes.

For that great thunderhead-of-a-man John George Diefenbaker is building up a heavy pressure of the steam of indignation over what he considers is Pierre Trudeau's further dismantling and denigrating of the Crown.

It has been the installation — as I am told, if entirely proper exercise in the best traditions of the institutionalized Department of External Affairs — of the new Governor General, His Excellency Jules Leger, career Canadian diplomat.

It was done in civvies. Striped trousers and morning coat.

Veddy veddy External Affairish.

No spendid uniform, heavy with gold braid, or the DG.

No fine-feathered hat.

No mounted RCMP escort, its banners flying from its lances.

No nothing of the traditional pomp and circumstance.

Not even robes of scarlet on the new Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, Mr. Justice Bora Laskin, who presided over the ceremony performed only 31 times in the last 106 years of Canadian public life.

Again, just those striped trousers and cutaway coat.

Exceedingly unceremonious.

Dief, so far, is not saying much in public.

He is too much of the traditionalist to make a sort of street corner political brawl of it, when such issues belong only be the floor of the Commons.

But he does not have to pop off publicly.

Not when you could see him privately boil the morning of the installation when he viewed the obvious displeasure, and simmer ever since.

"Did I say 'creeping' republicanism," no, I did not," he insists. "But it is simply more of the same that has been going on for the last six years, a carefully planned strategy to erode the authority and eliminate the Crown."

How so?

Well, figures Dief, His Excellency Jules Leger, being a career public servant of 30 years standing, would scarcely discard the vice-regal uniform of braid and hat of plume without consulting with his Prime Minister.

And Pierre Elliot Trudeau had to say something like, "Sure, if you don't want to go for all that royal jazz, then do your own thing."

"I'm worried about Melvin — his snow-blower came back without him."

Gold Boost Will Like ly Strengthen Dollar

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The recent surge of gold to record price levels could be the harbinger of an era of new strength for the dollar.

Until recently, gold and the dollar were on opposite ends of the see-saw. When one strengthened, the other weakened.

But the rivalry between gold and the dollar has been ended by the upheaval of international trade and payments, brought about by the Arab oil producers' economic warfare against their customers, the oil-using countries.

So far, the oil producers have been the clear winners in that warfare They are reaping huge increases in revenues as a direct result of the doubling and redoubling of oil prices, combined with the scarcity that they have managed to create.

Reports have been circulating for several weeks to the effect that the major oil producers want to be paid in gold bullion (or in military hardware, in certain cases).

Even if the reports are not true, the result is the same—to stimulate speculative demand for gold.

Another effect has been to strengthen the U.S. dollar, as well as the Canadian dollar which is closely linked to the U.S. unit.

Why? In the first place, North America is less dependent upon Arab oil than is any other major industrial area, and therefore less susceptible to economic recession.

Second place, the United States has the only capital market big enough to accommodate the financial assets that are beginning to burn a hole in the bottom of Arab treasuries. If certain Arab states are to use their money productively, they will have little alternative but to invest U.S. dollars in U.S. enterprises.

Dollar-area investments have been made all the more attractive by the tax official devaluations of the U.S. dollar since 1971, and the decline of the dollar on foreign-exchange markets throughout much of 1972.

What does this new strength in bullion markets mean for Canada?

It means new opportunities for our long-suffering gold-mining industry.

It has also meant substantial profits to shareholders of goodquality Canadian gold mines. Their stocks have been standout performers in this winter's generally uncertain markets.

It means that the Canadian dollar will stay more in trade with overseas countries, and to that extent will dampen the onward rush of inflation.

But, against this, there is the current upsurge in prices of most commodities, reflecting people's desire to own something tangible—if not gold, then other resources of widely recognized value.

All of these, taken together, usually mean high interest rates. They make any relief from today's high borrowing costs seem even more remote.

Iran's Arms Build-Up Puzzling

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

What in the world is Iran up to? It's not her oil export policy which confuses the West. It's consistent with all the other Middle Eastern oil producing states, to increase prices and admonish the user countries why the era of cheap oil is over. It's her huge defence spending.

Iran's apparently insatiable need for weapons of the most sophisticated kind has not gone unnoticed while the Shah of Arah preachers homilies to the Western press and likes to give the impression his country is somehow democratically-inspired.

Very large Iranian arms purchases have included 30 of the ultra-modern US-built F-14 jet fighters which will cost the country almost $1 billion and 80 British Chieftain battle tanks, giving that country about the same size of tank force as Israel.

The Iranian Navy is the most powerful one in the Persian Gulf. It has already been boosted by British and West German light-class patrol craft and fast motor torpedo boats, good for interception or policing function.

The American jet aircraft sold are not related to the oil crisis. In fact the Iranians are paying twice the price paid by the U.S. department of defence to Grumman Aircraft for the same planes.

The purchase of so many British tanks is somewhat related to the oil squeeze with Whitehall's version of a similar arms-for-oil deal signed between France and Saudi-Arabia a few days earlier. That one guarantees France about half her oil supply into the 1980s and will give the Saudis about the largest French-built air force abroad

Where Iran is concerned the very big petroleum marks it has she has no clear enemy in the world at the moment with the like all her Arab neighbors Iran is not an enemy of Israel, in fact relations are stable and diplomatic relations with Tel Aviv.

And for religious reasons Iran is not an Arab nation so-called, being allegiance to a different sect of Islam than all the other Islamic nations of the Middle East and Asia.

The Soviet Union is a threat and always has been, but postwar treaty arrangements with the United States and Britain, like the long-standing SEATO (South East Asia Treaty Organization) have been in force to protect her against Soviet aggression.

So obviously Iran isn't arming against the West. It is her principal arms supplier The only possible answer must be anticipated Iranian expansion in the Persian Gulf area.

The years Iran has had a running boundary dispute with tiny but oil-rich Kuwait, ruled by an enlightened dot'ot like the Shah of Iran who is bent on the country's course as him, upgrading of his very backward people.

But an Iranian excursion into the Persian Gulf (called the Arabian Gulf by Saudi Arabs) and the smaller oil shiekdoms), would be matters without purpose.

Iran doesn't need more territory The Shah already calls himself His Imperial Highness Mohammed Reza Shah Pahlavi, suggesting direct line to the ancient emperors of Persia who ruled the land mass from Lebanon to the Indian borders in the Fifth Century B.C.

An Iranian war of conquest would never bring it back.

The 'Y' in Cornwall

Cornwall Standard Freeholder

Should the city subsidize the YM-YWCA? Should the Y sell their building?

Both of these questions defy easy answers. Until recently, there was a strong field of thought in Ontario that municipalities should not get into the arena business. But now Cornwall owns two arenas and is talking about building two more—including a large arena and civic centre which could be used for major sports events such as Junior A hockey.

Is the Y really that much different? It contains the only swimming pool in the city that could possibly be used for competitive swim meets at a time when the city is also talking about building swimming pools at the outdoor variety, hardly of as much potential use as the Y pool which can be used all year. And the Y also boasts important gymnasium facilities in an age in which doctors and fitness experts are telling us that we are risking heart attacks, because we are overweight and out of shape.

Frankly we do not know the best way of keeping the Y in operation. But if we are a city on the verge of a building boom, as has been suggested in official quarters, there is a definite need for Y facilities in Cornwall.

Ottawa Conference Achieved A Measure of Accord

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — At one point I had hoped to be able to start this piece with the words Today Canada is a united nation."

This was in the very early stages of the energy conference when it was very evident that the door was open for a new and stronger confederation be cause for the first time since the war there was, in oil, a real crisis facing Canada's 11 governments. And crisis, it seemed inevitable, would force them closer together, more united in national purpose.

Now that the conference is over and there has been time for reflection, those hopeful words can't be said. But really only one of them has to be changed. It is not "united."

We probably are not a "united" country any more than we were only a few days ago.

But we are a "stronger nation."

If the meetings had been able to come to a long-term binding arrangement it would have been possible to say we were much more united.

This wasn't accomplished and actually it would be unfair to expect that it would be.

But then look at the things that did happen:

Perhaps for the first time ever the conference was dominated by the smaller and less wealthy provinces from the west and east, rather than the baronies of Ontario and Quebec.

There was new agreement reached which though only short-term did have the concurrence of all parties, even though in the case of Alberta and Saskatchewan it was reluctant agreement.

This hasn't happened since the war.

There was agreement that there should be a uniform price for gas and oil across the country and that this price should be lower than the world price.

And there was agreement in principle, at least, that there should be a national energy policy.

There was a non-grudging respect for federal power in several areas and also a call for a federal acknowledgment that resources belong the possessions of the provinces.

In comparison to other conferences this was a nation of common interest in action rather than a union of Balkan principalities trying to bargain deals.

Not fully without self-interest by any means, but still working within principles.

And therefore a stronger national body.

Belleville is full of surprises. Page Five of Saturdays issue contained a poem entitled Poet Laureate. What a pity the author must remain hidden in anonymity. If the Friendly City "isn't all that mean, why the reticence?

Sorry to disappoint you Sam . . . there are more important things to be pursued in Belleville than unravelling your mystery.

I leave the good that the people of Belleville do to speak for itself. I prefer to write about those things that the respectable pillars of our society would rather tuck under the rug or our educationalists prefer to ignore.

Unfortunately it is often those nasty little things that adversely affect so many of us. To keep quiet about it is only encouraging it to continue.

The city has the real state of affairs in the Friendly City Sam is to be found in the first sentence of your last paragraph, "I dare not sign my real name." There are many in the same boat.

In closing I can't resist quoting Voltaire "Anonymity is the art of substituting impudence for wit, lending existence to nothing."

Investment in Ulster

Ulster Commentary

A distinguished Japanese needs Northern Ireland's drive to attract Japanese industry.

He is Mr. T. Tsuchiya, one of the 11-man group of senior Japanese business and industrial executives who visited Northern Ireland last year to study how they might invest in European base for manufacturing investment.

The appointment is the latest step by the Ministry's 'expand in Ulster' campaign, which now moves for the first time into direct promotional contact with Japanese industry.

A United Kingdom team, including Northern Ireland representatives took part in a three-day workshop organised by the Industrial Location Centre for some 200 Japanese industrialists who were there to look at the possibilities in Europe for investment.

provide such access.

2. Industrial, commercial, major institutional and predominantly multiple-family residential uses may have access to Arterial Roads but in each instance an attempt shall be made to group developments, in order to reduce the number of access points which could hinder the movement of traffic. Strip or extended linear development shall be discouraged; where such conditions exist the number of access points shall be reduced wherever possible.
In new developments, intersections of local streets with Arterial streets shall be avoided where possible. Access to arterials will generally be from collector streets.

2. COLLECTOR ROADS
Collector roads are existing and proposed roads with a minimum 3-traffic lanes and a right-of-way width of 66 to 86 feet, which are designed in order to collect and carry medium volumes of local traffic to the Arterial roads or to distribute traffic to local roads, as well as to provide access to abutting properties. Notwithstanding, all roads serving industrial areas shall have the minimum width-of-way width of 86 feet.

G. ENGINEERING SERVICES
In order to provide for the orderly growth of the residential, commercial and industrial areas within the Planning Area Section, the Servicer Plan is considered hereto as Schedule F, divides the City into three service areas.
The Policy of this Plan shall be that no new major development or plan of subdivision shall be permitted unless adequate municipal water and sanitary and storm sewer facilities are available to service such a development.
Service Area 1 includes the present built-up part of the Planning Area Section, and some additional areas where further development can be permitted by the construction of minor extensions to the existing municipal services.
Development will be permitted in Service Area 1 immediately.
Service Area 1A consists of the areas adjacent to Service Area 1, where development is dependent upon the construction of major extensions to the existing system of municipal services.
Service Area 2 consists of the proposed Industrial Park area in the south-east portion of Belleville. This Area may be developed independently of the other Service Areas in the Planning Area should an acceptable agreement be worked out between the City and the proposed industrial park with regard to sanitary sewers, water supply and storm drainage.
Service Area 2A consists of two sections of the City — the low-lying land in the north of East Hill and a small area immediately north-west of the Drive-In Theatre that straddles the Dundas Grounds. The larger section requires a storm and sanitary pumping station, as well as storm drainage and the smaller section requires a force main and pumping station to connect with the existing sanitary sewer trunk mains.
For development to proceed in Service Area 2A, force mains and pumping stations will be required to connect with the existing trunk sanitary sewers. In addition, major storm drainage and water main extensions will also be required.
Development will be permitted in Service Area 2A when:
1. The City Council is satisfied that it can reasonably finance and afford the cost of the major extension in Service Area 2 and for such development; or
2. The developer is willing to provide the main extensions required in Service Area 2 and/or 2A for such development at no cost to the City.
Service Area 3 consists of the north-west fringe area of the City, where development is dependent upon provision of sanitary sewer services from Sidney Township which, when available, can provide a gravity sewerage system within the Potter's Creek drainage system.
Development will be permitted in Service Area 3 when a sanitary sewer service can be provided from Sidney Township.

H. DEVELOPMENT POLICIES
The general development policies that are established in this Plan are in accordance with the wishes of the City of Belleville Council whose desire is to control the future development of the Planning Area Section in an orderly and systematic basis.
For the majority of development activities which may be expected to occur, the Plan should not require amendments. However, any proposed large-scale change in land use that is approved shall require an amendment specifying the nature of the development accompanied by supporting text and a future development plan; as well, a public meeting or meetings shall be held to explain the proposed change to the affected ratepayers.

1. SUBDIVISION AGREEMENT
Prior to the development of any plan of the subdivision, the developer shall enter into a subdivision agreement with the City.

2. DEVELOPMENT STAGING
In order to protect the taxpayers of the Planning Area Section from undue financial hardship, the City Council shall ensure that the timing, location and nature of new residential development are such that the demand for municipal services is not excessive, in relation to the taxable assessment provided. This staging of development will be in accordance with the Municipal Services Policies and new large-scale residential development, which may create an unavoidable increase in the demand for municipal services, should not be permitted unless it can be demonstrated that the overall net municipal debt to taxable assessment will not be adversely affected.

3. SECONDARY PLANS
It is the intention of this Plan that prior to any large-scale development or any major plan of subdivision taking place in any Planning District or Planning Unit, a Secondary Plan will be prepared for the Community or a part thereof, outlining in detail the general location of the major road network, required municipal water supply system, sanitary and storm sewer facilities and the general land use areas. At such time as a Secondary Plan is accepted by the City of Belleville the Official Plan shall be amended accordingly.

4. OPEN SPACE
When considering applications for land division the City will require the applicant to convey 5% of the gross area of the subject application for the provision of public open space either in the form of land or of cash in lieu of land.

5. CONSENT POLICIES
When a plan of subdivision is not necessary for the proper and orderly development of the land, a consent to a land conveyance may be granted by the Committee of Adjustment. Such consent will only be given by the Committee after careful consideration of a number of criteria such as the provision of full services to the lots severed lot, the compliance with the appropriate zoning by-law, or if no consent would create a traffic hazard.

6. HOUSING RENEWAL
MAINTENANCE STANDARDS
It is intended that within the City of Belleville a balanced program of renewal, which would provide for the conservation of areas of good and stable buildings, rehabilitation of stable buildings which are in need of repair, and redevelopment of areas which are neither stable nor in good repair, shall be carried out as appropriate. It is further the intention to achieve the conservation and rehabilitation of property throughout the City of Belleville by the passing of a minimum maintenance and occupancy by-law for all types of properties.

I. IMPLEMENTATION
This Official Plan shall be implemented by means of the powers conferred upon the Ontario Planning Board and the Council of the City of Belleville, by the Planning Act, the Municipal Act, and such other Statutes as may be applicable. In particular, this Plan shall be implemented by a Restricted Area By-law, legislation pursuant to The Municipal Act and the construction of public works and a capital works program.

1. RESTRICTED AREA BY-LAW
It is intended that a comprehensive Restricted Area By-law shall be brought into effect in accordance with the provisions of the Planning Act, by the Municipal Council, Such a By-Law shall zone land in accordance with the proposals contained within this Plan, and will establish regulations to control the use of land and the character, location and use of buildings and structures in the whole of the Planning Area Section. It is not intended that all the Residential, Commercial or Industrial areas, as designated on Schedule B, will be zoned for such uses immediately by the implementing Restricted Area By-law. Certain areas may be designated on this Plan may be zoned otherwise, under a holding category, in order to delay their development for the designated use until they appear to be ready for such development and until the standards appropriate to the designated use may be satisfied. Under the "Holding" category the lands may be zoned in various 'holding' zones or other uses. When Council receives an application for the development of such land and suitable Plan of Subdivision studies on the economic and environmental effects, if required, have been prepared, and are deemed suitable by the Ontario Municipal Board and which is in accordance with the designation and policies of this Plan, the "Holding" category may be removed from the implementing By-laws by an amending By-law without any need for an amendment to this Plan.
Existing land uses which are not designated in this Official Plan may be zoned in the implementing Restricted Area By-law for their use at the date of passing of the By-law.

2. SITE PLANS
It shall be a requirement of this Plan that, prior to any development which involves a major commercial development or a residential development of density 3, 4, or 5 or a mobile home development, a site plan shall accompany the application for rezoning and such plan may form the basis of the site plan by-law and/or the site plan agreement.
The site plan shall show location and size of all buildings, parking areas, floor area, height, minimum yards and setbacks, pedestrian walkways areas, parking facilities, density, recreational facilities, elevations, etcetera.

3. AMENDMENT PROCEDURE
Should changing conditions necessitate the need for an amendment from the Official Plan in accordance with Section 17 of The Planning Act, the following procedure shall be followed to ensure that the general public receives adequate notification and, where necessary, input studies shall be carried out.
Prior to recommending to the Municipal Council that any amendment be made to the Official Plan, the Planning Board shall prepare the amendment and notify affected ratepayers of its content, requesting comments and/or discussion of the amendment. In the event that the amendment affects a large number of ratepayers, or is of a general nature, the notice of the special meeting shall be given by advertisement in the local newspaper.
A record shall be made of the special meeting and it shall be appended to the amendment prior to its submission to the Council.

4. GENERAL REVIEW OF THE PLAN
It is intended that this plan will be reviewed from time to time in view of changing conditions, and the general policies and intent of it shall take place at least once every five years.

J. INTERPRETATION
1. IMPACT STUDIES
Before an amendment is made to this plan to change the designated land use of any area in the Planning Board or the developer shall undertake studies which will clearly indicate to the satisfaction of Municipality:
i. Commercial
(a) the justification for establishing in one of the designated shopping centres or in the downtown Commercial area (C.B.D.);
(b) that additional retail floor space is justified by reason of unanticipated increase in population growth, personal disposal income and/or retail sales per capita;
(c) that a proposed new regional centre will not have a detrimental effect on already designated regional centres or the downtown Commercial area;
(d) that no undue transportation difficulties would ensue from the establishment of the proposed use;
(e) that all other requirements of this Plan have been met.
2. Residential
(a) that the proposed residential development will not have a detrimental effect on existing residents;
(b) that no undue transportation difficulties would ensue from the proposed development;
(c) that no undue over-use of community facilities or recreational facilities would ensue;
(d) that all other requirements of this type did exist; and
(e) that all other requirements of this Plan have been met.

Highlights of Draft Official Plan for The City of Belleville

SUMMARY REPORT

A. INTRODUCTION

Since early 1972 the Quinte Planning Board has been in the process of preparing a new Official Plan for the City of Belleville. This Plan has now been completed as a draft Official Plan and is the result of the analysis and synthesis of numerous planning studies, discussions with Quinte Planning Board staff, public meetings, task force reports, and decisions made by the Quinte Planning Board and the Council of the City of Belleville.

This Summary Report does not contain the entire Official Plan for the Belleville Section of the Quinte Planning Area but instead has attempted to outline the basic policies contained within the Plan that will guide the pattern of development within the City of Belleville. Schedules A, B, C, D, E and F constitute part of the Official Plan in addition to the text.

B. PURPOSE AND SCOPE OF THE PLAN

The purpose of this Official Plan is to set forth the general policies concerned with the sharing and guiding of the physical growth and arrangement of the Belleville Section of the Quinte Planning Area, in harmony with the social and economic needs in order to attain the most desirable quality of environment for the present and future inhabitants of the Planning Area.

The scope of this Plan is to establish a general framework within which future growth may be directed. This framework includes the designation of major land use areas, the major road patterns, a municipal services plan and a density management plan setting out the pattern in which the future growth should take place to provide for the potential population increase.

It is intended that this Plan will be of assistance to both private interests and public administrators in order that:

a. the private interests may understand the future development policies of the Belleville Section of the Quinte Planning Area, and hence, be encouraged to plan their operations accordingly; and

b. the public administrators will benefit by the ability to program future municipal services such as roads, schools, parks, water supply, sanitary sewers, storm drainage, police and fire protection, health services, as well as Belleville's administrative staff requirements. This long-term municipal planning will result in the provision of more adequate services at the most economical level.

This Official Plan establishes, in very general terms, the pattern which development within the Belleville Section of the Quinte Planning Area should follow during the planning period to 1991. In addition, this Official Plan provides a comprehensive legal document to guide and direct future development in a logical and orderly manner. It attempts to correct the errors of past development, so as to ensure a healthy growth pattern which will benefit all of the residents of the Planning Area.

C. PLANNING DISTRICTS AND PLANNING UNITS

This Official Plan establishes a system of "Planning Districts" and "Planning Units" for the Belleville Section of the Quinte Planning Area. This system is intended to serve these purposes.

1. To help in identify or create distinct areas of the City with their own centres of interest and other recognizable common characteristics, thereby providing the residents with smaller areas than the whole City to which they may relate.

2. To establish a workable basis for more detailed planning and the application of planning design standards.

The system of Planning Districts and Planning Units adopted in this Plan are set out on "Schedule A - Planning Districts and Planning Units".

The boundaries of the Planning Districts are based on desirable secondary school attendance areas and distinct physical boundaries such as transportation arteries or significant natural features which limit accessibility between Districts. Each Planning District is divided into Planning Units. The boundaries of the Planning Units are based on a combination of desirable public elementary school attendance areas and parkland accessibility, as well as transportation arteries and natural features. Major commercial, industrial and recreational areas, which serve the Planning Area as a whole, have been excluded from the Planning Districts and Planning Units as defined on Schedule A.

A Planning District should contain or have reasonable access to such amenities and services as a secondary school, a senior elementary school, two or more junior elementary schools and a separate elementary school; a shopping centre or general commercial area, a community or subregional park and two or more local parks and other community facilities such as a community centre, library and fire station.

The Planning Unit should contain or have convenient access to such services and amenities as a junior public elementary school, a local shopping area, and a local park or suitable local park area combined with, a community or sub-regional park.

In the older developed areas of Belleville the requirements of a Planning Unit have not been met; however, should redevelopment of the area take place, every attempt will be made to meet the aforementioned criteria.

D. LAND USE POLICIES

The land use resources of the Belleville Section of the Quinte Planning Area are allocated in accordance with the land use pattern shown on "Schedule B - Land Use Plan". The Land Use Plan establishes the pattern of development in general terms by dividing the Planning Area Section into six basic land use classifications: Environmental Control, Recreational, Residential, Community Facilities, Commercial and Industrial. Some of the policies governing these land use classifications and subclassification within them, are outlined herein.

1. ENVIRONMENTAL CONTROL

Lands designated as Environmental Control are lands having inherent environmental hazards such as riverbanks, flood plains, valley slopes, ponds and swamps and lands so designated are intended primarily for the protection and conservation of the natural environment, particularly along the Moira River Valley and connecting drainage channels. Reference should be made to "Schedule C - Recreation Plan" for the delineation of the Environmental Control areas.

The uses permitted shall be limited to agriculture, nurseries, conservation, public or private parks, golf courses, public boat launching facilities, walking trails or other outdoor recreational activities.

Where any land designated as Environment Control area is under private ownership, this plan does not intend that this land will necessarily remain designated as such indefinitely, nor shall it be construed as implying that such areas are free and open to the general public, or that such areas will be purchased by the City of Belleville or other public agency. An application for the redesignation of the Environmental Control area, for other purposes, will be given due consideration by the Council of the City of Belleville after taking into account:

1. That the existing environmental hazard(s) and/or inherent physical liabilities preclude development.
2. The proposed methods by which the hazard(s) are to be overcome in a manner consistent with accepted engineering techniques and resource management practices;
3. That a full engineering report indicates the hazard(s) will not be transferred to another area;
4. That the entire cost of the proposed remedial works will be borne by the developer.
5. That until such time as it is proven that the hazard(s) can be overcome, no permanent development shall take place on lands designated as Environmental Control areas.

There is no public obligation however, in either redesignation or purchase any land if there is an existing or potential hazard that would be difficult or costly to overcome.

Where any new development is proposed on a site which includes areas designated for Environmental Control because of a physical or environmental hazard, such hazard lands shall not necessarily be acceptable as part of the five percent dedication for parkland provided for in The Planning Act, R.S.O., 1970, and amendments thereto. All Environmental Control lands dedicated to the municipality under subdivision procedures or site plan agreements shall be conveyed in a satisfactory physical condition; if an open watercourse is involved, the dedication shall provide sufficient area of land for proper maintenance operations to be carried out.

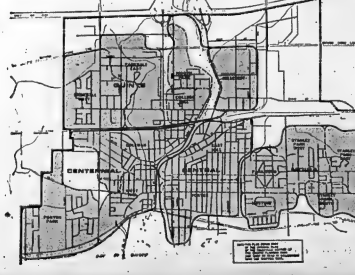
2. RECREATION

The Recreational classification of land shall mean that the predominant land use shall be for public and private outdoor recreation.

The Recreational lands shall be divided into three subclassifications: Local/Neighbourhood, Community and Special, and Sub-Regional. Reference should be made to Schedule C which locates the Recreational subclassifications on a specific area within the Planning Area Section.

The Local/Neighbourhood areas are open spaces primarily located within areas of residential development which tend to serve the residents of a specific area — the uses permitted shall be limited to parks and playgrounds that serve, predominantly, the local Planning Unit residents including passive and active recreational activities such as outdoor sports, landscaped or natural open space areas and accessory uses such as parking lots, accessory park buildings or other uses incidental to the Local Recreational uses.

The Community and Special Use Parks are open spaces which, by reason of their location, their existing or potential development or functional use, tend to serve a more extensive area than the residents of the City of Belleville. The uses permitted shall be limited to active and play-oriented facilities such as tennis courts, playing courts, major recreational activities such as tennis grounds, athletic grounds, swimming pool indoor sports, botanical and zoological gardens and landscaped or natural open space areas. Accessory uses such as parking facilities including, but not restricting facilities incidental to the Community and Special use shall be permitted. In addition, overhead hydro, telephone, commercial uses that enhance the recreational use such as convenience and service facilities shall be allowed as long as they exclusively serve the Park and do not detract from the natural and waterfront amenities of the Recreational use.



The determination of the amount and and location of the three types of parkland shall be guided by the following general standards:

	Acres per 1,000 Population
Local/Neighbourhood	2.5
Community and Special	2.5
Sub-Regional	5.0
	10.0

Where parkland deficiencies cannot be met in areas that were suitable for development prior to the approval of this Plan, use of school grounds shall be considered as park recreation lands. In determining the amount of recreational land required for each Planning District, it is recognized, however, that it may not be practical or possible to meet the objectives in all parts of the Planning Area Section; however, consideration shall be given to achieving these objectives in all new developments.

For lands not shown as Recreational on Schedule C and a deficiency exists in the Planning Unit or District, the following criteria shall apply to the acquiring of additional Recreational land.

1. Areas that are best suited because of physical characteristics, ownership, or location shall be retained or acquired for Recreational uses.
2. Where desirable, encouragement should be given to locate new Recreational facilities immediately adjoining school properties so that joint use may be made of these facilities. Recreational areas may be zoned in separate categories in the implementing Restricted Area By-law.

THE INTELLIGENCER, BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, SATURDAY, MAY 26, 1973

law.

3. In any comprehensive redevelopment scheme appropriate parks and recreation facilities shall be established.

Any of the park and open space types set out in this Plan may be combined, provided that any conflicts between the recreation needs of different age groups are minimized.

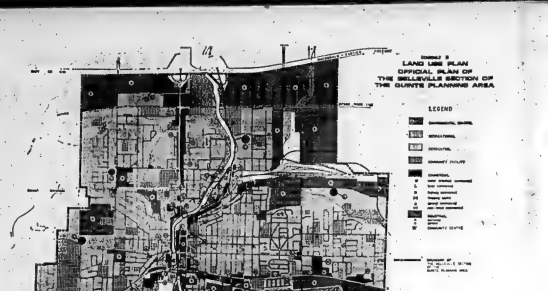
5. RESIDENTIAL

The Residential classification of land shall mean that the predominant use of land so designated shall be for varying densities and types of residential land uses (1) The five Residential subclassifications are: Density 1 Residential, Density 2 Residential, Density 3 Residential, Density 4 Residential and Density 5 Residential. In addition, such non-residential uses as are complementary to and serve the Residential area, such as local occupational uses, public and community facilities such as schools, parks and playgrounds, places of worship and existing local commercial uses.

It is intended that overall future housing patterns consist of approximately 45 percent ownership and 55 percent rental housing accommodation. In addition, the overall distribution of multiple housing types shall be approximately 40 percent in horizontal multiple dwellings or townhouses and 60 percent in apartment houses.

The maximum number of dwelling units per gross acre for the various densities shall not exceed:

Density 1	8
Density 2	10
Density 3	30
Density 4	45
Density 5	80



(1) Note: For the purpose of this Subsection, "Residential" land uses may refer to any of a broad range of dwelling types from single-family homes to apartment buildings.

Mobile Home Residential area may be located in any Density 2 Residential area, as shown on Schedule D, as long as the development has a minimum site of ten acres and the density does not exceed seven units per gross acre; it shall be developed in accordance with a site plan.

6. COMMUNITY FACILITIES

The Community Facilities classification of land shall mean that the predominant use of the land in the area so designated shall be for such uses which exist for the benefit of the residents of the Planning Area Section, and which are owned by the municipality or other public organization for this purpose.

The uses permitted shall be limited to educational facilities including public, separate and private schools; places of worship, nursing homes, other civic and institutional uses such as hospitals, fire halls, police stations, libraries, museums and similar uses. In addition, municipal and private utilities works such as water purification and sewage treatment works, telephone and gas utility operating facilities, and similar uses shall be permitted uses, provided that adequate precautions shall be taken to ensure that such uses have no adverse effects on adjacent land uses.

E. EXISTING LAND USE

Any land use existing at the date of approval of this Plan that does not conform with the land use designations as shown on Schedule "B" and Schedule "C" or the policies related thereto, as a general rule, should cease to exist. In special instances, however, it may be desirable to permit the extension or enlargement of such a non-conforming use in order to avoid unnecessary hardship. It is the intention of this Plan that any such extension or enlargement shall be processed under the authority of Section 35 (21) or Section 42 (1) of The Planning Act, R.S.O., 1970, as amended.

1. SECTION 35(21) OF THE PLANNING ACT

This Section applies to any application for the enlargement or expansion of an existing land use which is neither designated in the Official Plan nor zoned as a permitted use in the implementing Restricted Area By-law (hereinafter call non-conforming use).

Any application, in accordance with Section 35(21) of The Planning Act, for the extension or enlargement of a use, which is not permitted by the implementing Restricted Area By-law and which existed at the date of passing of such By-law, shall be dealt with in the following manner:

1. Possible Acquisition

The Quinte Planning Board and the Council of the City of Belleville, as the case may be, shall evaluate the possibility and desirability of acquiring the property concerned either at the time of application or in the future, and of holding, selling or redeveloping the property in accordance with the provisions of The Planning Act. At the same time, consideration shall be given to the possibility of re-locating the use under consideration to a designated and zoned area where it would be able to function under improved conditions in accordance with the policies of this Official Plan.

2. Amending By-law

If, after investigation, municipal acquisition of the property does not appear to be feasible, but the case deem it desirable to grant permission for the extension or enlargement of the non-conforming use, Council may consider the granting of an amendment to the Restricted Area By-law, pursuant to Section 35(21) of The Planning Act. Such a By-law may then be passed without amending the Official Plan, providing it complies with the policies of subsection (3) as set out below:

3. Planning Board and Council Consideration

Prior to making any decision on the application, the Council will refer such application to the Planning Board for a report on the various aspects of the matter for the information of Council. The Council, before passing such an amending By-law shall be satisfied that those of the following requirements which are relevant to the specific application for the extension or enlargement of the use area, or will be, fulfilled in order to safeguard the wider interests of the general public:

(a) That the proposed extension or enlargement of the established non-conforming use shall not unduly aggravate the situation created by the existence of the use, especially in regard to the policies of the Official Plan and the requirements of the implementing Restricted Area By-law applying to the area;

(b) That the proposed act ion or enlargement shall be in an appropriate proportion to the size of the existing use established prior to the date of passing of the implementing Restricted Area By-law;

(c) That if such applicati n necessitates a change in the boundaries of the different land use designations on the Land Use Plan, such extension or enlargement will only be processed under these policies, if the boundary change can be considered as a "minor adjustment" permitted under the flexible clause of the Official Plan without the need for an amendment. Any major variances will require an amendment to the Official Plan;

(d) That the characteristics of the existing use and the proposed extension or enlargement shall be examined with regard to noise, vibration, fumes, smoke, dust, odors, lighting and traffic-generating capacity, if one or more of the above nuisance factors will be created or increased so as to add essentially to the incompatibility of the use with the surrounding area, then an amendment to the implementing Restricted Area By-law shall be made;

(e) That the neighbouring conforming uses will be protected by the provision of areas for landscaping, buffering or screening, appropriate setbacks for buildings and structures, devices and measures to reduce nuisances and, where necessary, by regulations for alleviating adverse effects caused by outside storage, lighting, advertising signs, etc. The above measures shall be applied to the proposed extension or enlargement and, wherever feasible, also be applied to the established use in order to improve its compatibility with the surrounding area;

(f) That traffic generation and parking conditions in the vicinity will not be adversely affected by the application and that its hazards will be kept to a minimum by appropriately designed lanes and egress points to and from the site, and improvements of sight conditions, especially in proximity to intersections, so as to provide maximum safety for pedestrians and vehicular traffic;

(g) That adequate provisions have been, or will be made for offstreet parking, loading and unloading facilities;

(h) That appropriate municipal services such as storm drainage, water supply, sanitary sewers, and roads, etc, are available or will be made available.

4. Notification of Ratepayers

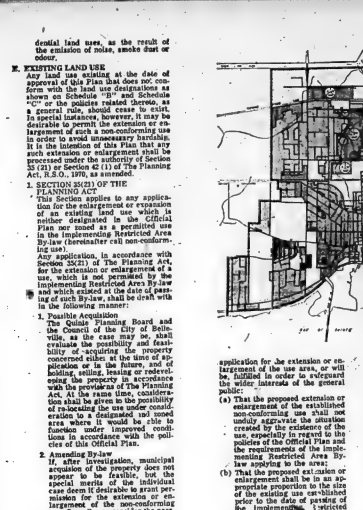
It shall be the policy of the City of Belleville to notify all property owners in the area affected of each application for the extension or enlargement of a non-conforming use, prior to a final decision on the matter, in order to obtain their views and to satisfy the requirements of Section 12 of The Planning Act R.S.O. 1970, as amended.

5. Council Decision

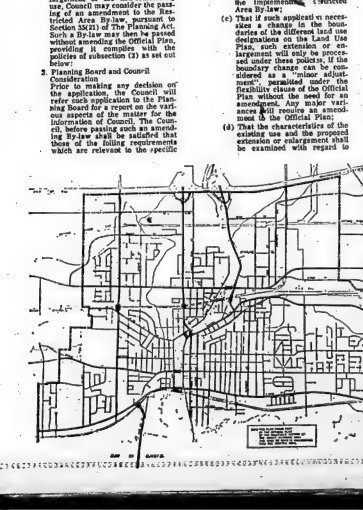
Council will not pass an amendment to the implementing Restricted Area By-law, pursuant to Section 35(21) of The Planning Act, before it is satisfied in regard to the policies contained in the preceding subsection (3).

3 SECTION 42 OF THE PLANNING ACT

Section 42 of The Planning Act, concerns application to the Committee of Adjustment. This Committee, provided the general intent and purpose of the Official Plan and implementing By-law are maintained, may authorize minor variances, enlargements, extensions and changes in use from the provisions of the implementing Restricted Area By-law.



F. TRANSPORTATION



The Transportation Plan is based on the inter-relationship of land use requirements and transportation requirements. The road network is based on and designed to facilitate the satisfactory movement of both people and goods to and from various land use areas within the Planning Area, as well as to facilitate through-traffic movement. The overall road pattern shall be influenced by the proposed road patterns of the adjoining municipalities, the County Road system and the Provincial Highway system.

A functional classification of the road and street network within the Planning Area Section, both existing and proposed, is described on Schedule E, according to their predominant function. Where additional land is required for widenings, extensions and intersection improvements, such land shall be obtained, whenever possible, in the course of approving plans of subdivision under the authority of The Planning Act or by conditions attached to individual consents.

1. ARTERIAL ROADS

a. Arterial roads are existing and proposed roads on 2 to 4 traffic lanes. These roads will have, where possible, a minimum right-of-way width of 86 feet for 2 lanes and 100 feet for 4 lanes, which are designed to facilitate the inter-municipal and through-movement of high volumes of traffic to and from traffic-generating sectors in the Planning Area Section. Direct access to abutting properties should be restricted unless it is absolutely necessary to

"Nutrition In Winter"

By KATHIE SNOBELEN

KATHIE SNOBELEN

Ida Burns & Associates Inc., 1260 Lakeshore Road East, Port Credit, Ontario.

Winter always seems to bring with it the cold and flu season — and along with that, emphasis is on eating the 'right' foods to help the body resist such infections. A wise selection of foods is important all year round—not only in the winter months. A person who has a well-balanced diet all year will have the maximum resistance to such minor infections as we experience during the winter months.

Much has been heard recently about the role of Vitamin C (ascorbic acid) in helping the body to resist colds. Just how effective this theory is, is largely a matter of conjecture. Since the human body cannot store this Vitamin, we must be careful to include a source of Vitamin C in our diets each day. Any Vitamin C in excess of what the body requires is excreted. Therefore there would appear to be little advantage to taking massive amounts of Vitamin C. The amount of Vitamin C required by the body can be found in four ounces of orange juice, or by eating 1 medium orange. Incidentally, the cheapest form of Vitamin C is found naturally in orange juice.

Unsweetened fresh-frozen orange juice concentrate in 12 oz. can provides the day's requirement of Vitamin C (30 mg.) at a cost of 1.5 cents.

Winter vegetables such as cabbage, broccoli, and turnip also contain reasonable amounts of Vitamin C and are readily available throughout the winter months.

It's Candles and Cold Water At Holiday Inn in Grenada

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (Reuter) — The Caribbean spice island of Grenada faced siege conditions today with its independence from Britain only eight days away.

Candles and cold water are the chief demand from 35 guests still left at Holiday Inn, now the only hotel of any size left open on the island.

All the others—30 or more—have closed as staff deserted, electricity stopped and food supplies ran out. Last to go was the Spice Island Inn which closed its doors to visitors this week because of the island-wide strikes by essential workers.

Travelers reaching Barbados Tuesday night said all shops on the island are closed and electricity has been shut off for more than a week.

Looting continues in isolated parts of the capital, St. George's following riots and shooting last week over demands for the resignation of Premier Eric Gairy.

"The whole island is gradually running down," said one man who left Grenada Tuesday. "There's no rioting just now. Twice they tried to start fresh demonstrations, but the government radio broadcast calls for special aides to intervene by the truckload and the marchers back down.

"No one is really giving way on either side though. It's like a volcano. There is fear and anger throughout the island and one spark could set them rioting again."

The "special aides" are squads of volunteer police who touched off last week's riots. One man died when they attacked anti-Gairy demonstrators with knives, bottles, bricks and pick handles. The Islanders call them "Mongoose Squads" and cite their strong-arm tactics as a major reason for the anti-Gairy movement.

Injunction 'Bleeps' Up CBC Show

TORONTO (CP) — The CBC for a shortened version, will be tried to fight an injunction rebroadcast.

that forced it to delete, during broadcast, portions of a hard-hitting radio documentary on lead pollution in many areas.

A CBC lawyer said the publicly-owned network expects to take court action today to dissolve the injunction, taken out by two Toronto lead smelting companies.

Mark Starowicz, executive producer of the series "As It Happens, said that if court action is successful, the entire program, called Dying of Lead, The entire hour-long program was heard in the four Atlantic provinces Tuesday because the injunction, issued by the Ontario Supreme Court, arrived just before that broadcast-stanlate any viewpoints.

The injunction, taken out by Canada Metal Co. Ltd., and Toronto Refiners and Smelters Ltd., is effective for 10 days.

It prohibits the CBC from broadcasting "implications that the companies have "brought misleadingly favorable medical evidence and concealed material evidence from medical experts and from mis-stating the amounts the plaintiffs are spending to install pollution control devices."

The broadcast to Ontario and Quebec was interrupted 13 minutes after the start. An announcer read the text of the injunction during the first deletion in the broadcast.

An electronic bleep blanked out the second portion cut from the program. It also was broadcast in Western Canada with the text of the injunction and the bleep.

The first deletion was of an interview with Dr. Henrietta Sachs who was brought to Toronto by Canada Metal.

The second deletion was part of an interview with Samuel Epstein, professor of environmental health at Case Western Reserve University medical school in Cleveland.

He said in part that on the basis of his experience in the United States, he concluded that it was possible for industry "to buy data" it wanted "to subvert."

Boom and Bust Old Tale For Farmers of Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — The current upswing in farm income is not new to Canada's farmers who have seen many boom-and-bust cycles, but this year's boom may break many of them, the annual agriculture outlook conference was told Tuesday.

Dr. P. J. Thair, head of the University of Saskatchewan's agricultural economics department, said that during this year of unprecedented net income, farmers will become locked in commitments to higher costs which they may not be able to meet next year.

Following record net income in 1973, farmers this year will be able to pay the rapidly escalating prices for land, machinery and such production tools as fertilizer.

"The energy crisis will probably add to price increases."

These costs increase the vulnerability as his farmers, he said.

The conference was told profitcied net farm income this ye is estimated at $4.6 billion compared with the record of almo $3 billion in 1973, basically de rived from grain sales.

Other implications of the "ur precedented and unpredicted boom of 1972-74 include a widening of the gap between the rich and poor farmers and "a halt in the decline of farms.

Dr. Thair said 50 per cent of the farms now reap 10 or 12 per cent of all farm product sales and the percentage is growing.

Higher income will not attract new farmers because of the higher initial costs and ghc many young people now enter ing farming are only replacements for older farmers who

"low find it profitable to sell out. In spite of the current boom, he conference indicated there s no more certainty in farming ow than previously.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said there was a common thread through the conference that 1974 will be a year of uncertainty and many agricultural economists, as in past years, acknowledged their crystal balls could be clouded.

"The time when we really need forecasts are when gross changes occur and these are the very times when we can't predict them," Dr. Thair said.

The basic problem remains—the primary national industry depends on world conditions, such as bumper crops or the lack of them. Added to that are internal problems such as grain handling, shipping and transportation.

There were few indications consumers would be relieved of higher food prices.

The conference does not predict consumer prices, but forecast continued strong prices at the farm gate.

Grain prices will remain high and although beef prices may vary, they will be near the high 1973 levels.

Pork prices were predicted to be maintained above the 1973 levels during the first part of this year with some softening possible in the second half.

Held two months later than usual to keep the industry informed about crop and marketing prospects, the conference was told consumers should have more say in marketing boards.

Benoit Lavigne, Quebec Agricultural Marketing Board chairman, said surpluses should be handled by a national marketing board with consumers part of the management group.

He warned against accepting current industry thinking that only producers should be directors of a national marketing agency.

"Administrators of a plan or those who steer the management of supply can use statistics . . . without heed for consumers, the trade, or the public interest taken as a whole."

The market is Canadian and there should be no frontiers between provinces, he said.

MEMO FROM HELEN GAGEN

CONSUMER ADVISOR, MIRACLE FOOD MART, 74 REXDALE BLVD., REXDALE, ONT. M9W 1P2.

PLEASE HELP US CONSERVE PAPER

Canada is facing a critical paper shortage. Newspapers are shrinking, people are starting to write on both sides of sheets of paper as they did during World War II, and bags should no longer be regarded as something to get rid of as quickly as possible.

For some time, Miracle Food Mart has requested customers not to ask for double bagging unless it's essential. The purpose then was to cut down on overhead, since bags cost 2 or 3 cents each, and unnecessary use of them could contribute to higher prices.

Now we earnestly request that you manage without double bagging whenever possible. This is not only to keep costs in line since the price of paper is rising dramatically, but also to help conserve an important natural resource.

The large bags now used in most Miracle Food Marts are extra strong and definitely don't need doubling. If for a special reason you must have a small bag doubled, the cashier is instructed to oblige you. But please, for the sake of our country's dwindling resources, keep those requests to the necessary minimum.

More Exotic Recipes to Try

A German folk proverb is: "Kissing don't last cooking do". Germans love to eat and cook and they do this with gusto! They enjoy food which is rich and flavorful, but within substantial! It is not heavy fare when well-prepared. However, German food cannot be called frivolous because eating is a serious business in this country.

This is a land of diverse cultures and the cooking retains its regional characters.

Canadians are indebted to Germany as the land of Christmas. Their gift to us was the decorated fir tree, the cookie house; the gingerbread men, the roast goose and the fruit-filled holiday breads.

In most places the day starts with a first breakfast of coffee or hot chocolate, sweet rolls and jams, sometimes even eggs and cheese.

Work and school start earlier there than in Canada and around mid-morning there may be a second breakfast of sandwiches and coffee. In the country the main meal is at midday, but in the cities dinner is the meal of night. The five o'clock Kaffee Klatsch is a popular tradition with whipped-cream-topped coffee and a selection from a tray of many layered tortes. The day ends with a supper of cold meat, cheese and dark rye or chocolate-colored pumpernickle bread. In between there are "munchings" for students and children from specially packaged bags of nuts and raisins or else they enjoy thinly-sliced buttered bread with slivers of bitter chocolate.

Engagement

Mr. and Mrs. Burt Vanecst (formerly of Corbyville) are pleased to announce the forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Joanne Alice, to Stephen Hamilton, son of Mr. and Mrs. H.T. Dodge of Belleville. The marriage will take place Friday, February 1 at 7:30 p.m. in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Chinese food, like that of the rest of the Orient is quick and easy to cook. The shortage of fuel, the lack of cooking facilities, the high cost of protein foods plus the eating utensils used, brought about the tradition to sliver everything. Matchstick pieces allow the food to cook quickly and evenly and help extend the scarce items. The only vegetable not to be sliced is the succulent snow pea pod.

The food is tossed or "stir-fired" in a large bowl shaped "wok". The cook can control the perfect degree of crispiness of the vegetables by the cook edges of the pot, while meats can continue to cook in the bottom, close to the heat.

Ann Landers

Would-be Mother Needs Reassurance

Dear Ann Landers: This is to the woman who signed herself Unlucky Lady because her husband is sterile and she is considering artificial insemination. My husband is also sterile and both of our beautiful little ones were conceived by artificial insemination. I would like to give her some advice and relieve her of her doubts if I can.

1. Don't worry about the baby not looking like either of you. After all, you will be the baby's biological mother. Also, your doctor will pick a donor who looks as much like your husband as possible. If your husband is a short, stocky Italian, your doctor will not choose a donor who is a tall, blond Norwegian.

2. Don't worry about the donor not being intelligent. Your doctor will not go through the phone book picking names at random. He will more than likely choose a medical student, so the baby's biological father will have the brains to get through college and into graduate school.

3. Don't worry about strange diseases cropping up in your baby. My doctor told me all of his donors were married medical students who had fathered at least two normal, healthy children. Your doctor, I'm sure, will choose your donor just as carefully.

4. Take Ann Landers's advice; resist the urge to confide in anyone.

The rewards are tremendous. You will have a normal, happy pregnancy. Your husband will be the father of your baby. His name will be on your baby's birth certificate. He will be as much your baby's father as you will be his mother. Forget everything else, and good luck to both of you. I hope you come to have a long wait for the little one you both must want so much. Just sign me.—Been There

Dear B.T.: Thanks for a daybrightener. Your letter will mean a great deal to a great many.

Dear Ann Landers: I'd like to say a word to that big mouth who signed himself, Irked in Springfield.

I work in a grocery store and make the magnificent sum of $1.65 an hour. I work Christmas, Easter, Thanksgiving and New Year's Day. Lovely, isn't it? As for his gripe that most cashiers aren't very polite, let me tell you that more than half of the customers are unbearable. As a matter of fact, most people are rotten to the core.

How can a cashier be polite when a guy comes in loaded, throws a case of bottled beer on your cash register, and breaks the case? Then you have to smell the stuff all night.

Today two guys gave me fives and insisted they were twenties. That trick is so old you'd think they'd be ashamed to pull it, but I get at least four of those creeps a week.

I live for the day when everything will be automatic and salespeople will be obsolete. You'll put your money in a machine and out will come the merchandise. Wouldn't that be great?—Down With Humanity

Dear Down: If ever a person was nailed to his job, you are. For the sake of the store and the customers, as well as your own, you should get into another line of work—much. Just sign me—Been Fishing in Alaska.

Confidential To Can't Stand Your Double-Domed Ball-Headed Boss: I hate to kick a man when he's down, but I think you ought to skip your column and go right to the comics. There's nothing here for you.

Women's World Shaken by Press

LONDON (AP) — European feminists are publishing a new type of women's magazine designed to shake up the cutesy-and-crochet set and give liberated ladies a new lease on life.

The magazines are getting rich, but their message seems to be spreading beyond the ranks of committed women's liberationists.

They're written, designed and edited by feminists. Wide-ranging, unaggressive and usually self-financed, they place science, art and current affairs above miracle makeups and the latest sex techniques.

Cheers are reserved for new advances in child care, community aid and contraception.

The practicality of the magazines, reflects a change in the women's lib movement in Europe away from the unbridled clamor of the late 1960s.

In Britain, for example, militant feminists suspended many countrywide demonstrations for grassroots work.

"We're primarily a news and factual magazine," said Rose Adex, one of six women producing Britain's monthly Spare Rib. "We're read by lefty politicos and ordinary women with kids at home as well as by feminists."

First published in the summer of 1972, Spare Rib has a climbing circulation of 20,000, midway between Norway's Sirene, with 30,000, and Holland's Opjin Mak Way with 5,000.

All three fall well short of the circulation of traditional women's magazines, like the British publication, Woman, with a circulation of 2.7 million and Woman's Real with 1.3 million.

Sirene was launched last September selling thousands of newstand copies as Norway's magazine industry floundered.

Aimed at being a leading publisher, it balanced tradition with liberation in hopes of "changing the basic social conditions of Norwegian women," says its editor Bitten Jonsson.

The newest of the magazines is Effe, a slick monthly launched in Rome last November from a new women's cultural centre. Modelled on the American magazine Ms., Effe channels feminist information and gives Italy's pioneer feminists a chance to reach out to other women in print. It is the brainchild of a small group of working women and housewives who share socialist and feminist beliefs.

Successful Living

Smokers Have More Colds

By DORIS CLARK

One authority says that women who have more than five colds a year are always smokers.

We do know for sure that cigarette smoking is definitely linked up with bronchial troubles — and why shouldn't it be? Our bodies were made to inhale air - air containing purifying oxygen which gets into our blood streams and keeps us healthy. If we inhale smoke instead of air we irritate tissues and impede body functions wherever that smoke touches.

And because the smoke leaves a residue of a black film, it may leave permanent discoloring organs afterwards.

Because the oxygen we are able to gasp between puffs is drastically cut down, the heart has to beat faster to supply the amount the body needs in its tissues. Hence the heart attacks.

And here's a thought for the would-be smoker: The minute you stump out your last cigarette, the harm you have done begins to repair itself. Give nature a chance.

Dear Doris: Some time ago you answered an elderly couple, who said that their son-in-law thought they came to visit them all too often. Your answer was that they should find other people who want and need what they have to give! Every family is different; yours is delightfully close and loving - a fine tribute to the way you raised them - and the way you encourage them now.

Dear Doris: Could you explain why stocks (particularly mutual funds) have been going down in value, while bank and trust company interest rates on customers' investments and savings accounts have been increasing?

Dear B.M.: This is a little out of my line, but a financial adviser explains it like this:

Stocks have been going down because potential investors are being attracted away by guaranteed eight to 10 percent investment certificates. The seemingly endless demand for loans is pushing up interest rates - the law of supply and demand.

Some mutual funds have had to sell blocks of stock at ridiculously low prices to pay off fund redemptions.

Ask Doris about your difficulty, writing her in care of this newspaper. She will discuss it or send you to a source of help.)

Moira Shoreline: Water-soaked Sign Says It All

River Ice Hazardous

Thaw Could Mean Easy Spring

Bellevillians are being urged to use extra caution around the mouth of the Moira River — particularly in the heavier-travelled Victoria Park west bank.

For much of its length along the park, the river is now open and the current "quite strong" as ground runoff upriver swells the volume of water in the city area, Don Barrett, Belleville harbormaster, said Tuesday.

The main runoff channel on park's west side was recently cleared of slush to prevent water backup and flooding. Much of this channel is now open, and ice is its immediate vicinity has been weakened.

"It could be potential"- "s- zardous for people to use that ice. They should stay a-a-y

Crackdown Is Planned On Behavior in Parks

More people and freer—wheeling lifestyles may see more severe enforcement attitudes in the 1970s in provincial parks — heavily-used in the Quinte district.

What's happening is that more people are making more nuisance, and authorities are finding they must take a stemer line.

Signs of the times are the total of charges laid by police and park officers in Lake Ontario provincial parklands, among the most popular of which are in Prince Edward County.

In the popular sand beach parks along the lake, 100 charges were laid for liquor violations, drug possession, traffic and Parks Act violations.

The swing has also been felt at the north end of the Quinte district.

This month a Belleville youth paid more than $200 on three friends $100 for various violations of parks, camping, alcohol and drug laws. The charges dated from incidents in Bon Echo park last July.

The harder line is being forced on parks authorities as a result of modern-living, claim ministry officials.

Once, the effects of vandalism and other violations were settled in a more familiar way—park officers worked through parents of young violators, if direct communication failed.

But such easy-going methods of reaching subtlers in parks like Bon Echo or Outlet-Sandbanks in Hastings County, now are under attack, says a regional ministry spokesman.

"A freer style of living, from urban attikudes to authority ... and a breezy press of people have subtly changed Canadian public behaviour. The change has stepped over into the parks."

As a result, parks superintendents are being forced to more strictly enforce the Parks Act.

Parks' staffs could have been tougher last year, despite the 100 charges laid. They have a total of a whopping 274 warnings.

"It's not hard-nosed crime," says Clarence Hawkins, supervisor of the heavily used parks in the Napanee district — which includes Prince Edward. "It's more Prince Edward authorities — loud parties, vandalism, liquor problems... Campers at Outlet-Sandbank can't leave their coolers outside their tents anymore."

Attendant Charged

Officers at the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police report that they have charged a Marysville attendant with public mischief in connection with the report of a holdup at a gas bar in Marysville Jan. 17.

Dale McGee, the gas station attendant, who allegedly reported the theft of $400 from the cash-rate gas bar at the intersection of Highway 49 and Highway 401 has been charged with public mischief.

Police reported, on Jan. 18 that two men were said to have entered the service station around 10 p.m. on Jan. 17 and took $400 from the attendant. The two men were reported to have been wearing dark blue snowmobile suits and balaclavas.

McGee will appear in court Feb. 12.

He said the 15 or so drug cases involved mostly marijuana or hashish, not hard drugs.

But, the traditional friendly park warden won't disappear.

Strict enforcement is not the only answer to the problem, ministry officials think.

New conservation officers are being stationed in Eastern Ontario parks next summer and will undergo training this spring in other tactical approaches.

The enforcement officer "won't be just a cop on the beat," says Mr. Matheson. "They'll be information officers, ambassadors, mediators, recreational advisors, guides ... and people to contact if you need help."

But park users must also become more involved, shoulder more of the policing responsibility for a resource they want to enjoy — but as taxpayers, says John Bell, Eastern Ontario parks supervisor.

People should also be guided to the type of park offering the experience they want.

There's little point in mixing the party recreation seekers with bird watchers and hikers.

Wayne Miller, Bon Echo superintendent, says most of the trouble "comes because people tend to relax a little more and forget now and then to exercise a little caution."

Reunion Run: Fred Back with Owner

Friendly Fred Home Again

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Fred is back.

So is Glen Emerson's sense of easiness.

The return of the dog lover's purebred hound ends three weeks of trepidation — and something of a saga for Fred himself. Stolen from the rural scene to which he's accustomed, wandering at large in the concrete conglomeration of Toronto by happy coincidence arousing the attention of a police force the big metropolis concerned enough to help.

As a result, Fred is back — home at his Camilton kennel. As for Glen, Belleville firefighter who takes pride in the pets he possesses, he's still talking about the "one chance in a million" that caused the reunion.

It all started three weeks ago when Glen went small-game hunting with the three-year-old, black-and-tan, Fred and pals found Barney.

The dogs were let loose to rouse rabbits in bush north of Highway 401 about three miles east of Belleville. It was a weekend — a time and place that draws Torontonians out for a day's shoot.

Both hounds failed to return. But, about two days later a local farmer found Barney headed home and phoned the Emersons.

After Fred failed to follow, Glen began to feel apprehensive. He'd heard a gunshot in the same area where he'd been hunting and tracked back. Sure enough, he says, he found tracks that indicated hunters had taken a dog out to a car parked nearby.

"I was pretty sure then he'd been stolen," says Glen.

He refused to immediately surrender the search, scouting the district in his spare time by car and snowmobile. Nonetheless, when repeated excursions failed "I had to give him up for sure."

Then, last week while on duty at one of the city's fire halls, Glen got an excited phone call from his daughter that sent him scurrying to Toronto.

There he found Fred, disheveled, emaciated in the car of a pensioner.

The elderly Torontonian told Glen he had been walking his own dog in a neighborhood park in central Toronto's northwest when Fred began following him. An animal-lover himself, the man became curious, particularly when he found it still had its identification collar attached. He took it home, meaning to call the owner — but had never heard of Camilton.

He phoned the night staff at Toronto's Radio Station CFRB. They not only returned the call with Camilton's location but the Emerson's telephone number.

Glen gave the pensioner a cash reward and hurried back to — pausing in explanation on the way.

He figures Fred was stolen "with these weekend big-city hunters around 401 that is a problem" — and taken to the metropolis. Fred apparently didn't get much comfortably to his kidnappers so they let him loose in the strange city, inexplicably — and luckily — they didn't remove his identification collar with the Camilton dog tag.

"It's risked to say what happened. Fred's friendly dog — he'd go with anybody."

These days, however, he's going places, it's with his master.

New Course Will Bring Students to Community

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Education in Belleville will move out of the school into the community next September with a credit course call-ed Community Involvement.

A pilot project of the Hastings county board of education, the course will be given in only three or four other places in the province.

Purpose is to give students an awareness of social problems and how to solve them. It involves each student spending about four half-days a week throughout the school year in field work with community service agencies in Belleville.

Enrolment will be limited to 40 students from four city secondary schools. Once a week they will spend a half day in academic studies at IVCI, under the supervision of four teachers. The academic portion of the course will include group discussions, team teaching, assignment of written and oral reports and an independent research study on a community problem for each student.

The community involvement part will be worth four credits out-side the classroom. Since the average student completes seven or eight credit courses each school year, the people enrolled in this course will spend each school day taking three or four other subjects. The course is open only to fourth year students.

Director of education Eric Runacres, who terms the pilot project "exciting," says it combines several new educational trends in one package.

First is community involvement, bringing in helping agencies to share in the learning process. Second is getting kids out of schools, into the "real world" they think they are being denied in the classroom.

Third is the co-operation of the city's four high schools in combining forces to offer the course. Finally, says Mr. Runacres, this is the first time a non-teacher — David Smith, coordinator of community school programs — has headed up a purely academic program.

Social agencies in the city have indicated tentative agreement to assist with the course. First commitments will be sought after students are enrolled.

In addition to Mr. Smith, the following teachers will be involved in the program: Mrs. Jokie Carty, Centennial; Mrs. Margaret Charles, IVCI; Mrs. Diane Holt, Quinte and Tony Lepore, Moira.

The community involvement course was developed by Ontario Institute for Studies in Education in Toronto and offered on an experimental basis for the first time last year in Peterborough.

Although the course will appeal to students intending to take post-secondary training in social service, Mr. Smith says it is designed to give all students an awareness of community problems and of the means of solving them.

"I would like to see students who intend to go into unrelated fields take this course, so that when they are working on the job they will have an awareness of the society around them and how to help it," says Mr. Smith.

Money, Money, Money!

Piles of money. That's exactly what area chairman Ruth Thomlinson and Belleville chairman Vera Morphy presented to Toronto-Dominion Bank teller Debbie Fetter this morning. For the past week and a half, the two women have been canvassing city residents for funds to aid the Rehabilitation Foundation for the Disabled. About $6,000 has been collected through the Ability Fund (March of Dimes) campaign so far, but Mrs. Morphy expects another $2,300 to come in and boost the total above the $7,800 donated last year. All money goes to help handicapped adults.

Liquor Buyer Fined, Jailed

A Deseronto man, convicted on three charges of supplying liquor to persons under the age of 18, was yesterday fined $200 and sentenced to two months in prison when he appeared before Judge J. J. Clendenning in provincial court.

Court was told yesterday that David Linday Claus, 22, of Deseronto purchased two bottles of wine for a group of three young boys in Deseronto Oct. 29.

The boys, aged 12, 13 and 14, were found outside a Deseronto hotel and had asked him to buy them some wine at a liquor store.

Claus bought the wine and then joined the youngsters in a park where all four of them sat and drank it before returning home intoxicated and ill.

In passing sentence, Judge Clendenning noted that Claus had been convicted two months earlier on five similar charges. At that time Claus had been sentenced to one month in jail.

Alteration of Bylaw Sought by Committee

A memorandum, jointly prepared by city engineer Wilbur Purcell and building inspector Grant Silckle, has prompted the subdivisers liaison committee to bring down a recommendation to alter an existing building bylaw governing grants of occupancy permits to developers of residential properties still under construction.

As it now stands, the bylaw allows occupancy that the building be residential or that it contain any specific number of dwelling units. No fee structure is specified.

"The October 1973 bylaw was passed by council directly in response to complaints from residents of the new 14-storey apartment building on Palmer Rd. At the time, the highrise was occupied by 27 tenants who were leery of safety hazards exemplified by an inoperative elevator, an unconnected fire alarm system and inadequate electrical outlet boxes. Tradesman were still working from the eighth storey upwards.

The special committee to which the motion was made expects to bring the recommendation before council in February. Council will also be asked to approve policy that developers and contractors builders will have to meet before permits can be issued. However, the guidelines will not be included in the bylaw.

The committee will recommend that any retrofitting of the existing bylaw, passed by council in October 1972, be only applicable to buildings of three or more dwelling units. Single family homes and duplexes would be exempt.

The procedure for inspections carried out prior to a building inspector's issuance of either an occupancy permit or a certificate of compliance will also be recommended for inclusion.

The ground rules builders will be required to meet, were accepted by the committee with the intention of safeguarding moving into incomplete residences.

The report of policy by the two officials roughly corresponded to proposed provincial regulations as outlined in a draft of the Ontario Building Code. The code, broadly equivalent to the national code, is expected completed parts of the building and the installation of various safety features such as emergency lighting, handrails and fire exit signs.

Committee members felt the floor above the last occupied storey of a highrise should be nearly complete as the occupied floor. This would reduce the danger to tenants from a possible fire above their apartments.

Paper Pickups

The waste paper pickup schedule for different parts of the city remains the same each month but some people may wish to forget when their turn comes around.

At least that has been the experiencil of Alderman Jean Smith, who last fall was responsible for rearranging the city's waste paper drive.

Alderman Smith also reminds that the paper pickups are on the first four Tuesdays of the month — one pickup for each month — one pickup for four different section of the city.

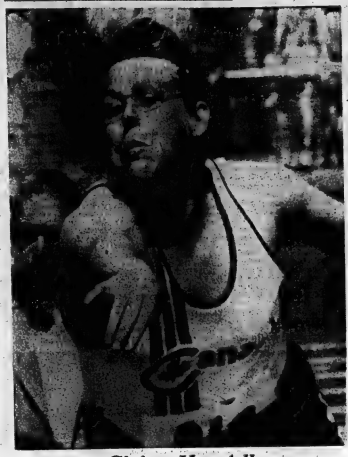
On the first Thursday of the month the pickup is all the city north of the CN tracks.

On the second Thursday the pickup is south of the CN tracks and east of the Moira River. On the third Thursday of the month the paper pickup is south of the CN tracks and east of Herchimer Ave., with the final Thursday pickup of each month being south of the tracks east of the river and including Herchimer Ave.

Who Built Them?

Response to an article appearing in yesterday's copy of The Intelligencer has revealed a certain amount of confusion as to who was directly responsible for building the homes along Harvest Cres. in Belleville which are presently experiencing drainage problems.

The Intelligencer this morning and identified himself as the manager of Stirling Lumber Co. and said that his company, a subsidiary of the Peterborough Lumber Co., was not responsible for building the Harvest Cres. homes as was stated in yesterday's article.



Upon checking with the manager of Central Mortgage and Housing, J.B. Raine, of Kingston, The Intelligencer discovered that Home Owner-ship Made Easy application forms for the Harvest Cres. subdivision listed Stirling Lumber Co. (Aladdin Homes Division) as the builder of the homes.

Stirling Lumber Co. (Aladdin Home Division) is also a subsidiary of the Peterborough Lumber Co.

When The Intelligencer called the president of the Peterborough Lumber Co., Jack Haldimand, in Peterborough, Mr. Haldimand said that the Stirling Lumber Co. was the builder of the homes.

Andy Hallam, the spokesman for the Harvest Cres. residents said that the homeowners have been in touch with a Mr. Davis of Stirling Lumber Co. in trying to seek a solution to their drainage problems.

Approval Possible Tonight

CHICAGO (CP) — The National Hockey League's board of governors completed two days of deliberations Tuesday night without ratifying a proposed plan that would bring a peace settlement with the rival World Hockey Association.

However, Clarence Campbell, NHL president, said completion of a vote that would have ratified the agreement will be continued today by means of telephone and telegraph polls. He said he should have the results tonight.

The WHA already has agreed to settle its outstanding $30 million litigation against the NHL if the latter league would agree to payment of the $1.5-million legal fees incurred by the WHA in its pursuit of a settlement.

Judge A. Leon Higginbotham of Philadelphia had given the two sides until Thursday to reach an out-of-court settlement. Otherwise he has set trial date in the case for March 18.

Approval of the agreement between the two leagues requires unanimous consent of all 16 current NHL clubs, and Campbell said it was not possible to obtain this in Tuesday's day-long meetings. He said some substantial modifications to the original draft of the agreement had been proposed.

Meanwhile, another domestician was added Tuesday afternoon when Alan Eagleson of Toronto, executive-director of the National Hockey League Players' Association, said the association's lawyer Ira Millstein of New York, had sent a letter to Judge Higginbotham outlining the association's stand on the current negotiations.

The letter from the players' association to Judge Higginbotham asked that before he approves any agreement between the two leagues, the NHLPA be advised of the terms of such an agreement and that the judge withhold final approval for 30 days until the association is given an opportunity to present its side of the story.

Eagleson saidthe players reject the proposal that the NHL-WHA engage in 15 inter-league pre-season contests. Also that while the WHA accepted the arbitration decision by the NHL to replace the reserve clause in standard player contracts with one-year option clause, the players oppose such a move.

Ali to Meet Foreman Next

NEW YORK (AP) — Muhammad Ali's victory over Joe Frazier, which Ali said saved boxing's life, was worth $2.6 million to Ali. His next confrontation is likely to be worth $5 million.

That is what promoter Bob Arum said Ali and world heavyweight champion George Foreman each could earn for fighting another.

Arum, president of Top Rank Inc., said at a Tuesday news conference, that a match with Foreman is unanimous decision over Frazier, he could not be specific about the Ali-Foreman match.

"There'll be a fight when George Foreman tells us he wants to fight," said Arum.

Cranson Gets Challenge

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — Toller Cranston of Toronto has set the Canadian senior men's figure-skating championship three times, but his long-time rival Ron Shaver of Cambridge, Ont., is inching towards the title.

The Cranston-Shaver duel is expected to be one of the highlights of the 63rd national championships beginning here today.

More than 160 skaters will compete in the four-day event that will decide who will go to the world championships in Munich, West Germany, March 5-10.

The final is broken down into four events — women's, men's, pairs and dance. Each event is divided into three categories — senior, junior and novice.

Junior and senior men's and women's events will be judged on three programs. The compulsory figures, which will account for 40 per cent of the final mark; the compulsory-free skate, 20 per cent of the total mark; and the free skate, the highlight of the championship 40 per cent.

Shaver, 22, finished second to Cranston last year in Vancouver and narrowly missed defeating Cranston at Skate Canada last fall in Calgary.

Shaver won both the free-skate segment and the compulsory-free skate event at Canada's first international skating competition.

Cranston, 24, won the over-all title with his strong placing in the figure segment of the three-part event.

But the Toronto Skater, a contender for the world title, has been criticized for deficiencies in figures.

With world champion Karen Magnussen having turned professional, the senior women's event is expected to be a close four-way battle.

Lynn Nightingale of Ottawa is the favorite because of her strong placing in national and international events during the past year.

The 17-year-old brunette finished first in both Skate Canada and the international Prague Skate.

Although a superb free skater, she is considered weak in the figure skating segment. She was seventh in the figure segment at Skate Canada but battled back to win the over-all title by turning in a brilliant acrobatic free-skate performance.

Veteran skaters Barbara Terpenning of North Vancouver, Julie Wilcock of London, Ont., and Daria Prychun of Toronto will are considered top-rated senior women skaters.

This year's final follows a new Canadian Figure Skating Association (CFSA) format involving three divisional competitions that trimmed t'e number of competitors in the final by about 25 per cent.

In other senior events, the husband-and-wife team of Louise and Barry Soper are favorites to win their fourth dance title in as many years.

The team is expected to receive a strong challenge from Barbara Beegowski of Toronto and David Porter of Port Perry, Ont., who finished second to the Sopers in the last two finals.

Opening events will centre around the novice dance and novice pairs competition. These events are expected to be completed on opening day.

The only senior event to start Wednesday is the first segment of the senior dance competition. All other senior events start Thursday.

It's Canada's Best Day As Wrestlers Produce

CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z. (CP) — Five gold medals from a vastly improved wrestling team and a victory by Wendy Cook of Vancouver in the women's 100-metre backstroke finally highlighted Canada's biggest one-day performance of the Commonwealth Games.

Along with the six golds, the Canadians took four silver and five bronze medals, regaining some of the ground they lost Tuesday when the Australians built up a big margin, mostly in track and field.

The Aussies retained the over-all lead with three victories in swimming events and one in weightlifting, giving them a total of 19 gold medals to the Canadians' 17.

India won its first four Games events, all in wrestling, and David Wilkie brought gold to Scotland for the first time with a double victory in the men's 200-metre Individual medley and 200-metre backstroke.

New Zealand also won two events, the fullback rifle and middleweight wrestling, and a light heavyweight weightlifter brought England its only gold of the day.

Canada swept all seven weight divisions in wrestling at the Inaugural games in Hong dropped to three in 1934 and won a total of only five in the next six competitions as the sport was gradually taken over by grappling from India and Pakistan.

The seeds of the resurgence were sown at Edinburgh in 1970 when Canadians picked up nine wrestling medals: one gold, five silver and three bronze.

That was actually one more than the Christchurch total. But this time there were only three lesser medals in the Canadian haul: one silver and two bronze.

The winners ranged from light flyweight Mitch Kawasaki of Hamilton to super-heavyweight Bill Benko of Calgary.

The other two heavyweight gold Claude Pilon of Ottawa, lightheavyweight Terry Paice of Thunder Bay and featherweight Egon Beiler of Kitchener, Ont.

AUSSIES WIN THREE

Miss Cook and Donna-Marie Gurr, the Vancouver team-mate, took the two top places in the women's backstroke but it was Australia's night in the pool.

The Aussies won all the medals in the men's 400-metre freestyle, had a 1-2 finish in the women's 200 freestyle and triumphed in the 800 freestyle relay.

Gail Amundrud of Ottawa added a bronze medal in the 200-freestyle to her individual silver in the 100 and a share of the gold in the 400 freestyle relay as Sonia Gray completed a freestyle sweep double, followed home by her Aussie team-mate, Jennie Turrall.

Seven of the eight finalists broke the Games record of two minutes, 39 seconds set four years ago by Karen Moras of Australia, including Wendy Quirk of Pointe Claire, Que., fourth in 2:07.06, and Brenda Holmes of Edmonton, sixth in 2:08.87.

The times of the medallists were 2:04.27 for Miss Gray, 2:05.09 for Miss Turrall and Miss Quirk who was her early leader but Miss Gray took over after about 60 metres and Miss Turrall had also passed her by the half-way mark. Miss Turrall pu on a tremendous burst of speed in the last 30 metres to pass boh Canadian girls.

"I didn' nee her coming at all," said Miss Amundrud, was looking mainly at Wendy."

Gary MacDonald of Mission, B.C., who took the bronze medal in the individual medley, was another Canadian who took an early lead but was unable to hold it.

He was in front after the butterfly leg but when Wilkie out command, winning comfortably in 2:10.11, another Games record. Brian Brinkley of England Jon caught MacDonald to take the silver medal in 2:12.72, while the Canadian was timed in 2:12.96.

The Games mark of 2:13.71 set by George Smith of Edmonton in 1970, already had been broken in the heats by MacDonald, the fastest qualifier in 2:12.91.

It was a similar story in the relay, in which Canada won another bronze.

Jim Mackenzie of Vancouver, coached ahead of John Kulasalu, the Saskatoon Australian, who had led his country's event of the 400 freestyle medals earlier in the day. But MacDonald was no match for Robert-Nay of Australia and the Canadians were three lengths behind at the halfway mark.

Stephen Badger, the 200 freestyle gold medallist, widened the lead over Jim Bowlin of Prince George, B.C., in he third leg and Mike Wenden, he 1972 freestyle champion, held it easily while the English anchor man edged Bruce oberson of Vancouver.

The winners broke Australia's 1970 Games mark of 7:90.8 with a clocking of 7:30.11. England was timed in 7:32.90 and Canada in 7:53.38.

Bill Mahony of New Westminster, B.C., the defending champion, improved on the Games record in the 200 breaststroke and finished fourth in his game.

Wilkie won in 2:24.42, closely followed by David Latch of England in 2:24.75. Another Englishman, Paul Naitby, took the bronze in 2:27.36, just ahead of Mahony whose time was 2:27.62.

The old mark, set in 1966 by Ian O'Brien of Australia, was 2:28.0.

Fowlie, the only Canadian finalist in the 400 freestyle, was seventh behind Kulasahi, Badger, Cooper and Badger. All three Aussies broke the Games mark of 4:06.48 set by Australian Graham While in 1970. The winning time was 4:01.44.

Miss Cook, who had won her heat in near-world record time, in 1:05.19, managed only 1:06.37 in the final, barely edging Miss Gurr whose time was 1:06.55. Becky Smith of Edmonton, 16-year-old sister of the 1970 men's individual medley champion, was sixth in 1:08.03.

There was another bronze medal for Canada in boxing as featherweight Dale Anderson lost his semi-final on a split decision, bitterly disputed by Canadian team official.

Light-heavyweight Tony Ford of England and middle-heavyweight Nicole Ciancio of Australia were the weightlifting winners. Claude April of Montreal was sixth in the middle-heavyweight class.

Maurice Gordon of New Zealand broke the string of Canadian successes in shooting by capturing the fullbore rifle competition.

Dave Fox Leads Meads

The rich get richer and the poor get poorer — or so it seems in the Eau Hosue Hockey League. The top teams keep winnings and they keep beating the bottom teams to increase their point totals.

Last night was no exception. Mead Johnson took a 7-3 win from ninth place Stewart Warner to move back into two more than idle Golden Mile and the Doctors, who recorded a 10-1 win over last place Chuckwagon Foods.

Fourth place Fraser and O'Neil Real Estate strengthened their grip on that spot, increasing their lead to three points over the Intelligencer. 16-13, with a 12-3 shellacking of eighth place Constellation.

Mead's got a three goal performance from Dave Fox in their win over Stewart Warner, with Mike Goegan adding a pair. Other markers went to Ron Fuller and Ralph Brant, with Brant, Jack Lucas, and Keith Park each adding two helpers.

Charlie Nesterovski had a goal and one assist for Stewart Warner in defeat, with Dominic Lemini and Mike King adding the others.

Pete Keogh led the Doctors to their win, firing three goals and adding two assists. Hyrale Bryant also had the hat-trick for the winners, adding one assist. Bill Minaker had seven assists in the effort, while Ken Bertrand had two goals and one helper. Other markers went to Wayne Craig, Pete Delanty and Gary Goyer.

Chester Thompson was the only Chuckwagon marksman to break Doctors' goaltender Keith Bertrand's bid for a shutout.

Wayne McGeachy had three goals and three assists in pacing Fraser and O'Neil to their win. Bruce Pascoe had three goals and one assist, while Wayne Andrews and Wayne Harrison each added two goals. Singles went to Larry Pascoe and Randy Pascoe.

Constellation markers went to Ron Mitchell, Ken Vos, and Bob O'Hara.

New Mini Car Combats Crisis

A new all-Canadian mini car combining safety and low fuel consumption is one of many answers to the energy crisis that will be featured at Auto '74 in the new Toronto International Centre of Commerce.

The 200-member Toronto Automobile Dealers Association is sponsoring the show, the first major international car exhibition since World War II in Canada's automobile capital. Location is Airport Road (Dixon Road) one mile northwest of Toronto International Airport.

Provisionally named Alpha 2000, the Canadian designed and engineered automobile uses either a small rotary or snowmobile engine at the customer's option. The 3-h horsepower engine is rear-mounted and transmission is fully automatic. Capable of speeds up to 70 mph, Alpha 2000 gets about 60 miles to the gallon. It holds two people comfortably and has ample luggage space, making it ideal for city driving or short trips. It is expected to be in production by June of this year.

Unusual construction guarantees optimum protection for the occupants. The entire body is moulded from a single block of high impact polyurethane and is extremely light and shock resistant. Walls of the passenger compartment are a foot thick in some places.

Other innovative features at the show include latest experimental models, prototypes and customized luxury cars from North America's Big Four and more than 4 dozen foreign importers. Many exhibitors such as American Motors, Chrysler, Ford and General Motors will also show their complete model line.

In addition there will be accessory displays, entertainment and public service exhibits.

Adding to the excitement will be the finish of the Canadian Winter Rally, taking place at the show shortly after 1 p.m., Sunday February 10.

Brodeur Earns Praise From the Old Master

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Richard Brodeur, one of three young men who toil as goalies with Quebec Nordiques, received rare praise from his coach Tuesday night.

"Now he really is a professional," the coach said of Brodeur after the second-year goalie blanked Los Angeles Sharks 5-0 in one of two World Hockey Association games scheduled.

What might make the compliment a little special is that the Nordiques are coached by Jacques Plante, considered by many hockey experts as the best ever to practice the craft of stopping pucks.

In the other game, New Jersey Knights got four first-period goals en route to a 6-1 win over Toronto Toros.

Brodeur started the contest suspiciously, stopping Marc Tardif, the Sharks top scorer, on a breakaway in the first minute.

Tardif burst in on the goalie's right side but was stymied when Brodeur held his ground. Brodeur, 21, went on to make 28 saves for his first pro shutout.

Shortly after the stop on Tardif, Guy Dufour scored the first of his two goals to give Quebec a 1-0 lead at 1:31.

Andre Gaudette added another just more than two minutes later and Jean-Claude Tremblay put the game out of reach with a pair of goals, his sixth and seventh of the season, in the middle frame.

Swindler Says Ford Involved

NEW YORK (AP) — Confessed swindler Joseph Fernando said Tuesday at the trial of former Queens District Attorney Thomas J. Mackell that Whitey Ford was an investor in the fraudulent fast-buck operation he ran.

Fernando did not further identify Ford, a former baseball great, but special state prosecutor Maurice Nadjari told reporters during a recess that "it was who you think it is."

Ford, a former pitcher and now a coach with New York Yankees of the American League, was recently admitted to baseball's Hall of Fame.

Mackell, 59, his son-in-law James D. Robertson, 39, and Frank R. De Paola, 66, a former county detective, are accused of hindering the prosecution of Fernandez because some of the district attorney's staff had invested in the operation.

Unger MVP as West Tops East

CHICAGO (CP) — Unless the current energy crisis catches up with him, Garry Unger won't be able to use the old excuse that his cab broke down if he is late for an appointment.

Already the owner of three cars, six motorcycles, a dune buggy and two tractors, Unger now has a fourth automobile, his reward for being chosen most valuable player in the National Hockey League's 27th annual all-star game Tuesday night.

Unger, 28, a centre with St. Louis Blues, was presented with the car after the West Division's 6-4 victory over the East as a result of a poll conducted by the Professional Hockey Writers' Association.

The Edmonton native scored what proved to be the winning goal during the third period while his club was short-handed and accomplished the feat while playing at a new position—left wing.

Earlier in the period, he set up a goal by centre Stan Mikita of Chicago Black Hawks. Billy Reay of Chicago, coach of the West Division team, said so many centres are having a good year in his division that he decided to pick centres to fill out his team and play them on wings.

"I knew Unger would have no trouble as a winger," Reay said.

But Unger said playing left wing for the first time presented problems early in the game.

"I had to concentrate more but, now that it's over, I'm just thrilled I got a chance to play in the game, let alone be chosen MVP."

Unger's goal was his first in three all-star appearances. He was on the losing side in the other two games.

The West, down 2-0 after first period goals by left-winger Frank Mahovlich and right-winger Yvan Cournoyer of Montreal Canadiens, picked up unanswered goals from forwards Bob Berry of Los Angeles Kings, Al McDonough of Atlanta Flames and Lowell MacDonald of Pittsburgh Penguins in the second period.

Mikita, centre Pit Martin of Chicago and Unger, scored for the winners in the final period.

MacDonald got the only power-play goal, at 19:37 of the second period. The Pittsburgh left-winger scored with centre Red Berenson of Detroit Red Wings serving a penalty for tripping defenceman Dave Burrows of Pittsburgh.

In addition to Mahovlich with his eighth all-star goal and Cournoyer with his second, rookie defenceman Denis Potvin of New York Islanders and right winger Mickey Redmond of Detroit scored for the losers.

The victory earned each West Division player $500 while the East Division players under coach Scotty Bowman of the Canadiens received $250 each.

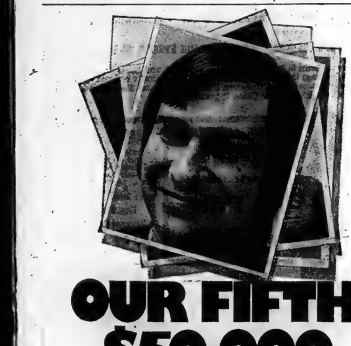
The West now has two wins, three losses and one tie in six starts against the East.

"It was a great game," Reay said of the contest that set a record for goals scored in all-Star competition. "Everybody played well."

"Everybody feels it was a great game," Bowman said of the wide-open contest. "The difference was in the goaltending."

An enthusiastic sellout crowd, announced at 17,095, apparently agreed with the coaches' assessments of the contest and applauded vigorously throughout.

GARRY UNGER
BATTRICK SIGNS



PITTSBURGH (Reuter) — Gerald Battrick of Great Britain has signed a contract with Pittsburgh Triangles of the World Team Tennis (WTT) league, the club's president, Chuck Reichbhum said Tuesday. The Triangles previously had signed Australians Ken Rosewall, as player-coach, and Yvonne Goolagong.

Dave Gilmour Leads Clippers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

For Kingston, Ont., native Dave Gilmour Tuesday night will likely one he'll add to his scrapbook of memories.

Gilmour, a left-winger converted to defence, scored three goals to spark Baltimore Clippers to a 6-3 victory over Rochester Americans in an American Hockey League game.

In the only other match of the night, Richmond Robins, last place team in the South Division, upset Boston Braves, who occupy fifth slot in the North, 7-5.

Gilmour played for Peterborough Petes, Hamilton Red Wings and London Knights in the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series before turning professional with Rochester Americans. After one season he returned to amateur ward, with Kingston Aces of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A circuit.

Gilmour then turned pro again and had eight goals and nine assists with Salt Lake Golden Eagles of the Western Hockey League last season. His most productive year was in 1968-69, when he scored 18 goals and earned 27 assists with the Hamilton junior team.

His contribution to Baltimore's victory Tuesday night was significant because it helped the Clippers move into a second place tie with Cincinnati Swords, AHL Calder Cup defending champions. It also blocked the Americans from taking over second-place from Providence Reds in the North.

Howie Menard, with his 27th goal of the season, Barry Salvarans and Jerry Temp each added a goal for Baltimore.

Richmond 7 at Boston 3

Knicks Knock Boston Celtics

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

New York Knicks already are starting to think about the National Basketball Association playoffs that are two months away.

It showed Tuesday night when they surprised Boston Celtics 104-93.

"Psychologically they have to start thinking about us," said Walt Frazier who scored a game-high 23 points for the Knicks. "They're not worried yet, but they're thinking."

The Celtics lead the Knicks by five games in the NBA Atlantic Division and beat them easily in three earlier meetings this year.

Last year the Celtics ran away from the Knicks in the regular season, then were upset in the playoffs by a New York team that went on to win the NBA title.

In Tuesday's other NBA games, Golden State Warriors trimmed Buffalo Braves 123-121, Cleveland Cavaliers beat Atlanta Hawks 126-111, Seattle Supersonics downed Houston Rockets 115-107 and Milwaukee Bucks crushed Portland Trail Blazers 126-106.

No games were played in the American Basketball Association.

Cavaliers 111 Hawks 111

Bobby Smith scored 27 points for the Cavaliers, who were behind the entire first half. Pete Maravich had 33 points and Lou Hudson 32.

Sonics 115 Rockets 107

Spencer Haywood scored 22 points for Seattle while Calvin Murphy led the Rockets with 27 points.

Warriors 123 Braves 121

Golden State's Nate Thurmond scored 26 points, pulled down 14 rebounds and blocked five shots.

Bucks 126 Trail Blazers 106

Kareem Alden scored the last six points of a 10-point Milwaukee spurt that gave the Bucks a 56-44 lead at halftime that never was challenged.

TRADED TO PATRIOTS

NEW YORK (AP) — Wide receiver Dick Gordon was traded Tuesday by Green Bay Packers to New England Patriots in exchange for tight end John Mc-ister. The transaction was announced at the end of the first round of the National Football League college player draft.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League Eastern Ontario Club

QUESTION: What date is the Mardi Gras in New Orleans this year, and what are the main events? Also, could you give me the mileage from Belleville, a fast route down and interesting things to see in New Orleans during my stay.

ANSWER: The Mardi Gras is celebrated this year February 16-26. This is a period of merry-making, dancing, parades, masked costume balls and feasts.

New Orleans is an exciting, romantic city, rich in French and Spanish heritage and decor. The city of the Creoles is a five mile wide strip squeezed between the Mississippi and Lake Pontchartrain. This is the setting for Mardi Gras, a ten-day spree of wild, worldly living, before the austerity of Lent. It is called "the greatest free show on earth". There is a succession of lavish parades with bands playing, thousands of Louisianans and visitors in masks and costumes, all celbrating the joyous festival that dates back to the old Roman times.

For sight-seeing, the heart of New Orleans is the French Quarter. Bourbon Street, famed for its night life, is filled with historic buildings of the early 1800's. The French Market, on Decatur Street, has its profusion of fish, vegetables and fruit from the tropics as well as local farm products. Jackson Square is the hub of the old city. Canal Street has its antiques and contains many miles of historical interest. And, for a feeling of today, relax at the Top of the Mart, a 407-foot trade building at the foot of Canal Street. Located at the top of the International Trade Mart, it gives you a panoramic view of the city and river, stories below.

The Basilica of St. Louis of France in Jackson Square, is one of the oldest and most photographed churches in the country. It was built in 1794 by Don Andrea Almonester de Roxas, who spent a substantial part of his fortune rebuilding New Orleans after the second great fire. Nearby is the Cabildo where the Louisiana Purchase was signed deeding a vast French territory to the United States. A few steps away stands the Presbytere, a museum where you can gaze on Napoleon's death mask if you are so inclined. His doctor made the mask just minutes after the great dictator died, and brought it to New Orleans when he later moved there.

Subtropical best describes New Orleans. Both tempered and moistened by the Gulf winds, the city has an average high of just over 90 in June, July and August, and an average low of 45 in December, January and February. Freezing temperatures are rare and snow even rarer.

Humidity averages 63 percent for the year. Since its annual rise corresponds with that in the temperature, late summer can be quite sticky. The average rainfall is about 54 inches.

In summer, women wear light-weight, easy-care dresses or separates; a sweater may augment comfort in some strongly air-conditioned buildings. For men, light - weight suits or slacks and jacket ensembles are in order. At any season, a raincoat and umbrella are necessary, although summer heat often renders a raincoat less comfortable than the rain.

New Orleans is fairly conservative. In most hotel lounges after 5 p.m. and especially in many fine restaurants, the visitor is out of place if coatless and tieless.

Needless to say, it is prudent to keep a good street map on hand and to use it whenever uncertain, because squeezed ex New Orleans is on a handle wide strip between the Mississippi River and Lake Pontchartrain, its street pattern is determined more by there natural bounds than by the compass. "North-south" streets usually are perpendicular to the lakeshore or riverbank, while "east-west" routes are more or less parallel to them. "Uptown means toward the river; "downtown (recent when used in reference to the central business district) means downstream and generally towards the lake.

Rush hours, 7 to 9 a.m. and 4:30 to 6 p.m., are to be avoided. Congestion is greatest on the bridges, I-10 and the narrow congested streets of Vieux Carre.

A fast route down is to take 401 highway to Detroit, Mich., Interstate 75 to Walton, Kentucky, Interstate 71 to Louisville, Ky., Interstate 65 to Birmingham, Ala., Interstate 59 and 10 to New Orleans. Mileage from Belleville is 1,430 miles.

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — A flight instructor was seriously injured when his pedal-driven, homemade airplane crashed on its maiden flight at a small airport near Ghent. The light-weight plastic and aluminum craft flew for about 30 yards at an altitude of 32 feet and then somersaulted and crashed on a concrete runway.

BEAVER No. 16 in a series

handyman tip

Prepare to panel:

Here's the 2nd. in-depth tip on panelling. Read them all.

1. Remove all old mouldings.
2. Inspect the wall surfaces: If your walls are really level and flat (test this with a plumb line) it is possible for you to apply your new panelling directly to the existing wall surfaces. This operation can be done by either using a panel adhesive, or by nailing (use coloured nails to match panel). If the walls have minor rough spots, simply lightly sand such areas to a smooth finish.
2. If your walls appear to be quite uneven, you will have to apply wood strapping. Strapping is strips of lumber nailed across the wall to ensure an even surface for adhesion of the panelling. NO. 3 in this series will continue on with this process. Remember, see BEAVER for all you panelling needs!

Sometimes I think I cannot bear,
To live without you.
In His wisdom God has planned,
The journey we must go,
—Remembered always by wife Beulah.

Sudbury Inquest May Last 6 Weeks

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — After hearing more than 350,000 words of evidence in 17 days, a coroner's jury still has a long way to go today toward clearing up the question and mystery around a fatal crash in two rail gates at Sudbury General Hospital last year.

The 12-member jury, investigating 23 deaths in a new hospital wing has been given several glimpses at possible solutions to the mystery.

More may be offered as Crown attorney John Takach and a battalion of private lawyers move through the testimony of more than 100 witnesses of whom only 27 have been heard so far.

Takach said the same number are still to testify in just the first of 23 individual inquiries. This is the case of six-year-old Catherine Dominic who died last Sept. 7 in the new wing after being administered nitrous oxide from an oxygen wall outlet.

After the first case has been concluded with general evidence applicable to all the deaths entered, the jury is expected to step up. But officials are now thinking in terms of six weeks of hearings, double the original estimate, which would make it perhaps the longest inquest in Ontario history.

One of the most detailed examinations of the inquest ended late Tuesday with the completion of testimony by Dr. Edmund B. Wong, a Toronto mechanical engineer who began testifying Monday. He designed the $1.6-million gas system installed by Comstock International Ltd., the mechanical sub-contractor.

Dr. Wong, examined for nine lawyers, he said he had established the location of the piping in a section of the hospital from blueprints and found the nitrous oxide to be cut off from some sections of the new wing, including the room where the Dominic girl died.

Ice Causes Accidents

TWEED (Special) — Provincial police blamed ice for seven highways Monday for three accidents in the Tweed detachment area but there were no personal injuries.

A car attempting to pass a tractor-trailer on Highway 37 a mile north of Roslin hit ice, skidded and struck the unit. An OK Experts transport from Belleville, attempting to the car, driven by John Johnston, Ottawa, was $200 and $100 to the transport driven by Joseph Price, Scarborough.

The accident later at 8:50 p.m. on Highway 37, about a half-mile south of Actinolite, the car driver driven by Kenneth Cassobo of Tweed hit an ice patch, skidded and forced against guideposts. Damage to his car was $300.

Another skid on Highway 62, six miles north of Madoc, resulted in the car driven by Ely Boccaccio of Eldorado going into the ditch and taking out five guideposts. Damage to the vehicle was $400.

Broke Probation, Sentenced to Jail

A Belleville youth, convicted in provincial court of willingly breaching a probation order, was sentenced to 10 days in jail when he appeared before Judge J. D. Clendenning yesterday.

Patrick Gerald Cunningham, 17, pleaded guilty to charge of failing to maintain an 11 p.m. curfew he had been laid down for him to a probation order last July 11.

Cunningham had been stopped by police around 2 a.m. on Nov. 9 while walking along MacDonald Gardens near his home.

In passing sentence Judge Clendenning noted provincial court judges had not been able to grant conditional and suspended sentences since 1972. Since that time, however, the practice of granting conditional discharges had been resumed and Cunningham's appeal lawyer had decided to ignore the terms of their probation and apply for one.

Cunningham had been arrested several times before charge on July 19.

Judge Clendenning said that suspended sentences for vandalism to jail to deter him and anyone else who may take the terms of their probation orders lightly.

Lastman Says Seven Million Profit Made by Developers

TORONTO (CP) — North York Mayor Mel Lastman says two developers have already made a $7-million profit after trading vacant land between themselves and artificially inflating the price of houses later built on the land.

One of the men he named, a former councillor in Scarborough, denied any impropriety and said Mr. Lastman was simply out for publicity.

In a speech prepared for delivery today to the Empire Club of Toronto, Mr. Lastman said W. R. Sullivan Construction Ltd. and Kashel Development Ltd., which had overlapping directors at the time of some of the sales, did not do anything illegal "but they sure as hell are pumping up the price of homes."

Mr. Lastman said Sullivan Construction acquired about 117 acres of farmland in April, 1967, for about $23,033 an acre. By July, 1970, it sold 84 acres of the still undeveloped land to Kashel Developments for about $1,000 an acre.

In an interview, the mayor said Peter Ozik a member of Parliament for Toronto-York East from 1962 to 1968 and Conservative were directors of both companies in 1970.

By the end of 1972, Mr. Lastman said, Kashel resold all the acreage 13 held by the borough of North York as bond for land servicing to Sullivan for about $28,033 a lot.

Mr. Lastman said: "The public has to pay $20,000 for a bull lot—Yet Sullivan and Kashel paid no more than $8,000, fully serviced, for one of those lots."

In an interview Tuesday, Mr. Ozik said the mayor was simply out to get publicity by making unfounded accusations about Sullivan Construction, for whose offices Mr Ozik works.

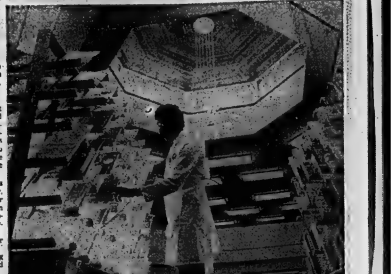
Mr. Ozik said he never even attended a director's meeting of Kashel "I just attended one meeting in my life and that was the formation of the company. I don't even know the board appointments."

He said the two companies did not make excessive profits in the land sales. This was proved, he said, by land engineering services, carrying charges and other expenses, he said.

He said he saw nothing wrong with the fact that he and Mr. Prusac were on both boards of directors at the time of the sales.

"They were completely separate companies also brought up. Some merchants thought the $2,500 penalty wasn't that

He said he had been told by a Comstock employee the valves were fitted less than one system Aug.



This conflicted with a previous testimony to the effect that supply lines from central gas tanks were installed in reverse from their relative positions on the patient's forehead at one stage and later joined to pipes laid according to the plans, thereby reversing the gases.

Still another possibility was opened Tuesday when Mr. Wong was discussing an error in the designations of oxygen and nitrous oxide lines on another section of hospital drawings for the gas system.

The engineer called the error "not particularly significant, but later said under questioning that "an installer" had claimed he "followed the mistake."

The so-called "misnomer" in the drawings had been discussed several times previously, generally being shrugged off as not likely to lead a workman astray, and this was the first time the inquest heard a suggestion that it might have led to an installing error.

Mr. Wong was not questioned further on the point before he left the stand but two more witnesses from the firm of consulting engineers were on call to testify today on the construction of other construction specialists involved in the hospital job.

Merchants Want Hours Legislation Clarified

The question of store closing hours was examined Tuesday morning by city retail merchants.

Merchants representing the Quinte Mall, downtown and the Belleville Plaza, agreed basically with a brief presented to the cabinet committee on justice of the government of Ontario concerning the need for legislation establishing uniform retail store hours in Ontario.

The brief urges that the following store hours be set: Monday to Wednesday, stores may remain open between 7:30 a.m. and 6:00. Thursday and Friday, stores may be open between 7:30 a.m. and 9:30 p.m. and on Saturday stores may be open between 7:30 a.m. and 5 p.m.

From December 1 to 24 (except Sundays) stores may open from 7:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m.

On Sundays all stores to be closed except these: stores selling newspapers and periodicals, tobacco and tobacco products, restaurants, pharmaceutical, hygiene and sanitary supplies, gasoline and motor products of art and antiques, tourist souvenirs and films, plants and growing stock and bread and milk.

It is these exemptions that the merchants would like clearly defined. They agree that a store selling bread and milk should be allowed to stay open beyond normal hours if that is all it sells. In some cases stores filling into this exemption category sell a variety of other goods which cannot be clearly defined.

The meeting at the Four Seasons Hotel, had as chairman, George Thompson, president of the Chamber of Commerce. Mayor Robin Jeffrey was present to represent the city.

The question of fines being sufficient enough to deter breaking present store closing hours legislation was also brought up. Some merchants thought the $2,500 penalty wasn't that much of a deterrent to staying open during closing hours.

It was also decided at the meeting that a merger between Quinte Mall and Belleville Plaza, agreed basically with a brief presented to the cabinet committee on justice of the government of Ontario concerning the need for legislation establishing uniform retail store hours in Ontario.

Permits to Sell Beer Boon to Restaurants

EDMONTON (CP) — Many small restaurants avoided bankruptcy when the Iberta government allowed them to sell beer and wine, even though beer and wine sales are not great, says Edmonton restaurateur John Greekas.

Mr. Greekas is a member of the liquor committee of the provincial branch of the Canadian Restaurant Association and was one of the restaurateurs who urged the government to bring in the enabling legislation in 1971.

Since then, 52 restaurants in Edmonton have taken out liquor licences and hundreds of others across the province have taken advantage of the new legislation, he said.

Mr. Greekas said some small restaurants have tripled their business since they got their licences, although beer and wine sales represent only about seven to 18 per cent of their volume.

The gain was made when a group went out for dinner and one of them wanted a drink with his meal. Previously they had to go to a licensed dining room or hotel but after the 1971 legislation, they could all go to a smaller neighborhood restaurant.

Having a beer and wine licence allowed the smaller restaurant to cater to a new customer, one who wanted to drink but did not want to spend a lot of money.

That was at least part of the point of the exercise, said Peter Elliott, chairman of the Alberta liquor control board.

The dining lounge licence restricted to beer and wine allowed people to go out and get a drink with their meal without having to go to an expensive restaurant.

As well, the licence enabled travellers to stop and have a beer with their lunch when they wished rather than have to pay for their children to eat in a full-fledged dining lounge.

A simple counter over which pizza or Chinese food is passed is not enough but if the restaurant is neat and clean, has the approval of city health and fire inspectors and meets minimum standards of size, washrooms and so on, it can get a licence, Mr. Elliott said.

Reaction to the legislation was favorable and Mr. Elliott agreed it saved many small operators from folding.

Tom Campanelli, who worked with Mr. Greekas in lobbying for the legislation, said it came about with the boom in small, usually ethnic, restaurants which hit Edmonton about 1968. Before that there was no pressure from the industry because there was no demand.

Everything from a pizza parlor to a cafeteria qualifies for the licence. One establishment that decided to try serving beer and wine recently was The Bay cafeteria.

Hugh Currie, a spokesman for The Bay, said the store took a long look at the situation before seeking the licence but there have been no complaints.

Having control over the nature of the beverage consumed and the manner—with food—has prevented abuse and there has never been any trouble in the cafeteria because of the liquor, he said.

Old Stars Of Theatre Honored

STRATFORD-ON-AVON, England (CP) — A mellowed mid-Victorian building behind the Royal Shakespeare Theatre houses an all-star cast. Its to tantalize the dreams of any director who ever mounted the bard's plays.

It is the surviving portion of a block of buildings presented to the theatre in 1874 by Charles Flower, a brewer and philanthropist, to house a small auditorium, library and picture gallery devoted to Shakespeare.

Opened in 1879 on Shakespeare's birthday, April 23, the auditorium was destroyed by a fire in 1926 but the library and picture gallery remained.

The gallery contains memorabilia of classic actors and actresses from David Garrick and Sarah Siddons to Laurence Olivier, immortalized in portraits and scenes from the plays in oils and stained glass.

The pictures reflect the style of their times. The Apotheosis of Garrick, painted in 1784 by George Carter, shows the actor being borne uncomfortably to Parnassus, where the Muses and Shakespeare await him with wreaths.

A century later, Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, a famed actor and director in his own right, painted portraits of two of his most notable contemporaries, Helena Modjeska and Mary Anderson.

From the same era are Ellen Gregory's vivid depiction of the United States actress Ada Rehan, playing the Shrew with head thrown back in angry defiance, and exterior scenes and panels illustrating Hamlet and As You Like It, donated by Miss Anderson's son Antony.

Contemporary works include Paul Scofield as the clown in The Winter's Tale, painted in 1949; Olivier as Macbeth, 1955; Peggy Ashcroft as Imogen in Cymbeline, 1957, and Michael Redgrave as Hamlet, 1958.

Costumed Violinist Delights Youngsters

TORONTO (CP) — A grey-haired man wearing a battered hat and ragged coat shuffles into the classroom carrying a violin.

That's the delightful introduction many youngsters in Ontario have received to music and Maurice Solway.

His garb on these occasions is the costume he wore for the successful short film, The Violin, which has been shown to theatres throughout Canada and on television.

Mr. Solway composed and played the music and appeared as the central character in the film, most of which was shot on the parkland islands in Toronto harbor.

The Toronto-born musician had a long, successful career before he became involved in the Canadian-made film. He toured Europe played in the Toronto Symphony, founded the Solway Quartet, and has constantly been in demand as a recording studio violinist back, ing other performers.

But increasingly in recent years, Mr. Solway said, his interest has been in the educational aspects of music.

The film provided him with the perfect tool.

His classroom performance lasts an hour with the first 10 minutes devoted to demonstrating the various stringed instruments. Then for 10 minutes he plays a selection from the classics, perhaps Bach or Tchaikovsky.

This is followed by a screening of The Violin, the story of an elderly fiddler whose love for music arouses the same passion in a child of 10.

Finally Mr. Solway answers any questions the students may have about music.

The film also led to a record, Music From the Film, The Violin, performed by Mr. Solway, accompanied by pianist Lee Barkin.

"The film created a new life for me," said Mr. Solway. "There comes a time when you have enough to live on and you want to do something more, and it has enabled me to do this, to reach youngsters with music."

What he is doing appears to be appreciated.

In the last few months, he says he has received almost 400 letters from youngsters and their parents.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Thursday, Jan. 31

Aries (March 21-April 19) You've still more free with finances than you should be. Put a lock on your purse. Lose the key for a day or two.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Authority figures will give you a pain in the neck today. It's not to your advantage to butt heads with them now.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) If you ask favors you'll find yourself in an embarrassing position when they're rejected. Stand on your own feet.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) This is not a good day for you to involve yourself with friends in activities concerning money.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Be extra-cautious how you handle yourself today in situations that relate to your reputation. Postpone legal matters for now.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You will have big ideas today. It is not likely you will do anything productive about them.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Leave all forms of gambling or speculation to others at this time. Don't look, for something for nothing.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You and your mate will not be on the same wavelength regarding an important family issue. This will anger you.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be careful if you're using unfamiliar tools today. Keep your mind on your job. Be patient.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You can't expect one you care for to be more generous to you than you are to him. Giving is a two-way street.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Try not to come on too heavy with persons you will be dealing with commercially today. It won't improve them one bit.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Someone you'll be talking with has some big ideas for you. They look good on paper but they're greatly inflated and impractical.

Man Can Give Wife Trichomonas

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have recently been treated for trichomonas. My husband refuses to take his pills, saying he doesn't think there is anything wrong with him. I understand this is a fairly safe form of VD. What I want to know is, do I get it back from him?—Mrs. J.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I know that trichomonas is a rather hot and annoying and persistent vaginal infection that is transmitted by sexual intercourse. Can it be contracted any other way?

My medical book says the trichomonads live in old feces and can get into the vagina, and at menstrual time when the acidity is lower, they can take hold. Is this so? I get this about twice a year.—P.F.

The first letter above illustrates one of the common reasons that make treatment difficult: the second letter gives a more usual explanation of what it is all about.

Trichomonas infection (causation of the vaginal inflammation by the presence of a microscopic organism known as a protozoon).

I would not call it a "venereal disease" because it can occur without any sexual contact whatsoever. At the same time, it can also be passed back and forth by sexual contact.

It is characteristic that a woman is very conscious of such an infection, but the same infection in a man quite commonly gives no sign of his presence. Hence the husband who insists that there isn't anything wrong with him, so he refuses medication.

The wife takes the medication, cures her trouble and promptly gets it back again from the husband who doesn't know he is carrying it. So he should take medication at the same time his wife does.

The infective organism can indeed be present in the bowel, and in feces, so women, after going to the bathroom, should make it a habit when using toilet tissue to wipe away from the vagina and never toward it, to prevent carrying the organism into the area.

An added note: While very common, trichomonas is not the only form of vaginitis, or vaginal infection. Other forms require different treatment.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I'm 16. I've had crab lice for three months. I belong to a clean family and I don't know how I got them. I refuse to go to a doctor. Please tell me some way can cure them without a prescription.—D.S.

A lot of folks your age get them by the same method. Maybe—it's possible—you picked up a louse by brushing against somebody at school. It's become a very common complaint.

But if you haven't been able to cure them in three months, I don't see any point in asking me for some way to do it without going to a doctor. The correct remedy I know happens to be a prescription medication and not obtainable over the counter prescriptions for it.

Keep on refusing to go to a doctor, and you run the risk of having others in the family pick up the pests.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I lost 25 pounds by following a rather amateurish diet of eating only smaller amounts. Now I am struggling to keep it off by counting calories.

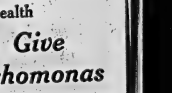
But recently I read in a magazine that it is better to count carbohydrates. Which is better in your opinion?—R.R.

It's true some people gain weight just from going overboard on total carbohydrates (starches and sugars), but in general counting carbohydrates is a more artificial way of doing things. A sounder method is to maintain a balanced diet — eat the same but less of everything.

In short, your "amateurish diet" is the more valid way to do it. As long as you know, it works. So stick with it.

Beaver Sect Founded

FORT LANGLEY, B.C. (CP) — There are 19 beavers in this Lower Mainland community in British Columbia, but not one of them has ever built a dam. The 19 are members of a Beaver Colony, the newest thing in Boy Scouts. The boys, between five and seven years old, follow a varied program of activities under the leadership of six volunteer adults.



Tighten Your Belts

OTTAWA (CP) — Recent studies by the Canada Safety Council indicate that 35 per cent of automobile accident fatalities are preceded by the use of lap and shoulder belts, reports the Consumers' Association of Canada. Rear seat belts also are vital as they prevent passengers from being catapulted into the front-seat occupants if Ghoulies should never be worn without lap belt.

Farmers Ask Tariff Revision

OTTAWA (CP) — The tariff structure affecting fresh and processed fruits and vegetables has remained relatively unchanged for 17 years and the National Farmers' Union feels improvement is long overdue.

The Saskatoon-based union made this point Tuesday at the start of tariff board hearings that may affect commodity prices sometime next year.

"We believe," said union spokesman Stuart Thiessen, "it is necessary to adopt a new approach to the tariff question, which will consider, on an equitable basis, the peculiar needs of all interested parties."

The basic issue is whether an expanding food industry in Canada is in the national interest.

Mr. Thiessen said "it must be a matter of national policy to decide the extent to which we will, as a nation, encourage production of certain classes of food which might very well be more economically produced elsewhere."

The NFU feels economic considerations cannot be the only criterion on which such decisions are based. The tariff board was told political factors such as dependence on another country for a particular food item have to be considered, as do the balance of payments between Canada and other countries.

These, it said in its brief to the five-member board, are valid reasons why governments might encourage food production for reasons other than straight economic considerations that reflect the lowest production costs.

Some Jobs Come Before Environment

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis said Tuesday that Ontario has to decide whether creating jobs or protecting the environment is more important, especially with world energy supply shortages causing problems for some industries.

In a speech to the Ontario Landscapers Association, the premier said that jobs sometimes will have to be created at the expense of the environment.

"There is a very delicate balance that has to be struck at all times between environmental concerns and economic concerns . . ." he said.

Food Higher

TORONTO (CP) — A basket of groceries that cost $8 more this month than a year ago, the Ontario Food Council reported Tuesday.

The council said its market basket for mid-January was $74.82, compared with $66.40 in January, 1973.

The basket contains 147 food products priced in five large supermarkets in the Toronto area.

This month's cost was higher than the $73.34 of last December, but still below the $75.35 of last August.

Minor price increases in all groups were blamed for this month's higher prices.

Plan Protest

OTTAWA (CP) — Secretaries, stenographers and typists in the federal government are planning a Valentine's Day march to Parliament Hill to protest a system of ranking that limits them to their bosses' positions.

The system is called "rug-ranking" and stems from the belief that officials in higher positions have plusher carpets in their offices.

The protest is being supported by the Public Service Alliance of Canada, which represents about 12,000 of the 16,000 federal secretaries, and the Association of Public Service Secretaries, a group formed last March.

The date, Feb. 14, was chosen with an eye toward the ironic, a union official said Tuesday.

"We want to have all the 'sweethearts' up on Parliament Hill," said another.

No Fast Time

VICTORIA (CP) — The British Columbia government has again changed its mind and decided to scrap plans for going to daylight time Sunday.

Premier Dave Barrett emerged from a New Democratic Party caucus meeting Tuesday to say that some of the members of the caucus from northern parts of the province had opposed the move and therefore the province would not be switching early to daylight time.

Six Deported

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Six religious zealots from Atlantic City, N.J., whose fear of a tidal wave brought them to Canada illegally, were ordered deported Tuesday.

Two other members of the pentecostal sect who were among 23 persons apprehended following a police chase Friday will have deportation hearings today.

Funds Refused

OTTAWA (CP) — The New Democratic Party has said thanks but no thanks to contributions totalling $1,600 from two Toronto companies, party officials said Tuesday.

Cliff Scotton, party secretary, said in an interview the party's federal council returned the cheques, one for $1,000 and the other for $600, after discussing the matter earlier this month.

He would not identify the companies, but said one is a manufacturing concern and the other a service business.

Canadian Eggs Sold to Britain

STRATHROY, Ont. (CP) — Canadian eggs are starting to find a potential market again in Britain—the first time since the Second World War.

This weekend, a shipment of 570 cases of Grade A large eggs will leave Maple Lynn Foods here for New York for ocean shipment to Britain, Orville Bridgeman, general manager of Maple Lynn, said the firm in this community near London is acting for the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency.

"Some people may look on this as a trial shipment," Mr. Bridgeman said, "but we are hoping it will become a 52-week-a-year deal."

"It's a market that's being explored with a good possibility that we can do some business there" . . .

Rules to Change

OTTAWA (CP) — New maximum mileage regulations — including safety rule changes ordered by Transport Minister Jean Marchand — will take effect Feb. 1 in three of the four main mileage areas, says Roy Hay.

Pair Guilty Of Contempt

TORONTO (CP) — Two men who refused to testify publicly before the royal commission into violence in the construction industry were convicted of contempt Tuesday by the Ontario Supreme Court.

Thomas Kiroff and Charles (Chuck) Yanover were each fined $1,000 and sentenced to five months in jail. But Chief Justice Dalton Wells suspended the jail term on condition the two men give evidence in public before the commission.

Following the court hearing, John Rosen, lawyer for the two men, said his clients would comply with the court order "unless an appeal is taken."

Moose Attack

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP) — The latest score in the continuing confrontation between machine and animal is Canadian National Railways 23 — Moose 3.

The CNR's massive freight trains, which had enjoyed a hefty advantage, piled up a 20-0 record after the provincial fish and wildlife branch began keeping score Dec. 1.

Since Saturday, however, the moose have struck back, derailing three trains.

Saturday, 17 cars were derailed when a westbound freight train struck and killed a moose near Burns Lake.

Early Tuesday, there were two derailments. Two cars jumped the track 15 miles east of here, and six cars were derailed about 150 miles west of here.

Other than the two moose killed, there were no injuries.

Urges Review

OWEN SOUND, Ont. (CP) — Stephen Lewis, Ontario leader of the New Democratic Party, called Tuesday for an immediate public review of Ontario Hydro's decision to build a power line through rich agricultural land in the Lake Huron area.

QUINTE PLANNING AREA CONCEPT PLANS: DEVELOPMENT PHILOSOPHY.

A large part of this Quinte Planning Board report deals with the rural non-farm residential development phenomenon. The report states that "the future land use planning as well as the future servicing patterns for the Quinte Planning Area will depend largely on the outcome of the discussions of this report, and the decisions made as a result of those discussions."

MOBILE HOME STUDY.

Another current topic of discussion is the subject of this Quinte Planning Board report, which studies the mobile home as a type of housing, and makes recommendations about the development of mobile home parks.

THE OFFICIAL PLAN OF THE HASTINGS COUNTY PLANNING AREA.

The plan outlines the goals and objectives of the Hastings County Planning Board, and states the policies for land use, transportation, and development for this area. Also included are secondary plans for the smaller urban centres in the county. The accompanying volume, "Supporting Information For The Official Plan of The Hastings County Planning area," presents factors to be considered in planning, including land and water resources and the social and economic aspects.

FOREIGN OWNERSHIP: CORPORATE BEHAVIOR AND PUBLIC ATTITUDES.

Several volumes in this series have been published as part of a study for the province of Ontario's Select Committee on Economic and Cultural Nationalism. Raising Dew Worms Billion $ Business

ONTARIO, Calif. (AP) — Bill Halbert aims to be the worm king of the world.

The 29-year-old former novelty salesman is well on the way with his North American Bait Farms.

Raising worms for bait is a $1 billion-a-year business nationally.

Halbert's sales topped $100,000 last year and may reach $200,000 this year, he said.

"There are about 25 million licensed fishermen in this country," Halbert said. "It's increasing at nearly two million each year. If each of those new fishermen purchases just $1 in worms during the year, the increase amounts to $2 million."

North American Bait is expanding as fast as it can but is hampered by a shortage of redworms, nightcrawlers and meal worms. Halbert can't get enough nightcrawlers from Canada so he hopes to be the first dealer to import them from South and Central America.

"We ship worms all over the nation and have little trouble," Halbert said. "Occasionally a box will be crushed at the post office but usually there is no problem. They'll live 10 days to two weeks in a crate."

As a means of expanding, Halbert is setting up other people in business as worm farmers. "I need all the breeders I can get," he explained. "Anyone with a backyard and five minutes a day can earn money from worms."

He will set up anyone in the redworm business for $650.

"For that they'll get 100,000 worms, compost and instructions about raising the worms. In five minutes they can learn all they have to know to be successful. All they have to do is build the three-by-eight-foot bin."

North American Bait pays the breeder $1.50 a pound for all the bait-sized worms produced. Theoretically, a 100,000 batch will multiply to 4.4 million worms in a year.

There are about 500 worms to a pound.

However, it takes about six months for a worm to mature and only full-grown worms are marketable.

That's a $2,400 herd in a year, if you sell all the mature adults. All this from an animal that eats manure.

"The ones who usually laugh about this business," said Halbert, "are the ones who need the money it can earn."

Three Youths Kill Policeman

BELFAST (AP) — Three youths ran out of a passageway in Londonderry Tuesday night and opened fire. One policeman on patrol was killed and another wounded.

The shooting occurred in a Protestant district near a Roman Catholic section.

It was the 836th confirmed death in Northern Ireland's Protestant-Catholic war, since August, 1969.

Meanwhile, the Protestant counterpart of the Irish Republican Army, the outlawed Ulster Volunteer Force, called on all Protestant groups to stop sectarian slayings. It said this was its response to the IRA's recent announcement that it will no longer kill members of the Ulster Defence Regiment, Northern Ireland's mostly Protestant militia, when they are off duty.

VICENZA, Italy (AP) — A school in this northern Italian city ran out of heating oil, and the principal advised all 700 students to stay at home until a new oil supply was obtained.

British Miners Vote Thursday On Whether to Hold National Strike

LONDON (Reuter) — Coal miners are to begin voting Thursday on whether to hold a national strike that would deliver a critical blow to the British economy.

There were hopes, however, that a last-ditch solution can be found to the bitter dispute between the miners and the government.

There was mounting criticism of militant Communists in the miners' union from the Opposition Labor party and some moderate officials of the miners' union.

Hopes for averting a country-wide strike centered on a recent government report on relative pay scales within British industry. The report suggested the miners might be singled out for pay increases.

Prime Minister Edward Heath told Parliament Tuesday he is ready to meet union and industrial leaders to discuss the report by the pay board, set up by the government to administer its anti-inflation laws.

Labor Leader Harold Wilson and Derek Ezra, chairman of the National Coal Board, have both called on the government to determine whether the report might break the deadlock.

For several weeks the miners have been refusing to work overtime and British industry has been forced on a three-day work week to conserve fuel.

Communists in the country's coal fields have come under fire from Heath, the Labor party, and moderate miners including President Joe Gormley of the National Union of Mineworkers.

Nixon Makes Vow He Will Not Quit

WASHINGTON (CP) - Vowing never to resign, President Nixon gave a qualified pledge in his State of the Union address to co-operate with House impeachment investigators.

Nixon's promise came in a dramatic finale to the speech delivered Wednesday night to a joint session of Congress and to millions listening and watching across the country. Until the finale, the speech had been dominated by the energy crisis and the economy.

He said his co-operation on Watergate would have to be tempered by his presidential responsibilities, a remark that drew skeptical comments from some Democrats.

Declaring that "one year of Watergate is enough," Nixon called on the Democratic-controlled Congress to join him in making 1974 "a year of unprecedented progress" in accomplishing a 10-point agenda of national goals.

He called for action to "break the back of the energy crisis" and said he was sending Congress major proposals in the fields of health insurance and welfare reform.

He promised action to safeguard personal privacy, a proposal that produced audible snickers from some Democratic lawmakers. He said Arab feeders will meet soon to consider lifting their oil embargo and he disclosed his proposed federal budget would total $304.4 billion, with increased defence spending but no new taxes.

Nixon drew one of his biggest cheers of the night when he said a lasting peace is "the best legacy I hope to leave from the eight years of my presidency."

He modified revisions of previous proposals and some new ones in his 18-point program, which he called "an agenda of truly significant progress":

- Tax reform - Included a pledge there will be no recession, continued efforts toward a just and lasting settlement in the Middle East," continued efforts, towards his goal of self-sufficiency in energy by 1980, decentralization of government, increased transportation aid to communities and reform of the federal educational aid system.

Although most of the 30 interruptions for applause came from the Republican side of the House, Democratic lawmakers later hailed Nixon's goals while criticizing him over Watergate.

Nixon began his Watergate remarks, delivered without a text, after it appeared he had finished his speech. He declared he wanted to end on a personal note.

Stating he had co-operated with the Watergate special prosecutor, Nixon said "the time has come" to end that and other investigations.

Noting the House judiciary committee investigation, he said he would "co-operate so it can conclude its investigation, make its decision, and I will cooperate in any way that I consider consistent with my responsibilities for the office of the presidency of the United States."

He said he will follow the precedent of past presidents "of never doing anything that weakens the office of the president of the United States or impairs the ability of the presidents of the future to make the grea decisions that are so essential to this nation and the world."

He had been elected president "for the purpose of doing a job and doing it as well as I possibly can," and had "no intention whatever of ever walking away from the job that the people elected me to do."

"Our objectives are clear. We must get world oil prices down from levels that are arbitrary and exploitive."

He said the embargo and price increases had created major economic problems for many countries.

He announced to enthusiastic applause that Arab countries are to meet in the immediate future to discuss lifting the oil embargo.

He gave no details and none were immediately available from the White House or state department.

Speculation Pays

Britain's Coal Miners Commence Strike Vote

LONDON (AP) — Britain's 280,000 coal miners began voting today on whether to strike.

Their leaders predicted an overwhelming "yes" vote, despite a last-minute peace proposal from Prime Minister Heath.

The balloting continues Friday. Counting of the votes is expected to be completed by Sunday, but the results are not to be announced until a meeting Tuesday of the union's leadership.

If the affirmative vote is more than the required 55 per cent and a wage settlement is not close, the leadership has said it will close the mines Sunday, Feb. 10.

Britain's electric power stations last week had enough coal on hand to keep the country operating on its present reduced work schedule until the end of March. The government has indicated if the miners go on strike, it won't be long before the current three-day-a-week for non-essential industry and business is cut to two days or even one.

Heath asked Wednesday for a truce in the Confederation of British Industries and the Trades Union Congress, representing Britain's major employers and 10 million of its 26 million workers, join him in new talks on the miners' demands. Miners seek pay raises in excess of Heath's anti-inflation limits.

The prime minister proposed that the talks be based on a new report from a government pay board recommending that the ceilings be modified for "special cases." He told reporters he hoped that this might qualify.

The prime minister stressed, however, the national coal board would not reopen negotiations with the miners until they ended the ban on overtime work they began three months ago.

Joe Gormley, president of the National Union of Mineworkers, has said he will hold further talks with the government only when more money is "on the table."

This is the third time in a little more than two years that the miners have voted on a strike. In December, 1971, the vote was 59 per cent in favor, and the strike lasted seven weeks.

It was settled by an independent investigating board that gave the men most of what they asked.

Pan-Am Jet Burns In Samoa Mishap

NEW YORK (AP) — A Pan American World Airways jet with 101 persons aboard crashed short of the runway at Pago Pago, Samoa, today and caught fire, the airline reported here.

An undetermined number of survivors were taken out of the wreckage of the 707 jet, a Pan American spokesman said.

"We know there are some survivors," he said. "We just don't know how many."

The plane hit the ground about 1,000 yards short of the airport on the American Island, he said.

Pago Pago is on one of seven islands of American Samoa, an unincorporated territory of the United States.

It is 2,300 miles southwest of Hawaii and 1,600 miles northeast of the northern tip of New Zealand.

The crash occurred at 5:52 a.m. EST, the airline said.

The plane was in contact with the control tower at Pago Pago at the time of the crash.

A spokesman said there were heavy rain squalls at Pago Pago at the time.

Nationalities of the passengers were not known immediately. But the airline said the cockpit crew was based in San Francisco and the flight service crew was from Hawaii

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Temperatures in southern Ontario will drop today, reaching the teens tonight, and will plummet to 30 or 40 degrees below zero in Northern Ontario. Snow squalls are expected in snowbelt regions. Friday will be sunny and cold, with flurries near Lake Huron and Lake Superior.

U.S. Energy Boss Cool on Retaliation

WASHINGTON (CP) — U.S. energy chief William Simon appears to be persuading the Senate demands that he threaten Canada with economic retaliation if Ottawa does not reduce its oil export price.

Basically, it's just matching the prices of other foreign countries," Simon said of the Canadian price as he prepared to meet with Energy Minister Donald Macdonald on oil and other issues today.

The Canadian oil-export tax jumps to $6.40 a barrel Friday. Macdonald has indicated the Canadian price would be cut if other oil exporting countries trim their prices.

President Nixon said in his State of the Union message to Congress Wednesday that world oil prices must be reduced from their current "arbitrary and exploitative" levels.

Macdonald will also confer with a number of American officials besides Simon.

Earlier in this week Senator Lawton Chiles (Dem. Fla.) said the U.S. should "strike back" at Canadian industry because of the price increases.

In addition to high prices, the Americans are keenly interested in Canada's pipeline plans and the possibility of building more lines to transport oil and gas from the north.

Macdonald is interested in hearing American views on what the U.S. hopes to achieve through the Feb. 11-12 conference of oil-consuming countries.

But his big job in Washington is to explain Canadian oil policies and reduce American resentment against Canadian export prices. He will appear in the NBC Today program and speak at the National Press Club Friday.

Nixon's Recipe For Progress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is a summary of the 18-point program urged upon Congress Wednesday by President Nixon for what he termed "a year of progress."

Energy—Break the back of the energy crisis and lay foundations for future capability to meet the United States' energy needs from America's own resources—and at reasonable prices and with protection for the environment.

Peace—Take a step toward lasting peace in the world through continuing a policy of negotiation rather than confrontation and helping toward achievement of a just and lasting settleme nt i nthe lasting settlement in the Middle East.

Prices—Check the rise in prices without a recession and move into a period of steady growth.

Health—Establish a new system of comprehensive health insurance to make quality health care available to every American in a dignified manner at a price he can afford.

Local government—Establish a new era of achievement in state and local government by cutting strings of federal control.

Transportation—Strengthen the ability of local communities to deal with their transportation problems.

Education—Reform the system of federal aid to education to provide it when it is needed, where it is needed, so it will do the most for those who need it the most.

Privacy—Make a beginning on the task of defining and protecting the right of personal privacy.

Welfare—Start on a new period toward reform of welfare system.

World economy—Together with the other nations of the world, establish the framework within which Americans will share more fully in expanding world trade and prosperity in the years ahead, with more open access to both markets "and supplies.

Alberta Raises Royalties on Gas

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government today announced substantially increased royalty rates for natural gas and natural gas byproducts, retroactive to Jan. 1. The new rates — a form of tax on production — will rise to a maximum of 22 per cent to a maximum of 85 per cent, increasing on a sliding scale as actual gas prices increase. Current rates under most natural gas contracts are set at 162.3 per cent. Premier Peter Lougheed said in a statement that the royalty increases are expected to bring the government new revenue of between $200 and $300 million a year.

Oil Tank Blown Up

Four Japanese Terrorists Grab Singapore Men

SINGAPORE (CP) — Four Japanese radicals blew up an oil tank at the Shell refinery off Singapore today, and three of them took six hostages aboard a ship in Singapore harbor, officials said.

The terrorists threatened to kill themselves and their hostages unless they were given safe passage from the island state, police said.

Marine police surrounded the ship in the harbor's eastern anchorage.

Police said the fourth radical remained on the island of Pulau Bukom, the Shell refining center.

The Japanese said they were members of the Japanese Red Army, an extremist leftwing group that has previously been involved in an airport massacre, a plane hijacking, bomb attacks and bank raids. It has links with the Palestine guerrilla movement, but the reason for today's operation in Singapore was not immediately clear.

The Japanese Embassy reported that the three radicals aboard the ship made a ship-to-shore telephone call to the embassy and demanded that Ambassador Tokichiro Uomoto come out to arrange for their departure by plane.

Police said a fire caused by the oil tank explosion had been put out and nobody was hurt.

After the noon explosion, three of the Japanese seized the ferry boat Laju which carried Shell workers between Singapore and Pulau Bukom.

A government spokesman said the terrorists were armed with explosives.

An army helicopter pursued the terrorist still on Pulau Bukom.

Government sources said Ambassador Uomoto got in touch with Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka in Tokyo, and Tanaka instructed him to negotiate with the radicals. The ambassador also conferred with Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew of Singapore before going to the east anchorage to meet with the terrorists.

The sources said a Japan Air Lines plane had been asked to stand by to fly the Japanese out of Singapore if that could be arranged.

Japan's national police agency, without quoting its sources, said the men fled after blasting Shell facilities the guerrillas exchanged fire with Singapore police.

The Japanese foreign ministry said in Tokyo the group had demanded that a vehicle be provided to take them from a Singapore wharf to the airport, preferably a bus and a woman driver, and that the ambassador and a woman secretary meet them.

The secretary was to carry back their demands and the ambassador was to accompany the group until they reached safety.

Tokyo's Haneda Airport was placed under a full security alert. Japan Airlines headquarters in Tokyo said that one of its flights bound for Singapore had been ordered to remain in Bangkok until further notice.

Sources close to the Red Army in Tokyo were unable to say anything about the events in Singapore. The foreign ministry quoted its embassy as saying the reason for the guerrilla action would be announced through the Red Army headquarters in Japan or its Arab headquarters.

About 70 Red Army members are reported to have joined forces with Palestinian guerrillas.

Three of these carried out the massacre at Israel's International airport in 1972 in which two of the terrorists and 21 other persons were killed and more than 70 persons wounded. The third terrorist in that attack, Kozo Okamoto, is serving a life sentence in an Israeli prison.

Red Army members also were involved in the hijacking of a Japanese jetliner on a flight from Amsterdam to Tokyo last July. The hijackers blew up the plane at Benghazi, Libya, after they and the rest of the 141 persons aboard got off.

Joining of Boards Benefits All: Joyce

Contrary to apparently growing feelings that bigness is, in itself, necessarily bad, the Trenton and Belleville real estate boards joined selling forces at the beginning of this year to become the Quinte District Real Estate Board.

And Gerald Joyce, owner of Joyce Realty Ltd., and first president of the amalgamated boards feels it's all for the better — better for the brokers and salesman the new body represents, and better for buyers who now have a much larger area to choose their properties from.

The new president, originally one of few men who got the Belleville board off the ground in 1958, recently explained the benefits he expects will result from amalgamation.

Previously, before the two boards received their joint charter, a prospective buyer would have to drive from Trenton to Belleville and back to truly investigate the variety of properties in the Quinte area. Belleville properties were not listed with the Trenton board and vice versa.

At present, with the Joint Multiple Listing Service the new board uses, a buyer can sit in one of 32 real estate offices in the two cities and view all homes processed through the central clearing house at Westgate Plaza.

The Westgate Plaza office, manned by recording secretary Mrs. Sharon Carter, provides the 25 brokers and some 200 salesmen with up-to-date listings of all properties put on the market in the area bounded by Deseronto on the east, Highway 7 on the north, Cramahe township on the west and all of Prince Edward County on the south.

"The seller of the home now has greater exposure of his property to more people by him," says Mr. Joyce. At the same time, because of the increased membership of the joint board, it now has a greater voice among the 43 boards in the provincial real estate association.

Standardized rate structures and banishment of confusion over jurisdictional areas between the two former individual boards makes life easier.

Previously, says Mr. Joyce, Prince Edward County was a bone of contention. Belleville realtors assumed part jurisdiction, approached over the Bay Bridge, while Trenton Realtors assumed part jurisdiction through an approach over the Carrying Place bridge.

"We were more susceptible to differences of opinion over this, as well as other matters of policy," says Mr. Joyce. Luckily, members of the two boards did not experience any real problems, he said.

Whereas previously, neither board could financially manage a central office to process MLS forms, now, with the increase in membership and resulting dues, it can be afforded. The astronomical amount of book-keeping can now be taken care of by a full-time Quinte board employee, and can process forms much more rapidly.

Man's Body Found In Cemetery Bog

PICTON — The body of a Picton man was discovered Wednesday afternoon in a marshy area of Glenwood cemetery here.

Eric Gallant, 21, of 29 Spring St., was found lying in about a foot of water by two boys not identified by police.

Town police say that no foul play is suspected. Constable Charles Fletcher said that a Belleville General Hospital pathologist has stated the cause of death was drowning.

Prince Edward county coroner, Dr. C. B. Richmond, pronounced the man dead at the scene. He said no decision had yet been made on an inquest.

Police are unable to state when Mr. Gallant drowned, as it is difficult to determine time of death when a body has lain some time in cold, running water.

The area of the cemetery where the man drowned is an undeveloped marshy lot bordering pasture land owned by Pierce Jones, of Picton.

Investigations started when Constable Douglas Geodrey of the provincial police here was first contacted and both town and provincial police are still seeking further details involved in the incident.

Hits Ice, Car Rolls

TWEED (Special) — A Hungerford township man escaped injury when his car went out of control on the Sulphide Road Thursday morning and rolled in a ditch, causing $1,000 damage.

Allan Thompson was returning home from his job in Corbyville about 8 a.m. when the accident occurred police said. They said the road was icy-covered. Two $20 police tests were taken out when the car rolled.

Trenton's Old Offices Seen Ready in 6 Weeks

TRENTON—Work on Trenton's old municipal offices should begin early next week — providing the mayor receives council's nod to sign the lease with the Quinte Planning Board.

Considered "a formality," by Mayor Bob Patrick, he said council, following numerous earlier discussions, "will rubber-stamp the request." The board has already signed its portion of the five-year agreement.

Once the lease is signed, workmen can begin renovating the two-storey office building to suit the planning board staff. About $12,000 has been set aside by the town to cover costs.

Due to a series of delays in funding arrangements, the project has been delayed and planning staff will not be able to move in until at least late March.

A spokesman for contractor Miron-Wiggers said work can being soon and should take no longer than six weeks.

Despite widespread shortage of building materials reported by local builders, Dick Wilkerink, project co-ordinator, says this will not affect the job.

Apparently there is no shortage of panelling, carpet and minor painting and decorating needs.

He says his firm will meet with town officials today to discuss what must be done and work could begin as soon as Monday.

Mr. Wilkerink is optimistic $12,000 will cover the project. He says "rising costs shouldn't affect the figure."

According to a planning board spokesman, the delay in moving into the new offices shouldn't prove any great inconvenience. Originally the board was to take over the offices Feb. 16.

Quiet--Isn't It?

Open water has been reported around Prince Edward County with recent mild weather. Yet Outlet provincial park boreline stays a desolate scene. It's still frozen.

Trenton Strike Now Waiting Game

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — A wailing-game atmosphere has settled over contract disputes which led to more than 100 Fabricon workers walking off their jobs here Monday.

Management and Local 554, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers have reached a stalemate in negotiations which broke off without progress Saturday morning.

The only table both sides have met across this week was at Trenton police department they were instructed to maintain the peace. "Basically to keep our noses clean," said Roger Webb, president of the union.

Workers are asking for $1.00 an hour across the board. Increases geared to the cost-of-living index and more extensive fringe benefits.

Neither side sees eye-to-eye, with management claiming the best offer has been made.

Management this week is lends contacting by mail all striking employees, outlining completely the company offer and what it would mean to each individual.

Hanns Allmendinger, president of the company which is part of the conglomerate Alco Standard Corp., of Philadelphia, Pa., told this paper, "we have offered our limit," in referring to last Saturday's fruitless talks.

Asked if there was any possibility to compromise toward the union demand, he said, "we can't come any closer. No way. I think we gave more than we actually could."

Both sides say they are open to discuss the situation which has left 115 members of Local to walk the picket lines while management tries to carry on the operations.

"We are open to discussion at any time...a strike is an expensive thing," says Mr. Allmendinger.

Personally I think we should wait until the company comes," says union chieftain Webb.

So, until the union membership votes for a meeting or management approaches the union, both sides will wait.

High Morale Crucial to Picketing

TRENTON — Good spirits seem to prevail on the Fabricon picket line that formed last Monday when union workers rejected the final management offer.

"Keeping the moral high is important in winning anything," says Roger Webb, president. Local 554 United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers.

Both sides have stalemated in contract negotiations with the company refusing the across-the-board dollar-an-hour raise demanded by the union.

Strikers have one pay cheque coming today. From then on it will be part time jobs, total unemployment and $45 a week strike pay.

"We've got a couple of million dollars in union headquarters in Toronto," says Mr. Webb.

Workers have had months to prepare for the strike, after being told in December when negotiations started, "prepare for the worst."

Already some of the men have landed part-time jobs and some of the wives are going out to work, according to the president.

Strikers have one pay cheque coming today. From then on it will be part time jobs.

"It's in our constitution."

"Some of the boys have talked to their landlords who turned around and told them not to worry about it," says Mr. Webb.

Staff Keep Plant Going

TRENTON — While shop workers picket Fabricon Manufacturing here, office staff and management personnel are working to keep up the plant operation.

"That's what you call the blind leading the blind, says Roger Webb, union president, referring to office staff performing shop duties.

Hanns Allmendinger, Fabricon president, said "we are operating but we are not shipping or receiving." The company produces wire and cable.

Expansion Okay For Hospital

PICTON — Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital has been authorized by the Ontario health ministry to plan for expansion of emergency and ambulatory care facilities.

It has been stressed, however, that the ministry cannot make a future commitment to share in capital cost or additional operating cost possibly associated with the project.

The hospital board has authorized architects Smith and McCrimmon, Kingston, to prepare detailed plans for the expansion of the outpatient facilities.

These plans, eventually, will be submitted to the ministry for final approval. Possibly at this time government financial constraints will be eased.

Meantime, a third emergency room is being initiated to relieve the congestion in the outpatient department which is currently crowded in the summer months.

Learning Disability System Told Trustees

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

BLOOMFIELD — Sandra Latchford, research assistant to Dr. Denis Herbert Stott of the University of Guelph's learning disabilities centre, has outlined the Stott system to Prince Edward school trustees.

She explained that the program employs a series of reading games to provide children with help in reading.

Students are assisted by parents, senior students and teachers as volunteers. Some pupils require instruction on a one-to-one basis or a one-teacher-to-two- student level. This extra help is given by volunteers.

The program has a flying start kit used in kindergarten classes to eliminate problems before they develop.

Prince Edward trustees were told that approximately 300 pupils in the county use Stott materials.

The system has been widely used at Pinecrest school in Bloomfield and is now being introduced at Wellington, Spitsbiurgh and Queen Elizabeth schools.

The Pinecrest program was one of the first begun in Canada and was structured much like Dr. Stott's clinic in Guelph.

At Pinecrest, many parents volunteered to participate in the system and meetings now are underway in Picton to recruit volunteers for the program at Queen Elizabeth school.

A Healthy Economy

The contents of annual reports like income tax, deal with events and statistics occurring during the previous year. "Info-mat," the weekly bulletin of Statistics Canada, is of greater immediacy therefore than most releases of this nature.

Even at that, an Infomat dated December 7 which is before us remains of interest, since it affords comparisons toward the end of 1973 with the figures of a year before.

What is clear from these figures is that the Canadian economy overall is strong, albeit affected by inflationary factors that are being felt world-wide and by labor disputes that slowed economic activity in the third quarter of 1973. The gross national product (at market prices) grew by $2.8 billion in the quarter to reach a level of $119.1 billion, for a 2.4 per cent increase compared with gains of 2.8 per cent and 4.5 per cent in the preceding quarters.

As for inflation, it is reflected in a following paragraph: "Practically all of the advance, however, was due to continued sharp price increases. The overall implicit price index advanced two per cent, a rise of approximately the same magnitude as in the first two quarters of the year.

Here are some interesting sales statistics from the bulletin: Department store sales in October showed an increase of 17 per cent over the corresponding month in 1972. British Columbia recorded the highest increase, 29.1 per cent, with Ontario, surprisingly, only one step from the bottom at 13 per cent and Manitoba, lowest on the totem pol at just 11.8 per cent of an increase.

The supposedly impoverished Atlantic provinces had an increase of 22 per cent for second place. Even Saskatchewan, whom Premier Blakeney would have us believe is poor in comparison with the rest of Canada recorded a sales increase of 18.9 per cent, fractionally ahead of even Alberta at 18.8 per cent and Quebec which managed 14.5 per cent ever last year's figures.

In another sphere of activity accrued net income of farm operators from farm production rose 23 per cent in the quarter, due mainly to sharp increases in the price of farm products. Thus the farmers are getting a high-er but like everybody else their gain is largely eaten up by inflation.

The bulletin says that over the twelve months from October 1972, the largest price advances were shown by the consumer component group indexes: foods and beverage industries, up 25.3 per cent; textile industries, 22.8 per cent; petroleum and coal products industries 20.9 per cent; primary metal industries, 19.2 per cent.

There are some interesting figures too showing the growing popularity of color televisions, as a commensurate drop in the sales of black-and-white sets. Color sales in October totalled 76,901 units, a gain of 14.3 per cent, while black-and-white declined by 17.1 per cent to 23,998 units.

Over the same 12-month period advances were recorded in what are described as "the major group indexes," gains ranging from 18 per cent in clothing products to 57.9 per cent in vegetable products, with in-between percentage gains for non-ferrous metals, animal products, non-metallic minerals, wood and iron products.

* * *

It is a story of inflation, but also of prosperity and the maintenance of the work ethic which has made this country great. For the most part all systems are go in this country, to borrow from the language of the space age. This, and a necessary balancing concern for conservation, for the husbanding of the country's resources, as well as for countering pollution, augurs well for the future.

Whiz at Math

There is a math contest coming up February 6 for primary school students in Belleville — the first, it seems, for students in the elementary grades. Now wouldn't it be wonderful if each had the gifts of the young woman from India, 32-year-old Shakuntala Devi, who is in Canada demonstrating her incredible faculty for working out complex mathematical routines in a matter of seconds, and faster even than a computer. Of course if they were all that good, it would be something of a no-contest. As it is, with seven schools competing, we are sure of some interesting results.

Japan's Economic Imperialism Is Under Fire in Asia

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst

Japan is again under fire throughout Southeast Asia for the first time since the Second World War. Mercifully for the Japanese and for Asia the circumstances are very different even if the charge of spreading Japanese imperialism in Asia sounds the same.

The new attack on the Japanese mounted by students during the visit of Japanese Premier Kakuei Tanaka to Thailand, the Philippines and Indonesia, is against the economic penetration of Japan throughout Southeast Asia and the allegedly corrupting influence of mass-produced Japanese consumer goods.

That is a long way indeed from the brutalizing wartime experience of the early 1940s of Imperial Japan's East Asia Co-prosperity Sphere, a wordy term for enforced Asian co-operation with Japan's imperial designs.

Several Asian societies, newly-released from European colonial rule by the invading Japanese who were also Asians, found rule from Tokyo rather than London, Washington or The Hague, cruel and ruthless.

Paradoxically Japan's wartime occupation of former European colonial territories now known as Indonesia, the Republic of the Philippines and Malaysia produced the tough nationalistic movements from which today's youth movements have sprung.

Curiously the attack against Japan during Premier Tanaka's state visits were made against Japanese products, not against local Japanese businessmen or diplomats themselves.

In Thailand, student movements which had simmered in long-term and tough military government last October, burned Japanese cars in effigy and in miniature during Mr. Tanaka's recent Bangkok visit. The Indonesian reaction was tougher with thousands of students and political opponents of the Suharto regime flaming throughout Jakarta burning real Japanese cars.

The exact reasons for the apparently spontaneous attacks against Japan still are not clear. Certainly nationalistic sentiments, not unlike the ones which the Japanese themselves stimulated during the Second World War, are being exploited.

Mixed in with these is growing student resentment against national governments, especially in the Philippines now under the one-man dictatorship of President Marcos and the military government of Indonesia.

There also is a puritanical element in such student reaction to the economically oppressive Japanese to ask why so many fellow citizens have let themselves become corrupted by the blandishments of Japanese affluence. The symbols of this are the small Japanese cars, now exported in their hundreds of thousands to Southeast Asian countries, the television radio, miniaturized TV, refrigerator and other household conveniences.

Another paradox in the sudden anti-Japanese student tirade is that such miniaturized products were made to meet the constricted needs of Japanese living space. Japan as the Asian leader was supplying her people with the products in demand all over the Third World, and so far found only in the industrialized West.

The student attacks suggest Western-style affluence in a Japanese model is considered a type of external imperialism by many Asians.

Canadians Could Be the Losers

Political Posturing Over Oil at Ottawa Parley

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Not one more tankful of gasoline, not a single extra gallon of heating fuel will be available to Canadians despite everything said at the recent national energy conference.

As a means of promoting fuel production, the two days of Ottawa talks among the first ministers of the federal and provincial governments were about as useful as a nightshirt at the North Pole.

The participants seemed to regard their meeting only as an opportunity to impress each other with their respective positions on the constitution, on federal-provincial tax sharing, on state control of energy industries.

There were the obligatory criticisms of the international oil organizations, and Premier David Barrett of British Columbia even took a few kicks at the state of California for some obscure reason.

But behind the blare of the bugles, there was no parade.

The conference ended with not much more than a decision to put off a decision for two months, until the end of March.

Then, it appears, Canadians had better be prepared for a series of gradual price increases that will bring out oil and gas into something approaching parity with imported world prices.

The question of whether the federal government, the oil-producing provinces of the oil-producing companies will get the lion's share of the price increases is left open—but with the clear impression that the producing companies should be grateful for what they have and not expect more.

Surely the public interest called for a serious discussion of ways to ensure a steady increase in the supply of energy to meet steadily increasing demand—rather than an unseemly argument about splitting the loot from a price hike that may well prove to be untenable.

The producing provinces emphasized the expected life of their proven oil reserves at current rates of consumption—13 years for Alberta, nine for Saskatchewan.

But this ignores the oil industry's record of finding new reserves to replace depleting supplies, as long as reasonable financial incentives were available. Under a competitive market system, petroleum prices were advanced less than most other consumer prices until about a year ago.

The decision today is that the federal and provincial governments will be carried away by the bandwagon mentality—the view that politics, social objectives and environmental standards are all that matter where energy is concerned.

Ottawa can't even be bothered communicating with Arab exporters, to restore Eastern Canada's interrupted supply of Middle Eastern crude oil.

Who will suffer the most? Not the oil-producing companies. The multinationals are accustomed to moving capital out of provinces they are not wanted, and putting it to work elsewhere.

Not the Americans. One way or another, they will manage to maintain their supply of energy.

The real losers could be Canadians in the energy-using producers and consumers, if governments don't soon set some little-soul assign priority to the maintenance of orderly growth of energy production in Canada.

Bible Digest

by H. S. DEAN

"And the publican, standing afar off, would not lift up an eye unto his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner. I tell you this man went down to his house justified rather than the other: for every one that exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted." Luke 18:13, 14

The same prayer in the name of Jesus still sends even the vilest of sinners, home free! Try this prayer and you will have His peace. But do it right now. He said: "my Spirit will not always strive with man."

Bureaucracy by Any Other Name

By PETER LLOYD
OTTAWA (CP) — What's in a name?

Not much, judging by the profusion of labels in federal government agencies and departments.

What once were mere departments now may be ministries of state. Other departments are still just departments, although their names might not show it.

There's little confusion among government employees or callers in regular contact with the departments concerned, but people in only occasional touch with officialdom may be slightly perplexed by the new names.

For instance, everyone knows Eugene Whelan heads Agriculture Canada and Marc Lalonde is top man at Health and Welfare Canada, but do you know what the initials UIC stand for?

Unemployment Insurance Commission, you say? Maybe. The government's latest telephone directory makes no mention of that well-known body, but it does list Unemployment Insurance Canada.

UIC spokesmen say the body is referred to in both ways, depending on who is talking, and to whom. Legally, it is still the Unemployment Insurance Commission, "and that's how we refer to it internally."

Several government department and agencies now have the Canada label applied to their names, in some cases replacing former titles that others being used jointly with previous names.

There's little chance of misunderstanding the new versions, which a government spokesman said reflect the policy of trying to make administrative bodies more easily identified by the public.

Communications Canada, Environment Canada and Revenue Canada speak for themselves.

However, usage of some of the names might be confusing.

For instance, the government telephone directory bears a Communications Canada label on its cover to show which department prepared the listings, but inside, Communications Canada is found under the communications department.

Likewise, Environment Canada is the environment department calls itself on news releases, is found in the directory under environment, department of the, although it is one of the better known examples of the new nomenclature.

The situation in the environment department is complicated by Fisheries and Environment Canada if you prefer, may further perplex buyers already befuddled by the logic of government names.

Jack Davis holds the double title of environment and fisheries minister. The trouble is, there's no fisheries department, not even a Fisheries Canada.

The minister's fisheries responsibilities stem from inclusion of the fisheries branch within the environment department, which also contains Fisheries Service (Canada).

Dorothea Crittenden Gets Post of Deputy Minister

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — It's official finally has made it to the top of the heap.

It has been announced that Dorothea Crittenden has been appointed deputy minister of the ministry of community and social services.

This means she is the first woman ever to be named a deputy minister here. And deputy minister is the top of the ladder, the highest ranking in the government service.

If there had to be a woman—and of course there is no reason why there shouldn't be a woman deputy—it is good to see that the government chose Cris.

For this handsome 58-year-old has what it takes.

She is not a women's libber or one of those other types of know-it-all which we have associated so much with women in top jobs in government.

This is a woman who is a real pro civil servant.

She is a university graduate, BA in psychology and sociology from University of Toronto and did teach for two years—in northern Ontario.

She started in the government service as a typist 36 years ago and has worked her way up through the mill.

In 1950 she became the first woman personnel director in the government, then she became director of finance in the welfare department in 1959 and assistant deputy minister in 1967.

As the first woman deputy Crit will be carrying quite a load.

She is leading the way, and a lot of people will be on the outlook for fumbles or displays of female temperament.

My guess bet is that they won't occur.

Those of us who have known Dorothea over a good many years know her as a very able, balanced, emotionally hard-working, sympathetic and intelligent woman.

One of the first problems of a deputy is to get along with staff. Crit will do this.

Another is to keep a rein, to stay down-to-earth, particularly in this field of community and social service where there can be reigns of kooky ideas.

Still another is to be able to think quickly and clearly, and absorb information.

I think we will find she can do all of these admirably.

Relief for Drought Victims

Editor
The Intelligencer:

It is very satisfying to be able to report good news for a change:

Canadians were shocked in mid-November by reports of up to 150,000 deaths from starvation in drought-ravaged Ethiopia. Massive international aid was delayed in part because of the initial reluctance of the Ethiopian government to admit the full extent of its drought problem.

I can now report, however, that a comprehensive famine relief operation is now in full swing in Ethiopia. As a consequence, there are today very few if any deaths from starvation in that country. The report comes directly from Oxfam's emergency director Sean and Mr. Toby Gooch, our full - time Field Director, in Ethiopia. Toby Gooch makes it clear that the hardest of the battle today is important but still lies ahead - getting the survivors and the rehabilitated atmosphere of the relief camps and back to a more "normal" life.

This is the direction which Oxfam's own massive relief operation is now taking. Oxfam has spent over $300,000 for drought relief in Ethiopia during 1973, beginning with our first grants back in May.

A dark cloud remains, however. The agricultural season in Ethiopia was a poor one. The next normal harvest cannot be expected at least until December, 1974. Continued emergency relief must be needed if food shortages, now forecast for late February or March, do occur.

Oxfam is deeply grateful for the public's warm response to date to our Ethiopian appeal. I would like to thank all those who have contributed to this effort.

CATHERINE HARVEY
Oxfam Ontario Regional Director

P.S.: A very authoritative and up-to-date report on the current situation in Ethiopia, based on our own field reports, is included with this letter.

Outing for Moms and Kids

McCALL'S

In Arlington, Virginia, the Marymount Recreation Center offers a special recreational rescue program to one group who really needs it — housebound parents and their preschool children. Two morning a week, volunteers show up and departs on free expeditions to such fascinating destinations as a kitchen farm, a dog show, a fire station, a bagpipe show or a bakery (where, by advance arrangement, a couple of gingerbread men has been scheduled for the event). This Christmas season, assemblers of the holiday decorations in downtown Washington, Rides are kept to 20 minutes or less. Special activities are planned for no more than an hour, after which snacks and, frequently, sometimes adjourn to a nearby park or playground. Then it's back home for lunch and afternoon naps.

Mothers love it, says Mary Maginniss of Alexandria, because it gives them a chance to leave the house and discover good places to take their tots, perhaps more than once. And with parents along, the recreation department need not bear the entire responsibility of supervising the lively brood of squirming toddlers, many of whom are still in diapers.

Help With Buying Car

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I have just picked up some information which should be of interest to the buying public of our district.

An information folder in the shape of a map has been brought out by the Automobile Dealers Associations of Ontario for use by automobile dealers. One of these folders is to be placed in every new or used warranty vehicle sold by a dealer. Listed there will be names of people in authority in various departments whom a complainant will contact if a problem arises. Also listed will be addresses of the Association and the request that complainants contact that office should a problem not be resolved.

This seems to be a very worthwhile bit of information to provide to our buying public and overcome any confusion as to contacts regarding problems. It is to be hoped that all auto dealers will employ the use of this folder for the good of public relations.

The existence of this folder was brought to our attention by Trudeau Motors of Belleville who are adopting it's use as of January 31.

Health Ministry Orders Blood Tests for Lead

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's health ministry has ordered lead blood level tests for workers in several Toronto area plants.

Dr. V .L. Tidey, head of the occupational health protection branch, said Wednesday the tests would begin next Wednesday and be conducted monthly for 225 employees of Canada Metal Ltd., and workers at Toronto Refiners and Smelters Ltd. and the Prestolite Co.

He said a similar order had been issued in the past against several other companies "with high lead exposure." Orders now are outstanding against two other companies, he said, but would not name them.

The orders followed the airing Tuesday night of a CBC radio documentary on lead pollution in many areas of Canada.

Portions of the documentary were deleted in broadcasts in central and western regions of the country when the station was served with an injunction on behalf of Toronto Refiners and Canada Metal.

The injunction restored portions of the program implying that the plaintiffs had "bought" misleading favorable medical evidence and concealed material evidence from medical experts and from misstating the amounts the plaintiffs are spending to install pollution control devices."

Dr. Don Milford, consulting physician for Canada Metal, said Wednesday he did not understand how the company might be charged with providing misleading evidence to anyone because results of blood tests on workers had been given only to the employee and his doctor.

Environment Ministry Is Called 'Albatross'

TORONTO (CP) — Stephen Lewis, Ontario leader of the New Democratic Party, said Wednesday the Ontario environment ministry is "an albatross dragging the government from embarrassment to calamity."

He made the comment in a statement in which he joined Liberal Leader Robert Nixon in demanding a royal commission inquiry into the ministry and its air management branch.

The demands were renewed following the broadcast Tuesday night of a CBC radio documentary on lead pollution in many areas of Canada.

Portions of the documentary were deleted in most of the country following an injunction issued on behalf of Toronto Refiners and Smelters Ltd. and Canada Metal Co. Ltd., which has operations here.

The injunction, effective for 10 days, resulted in the deletions during the broadcast except in the Atlantic region because the injunction had not been served at the time of broadcast to the East.

The NDP leader said an inquiry may not be enough because the environment ministry has lost the confidence of the public.

"Its willingness to accept the unacceptable in land-fill sites, the pathetic performance in inspecting programs, the constant extension of ministerial orders (to install pollution abatement equipment), the tender application of controls to the mining and smelting industry, the endless devices, procrastinations and convoluted explanations, all add up to a dismal record in environmental protection.

Welfare Competition Too Stiff

Truck Farms Need Ability To Pay More to Workers

OTTAWA (CP) — Ed Connery, a root farmer from Manitoba who works acreage that his father and grandfather did before him, figures he has paid out $500,000 in wages since 1950 but despite this, he still has trouble getting workers.

"These facts came out Wednesday during the second day of a tariff board hearing that may affect the price of fresh and processed fruits and vegetables sometime in 1975.

Mr. Connery, whose farm produces such things as carrots, rutabags, carrots and asparagus, says his main complaint seem to be unemployment insurance and welfare programs.

"If we could give $2.50 to $4 an hour," he told the tariff board, "we'd have no trouble getting labor."

But having to pay those kind of wages for farm labor would wipe him out in a couple of years. His unskilled workers, many of them Indians from local reserves, have to be content with getting not much more than the minimum wage, about $2 to $2.25 an hour. The semi-skilled ones, such as tractor drivers, go between $2.75 and $3.

The problem about unemployment insurance and welfare is that many potential workers have no incentive to work for him when they can collect almost as much money for no work.

His complaints were echoed by Les Armstrong of Toronto, a farmer who now is with the Ontario Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association.

"We are having more difficulty as time goes on," he told the board, adding that automation is perhaps the only thing that has saved the grape industry in the Niagara Peninsula in southwestern Ontario.

But mechanical harvesters, which are spreading to other crops, cost between $30,000 and $40,000.

He supported Mr. Connery's contention that if the industry was able to pay decent wages, workers would not be hard to find.

He was asked by board chairman L. E. Couillard about reports that abysmal working conditions among seasonal labor are a factor in southwestern Ontario growers being unable to get good workers.

"My best suggestion to the board would be to investigate the conditions yourselves," replied Mr. Armstrong.

"We have no hesitation about inviting you to come and take a look."

Working conditions among migrant farm workers became an issue in the Commons last year when government inspectors reported that whole families, including small children, were living in shacks and getting minimal pay.

Mr. Armstrong said subsequent investigations by newspaper men showed "the absolute opposite to what was reported."

The tariff board hearings are expected to last about three weeks but the board's final report is not expected until at least next spring.

Wire Tapped

HAMILTON (CP) — A wire-tap, used in the case of Vince Murray Mostani, 38, of Binbrook, charged with extortion and attempted extortion, was one of at least 100 since November, 1971, that Sgt. Vern MacMillan has been involved in, the Hamilton-Wentworth policeman told the court Wednesday.

York Is Preparing to Close Its High Schools Tomorrow

TORONTO (CP) — While Premier William Davis expressed optimism Wednesday that teacher disputes in three remaining areas will be settled, negotiators for teachers in one area prepared to close schools Friday.

Leaders of high school teachers in York region said meetings with the education ministry late not resolved the impasse between the York County school board and its 865 secondary school teachers.

Representatives of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers Federation (OSSTF) met Wednesday to discuss procedures for closing 15 high schools in the York region, attended by about 14,000 students in the area north from Metropolitan Toronto Lake Simcoe.

Ronald Hall, acting director of education for York, said that Friday and Monday will be "non-instructional days"—students will not be required to attend classes.

"This will give principals and whatever staffs they have 4-hour-day shot at getting something ready for Tuesday," he said.

Mr. Hall said about 100 of the teachers—including all 15 principals—had not submitted resignations.

After a cabinet meeting Wednesday, Premier Davis refused to speculate on whether the legislature would be recalled if mass resignations go ahead as scheduled at midnight Thursday or Friday.

Disputes also remain unsettled between teachers and Renfrew County separate school boards in Windsor and Huron-Perth. Negotiations are continuing in both areas.

The premier said the negotiations are proceeding in "a positive way" and the government is pleased with the results to date.

Tentative agreement was reached Wednesday by the Essex County separate school board, and the Penetanguishene-Russell high school board of education, and teachers' representatives.

Kuwait Takes Over BP and Gulf Plants

KUWAIT (AP) — Kuwait announced today it has signed an agreement to take over a 60-per-cent share of British Petroleum Ltd. and Gulf Oil's Kuwait operations.

Oil Minister Abdul Rahman Salem Atiki said the Kuwait government will pay a lump sum of $112 million as compensation to the two companies.

Atiki said the agreement has a five-year duration expiring Dec. 31, 1979.

If you're due for a refund this year, remember this: the fewer corrections we have to make on your return, and the earlier you mail, the faster you'll get it.

If your return comes to us in the early part of the filing season and has been filled in carefully and correctly, chances are you'll hear back from us pretty quickly. (Like you, we're happier when our debts are paid, too.)

Unfortunately, what often happens is that careless errors hold up your return. If the computers come across even a minor arithmetic error, your return is automatically rejected and must be checked and corrected by hand before it can be re-entered for processing. Which, when you realize that more than 10 million returns flood in within a three month period, can put your return pretty far back.

What we're saying is really very simple. Please double-check your return. Triple-check. Make sure the right information is on the right line, that your arithmetic adds up and that you've filled in all the parts that apply. (And remember that if you do run into problems, follow April Aid for immediate help.)

Although we can't guarantee refunds within a certain time period, we can promise you this: if you'll do your part by taking care to do your return correctly and mail in early, we'll give it priority here so that your refund cheque gets back to you just as soon as possible.

Together, we can get it done.

To Listen to Laymen In Selection of Art

OTTAWA (CP) — Works Minister Jean-Eudes Dubé said Thursday that a greater voice will be given in the selection of works department art commissions to people without a professional interest in the arts.

He said the department's advisory committee on art—which selects sculptures and art works for new federal government buildings—will be enlarged by at least 11 members from its present limit of eight.

The statement was issued by his department after a meeting with the advisory committee, and follows his own personal survey of public opinion on Haida, the controversial piece of folded steel which was mounted in front of the new external affairs building here last year.

The department works to a rule of thumb that one per cent of the capital cost of a new building should be spent on Canadian art to decorate it.

The enlarged advisory committee will consist of two members of the general public, two visual artists of varied background, two architects, two critics of varied background, and one representative each of the National Gallery, the Canada Council and the works department.

Union Claims Rules Broken

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A union official charged Wednesday that the Ontario ministry of transportation and communications is breaking regulations of the provincial labor ministry on a project on the St. Lawrence River.

Webb Vivian, business agent for Local 231, Association of Apprentices and Journeymen Plumbers and Pipefitters, said the transportation ministry is using its own personnel on the construction of a bubble system designed to keep the ferry channel between Kingston and Wolfe Island open during the winter.

1972 Shooting Denied

Wiretapped Words Uttered To Impress Woman, Claim

TORONTO (CP) — A witness at the royal commission inquiry into violence in the construction industry was confronted Wednesday with police wiretaps of two telephone conversations in an attempt to bring an admission about a 1972 shooting.

But Frank Veltri, a 36-year-old unemployed hotel doorman, continued to maintain he had no part in the wounding of union organizer Bruno Zanini on Aug. 23, 1972.

Mr. Veltri said he made remarks in the taped telephone conversations with a woman, identified only by the pseudonym Mary, implicating himself in the shooting because "I was trying to impress her."

S.Sgt. Murray Crawford of the Metropolitan Toronto police testified he received a tip that a man known as "The Angel" got $1,500 for the attack in which Mr. Zanini was wounded in the leg.

A search of police nickname files led to Mr. Veltri and his home was raided but no guns were found, said the sergeant.

Mr. Veltri said on the witness stand he was known as "The Angel" and that he had a criminal record but he said he only learned of the shooting of Mr. Zanini when he was questioned by police following their raid Jan. 14.

Mr. Zanini testified earlier he thought he was shot by someone representing builders and unionists who were worried he would help he was giving a newspaper investigation of labor racketeering.

He said he was not able to identify the person who had shot him and so far no charges have been laid in the attack.

Albert Shepherd, counsel for the commission, said outside the hearing room that the woman in the phone calls with Mr. Veltri was being questioned and might be called as a witness.

Another witness Wednesday was Kirsikon Vlahos, 48, president of two telephone conversations in an attempt to bring an admission about a 1972 shooting.

But Frank Veltri, a 36-year-old unemployed hotel doorman, continued to maintain he had no part in the wounding of union organizer Bruno Zanini on Aug. 23, 1972.

Albert Shepherd, counsel for the commission, said outside the hearing room that the woman in the phone calls with Mr. Veltri was being questioned and might be called as a witness.

Another witness Wednesday was Kirsikon Vlahos, 48, president of two telephone conversations Co. Ltd. He testified that in 1970 he gave $4,000 to Tony Michael and John D'Alimonte, then organizers for the Council of Concrete Forming Trade Unions.

Mr. Vlahos said he made the payments in the hopes they would "lay off, leave me alone" and rather than live up to terms of a 1968 union agreement he couldn't afford.

The agreement called for a 15-cent hourly deduction from the pay of each union member for a union welfare fund started in May, 1970.

Cheques entered as exhibits showed deductions averaging about $2,500 were sent by Mr. Vlahos to the council for May, June and July, 1970, but the payments were always late.

Mr. Vlahos said he made no payments after May because he had to pay 70 cents more an hour for labor than his competitors and "we couldn't deduct even the union dues . . ."

The commission counsel said Mr. Michael was prepared to deny ever receiving any money from Mr. Vlahos who retorted: "He took the bloody thing because I gave it to him."

Mr. D'Alimonte earlier testified to receiving $2,000 from Mr. Vlahos in instalments of $500 each.

Standards Association Methods Under Attack

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Standards Association's (CSA) methods of evaluating home consumer products for safety and performance should be examined by a special inquiry, says a standards writer for the association, Bob Jerabek of Ottawa.

Mr. Jerabek, also an independent investor and researcher, said he bases his claim on documented evidence that some CSA-approved vacuum cleaners are fire hazards.

Others carry misleading information on the compulsory CSA nameplate of approval which gives competitive advantages to some manufacturers, Mr. Jerabek said in an interview this week.

Dr. P.D. McTaggart-Cowan, executive director of the Science Council of Canada, said he believes the evidence and suspects it indicates general shoddiness in other areas of manufacturing.

Mr. Jerabek, a former director of research for a large vacuum cleaner company, Dunbane Enterprises Ltd. of Ottawa., has run extensive tests on 25 brands and models of vacuum cleaners sold in Canada with CSA approval.

He found that the CSA ampereratings stamped on all machines were up or down from actual power consumption by 10 to 35 per cent.

Old Folks Piling Up Beer Money

TORONTO (CP) — Pensioners in homes for the aged in Ontario apparently are not spending enough of their cigarettes and beer allowance, The Globe and Mail says.

The result is a multi-million dollar headache for municipalities and charitable organizations administering homes with almost 30,000 residents, the newspaper says.

This spending money, because it isn't spent by the senior citizens, is piling up in municipally-administrated trust funds, The Globe and Mail says.

Order Ignored

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario environment ministry said Wednesday it has had to hire a company to clean up an oil spill because the firm responsible for the pollution refused to clean it up.

Environment Minister James Auld said in a statement that Power Tankliners Ltd. ignored a ministerial cleanup order issued after 3,700 gallons of leaded gas polluted Lake Ontario shorelines.

Prices Freed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Cost of Living Council lifted most price controls Wednesday from petrochemical feed stocks, raw materials used mainly in the plastics, fibre and rubber industries.

The action was taken to head off growing shortages of the raw materials and to head off mounting job layoffs throughout the petrochemical industry, the government said.

Curbs End

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has withdrawn all guidelines aimed at restricting the export of capital, Finance Minister John Turner announced Wednesday.

The action followed the sudden lifting of United States restrictions on foreign investments by its citizens, with which Canada had co-operated in exchange for exemptions from the rules.

Big Award

HAMILTON (CP) — David Mackie, 23, of nearby Ospetown was awarded damages of $231,000 Wednesday in compensation for brain damage received in a head-on collision in January, 1972, that will mean he will never be able to work again.

OTTAWA (CP) — About 1,150 elementary teachers employed by the Ottawa board of education have rejected the latest pay offer of board negotiators.

Canada-Mexico Relations Warmer

MEXICO CITY (CP) — Relations between Canada and Mexico are "getting considerably warmer," says Charles Drury, president of the treasury, after a two-day conference in which officials of the two countries agreed on closer technical and trade co-operation.

The two countries established working groups to promote trade and travel between the them, the use of Canadian electrical equipment and technology in Mexico and perhaps eventually the location in Mexico of a nuclear reactor along the Canadian Candu design.

Currently, the Mexican government has selected the United States enriched uranium reactor for its next power project but Drury said Wednesday Mexico will need more plants and the Mexican authorities will look closely at Candu.

The communique issued at the completion of the two-day conference Tuesday said the Canadian ministers, which included External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp and Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie, stressed the advantages of natural uranium plants.

Drury said the Mexicans may also be in the market for Canadian long-range transmission equipment as well as technical aid.

Canada proposed a joint venture to produce railway passenger cars in Mexico "as well as the supply of locomotives, rail-

Controls End

BONN (Reuter) — The Bonn government lifted most of the country's capital import controls Wednesday and said other countries in the joint European currency float are planning to do the same.

The controls were imposed in 1971 and 1972 to ward off unwanted inflows of foreign currency when the mark was strong and the dollar weak.

way stock and rails from Canada under appropriate long-term financing arrangements, the communique said.

The two countries signed an agreement to end double taxation and the Canadians agreed to take another look at possible Canadian membership in the Organization of American States (OAS) though Sharp indicated the OAS may have to pay less attention to ideology and more to practical matters before Canada will consider full membership.

Gas Test Procedures 'Not Out of Ordinary'

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — Specifications and test procedures for the medical gas system of a new wing of the Sudbury General Hospital "did not appear out of the ordinary," an Ontario health ministry expert said Wednesday at an inquest into 23 deaths at the hospital.

Consulting engineer Adrian van den Kerkhof described the system as "quite normal and in keeping with the state of the art" at the time the specifications were drafted in 1971.

The wing began opening in stages last May, and the inquest is investigating deaths that occurred after patients were prescribed oxygen in some of its rooms between May and September. One of these deaths has been blamed definitely on the substitution of nitrous oxide for oxygen at a wall outlet from the central supply.

On the 13th day of the inquest—now the longest in Ontario history—Mr. van den Kerkhof apparently eliminated as a possible cause of death a draftsman's mistake in designating oxygen and nitrous oxide lines on contract drawings used by the installing crews.

"In the over-all documentation it's of insignificance, of minor consequences," he said under questioning by Crown Attorney John Takach.

Mr. van der Kerkhof is consultant engineer to the health ministry's institutional planning branch and rules on all documents for hospital construction.

A previous witness had indicated there might be later evidence that the installer—Comstock International Ltd.—claimed to have been misled by the incorrect labelling of lines on one section of the drawings.

However, the government engineer said these lines actually led to other parts of the emergency wing which were not affected by a cross-hyphen connection in the pipes.

Ian R. Edgecombe, who designed the gas system for the Toronto engineering firm of Reid, Crowther and Partners, called the designation error a "silly mistake" which should have been caught in checking the plans. But said it would not mislead an installer.

He would have expected the installing contractor to call for clarification, if necessary, but knew of no one in his office who had been approached about it.

Mr. Edgecombe also told the inquiry that during an inspection of the gas system in January, 1973, he had noted in his report that identification of the piping was "extremely minimal."

"I wonder what method the contractor (Comstock) was using to keep his lines straight," he said.

Under questioning by Comstock counsel John Morin, he said he did not know whether anyone in his firm followed up this report.

Later, Michael Queen, who was a Reid, Crowther supervisor on the project during part of 1972, said he found the pipe identification "pretty much the same as on any other hospital job."

R. P. Armstrong, counsel for Canadian Liquid Air Ltd., which supplied the gas at the hospital, noted during questioning that Mr. Queen now works for Comstock, and the witness said he joined that firm in a better job in 1973.

Richard Mallory, a civil engineer for Ellis-Don Ltd., the general contractor for the new wing, said he knew tests for the medical gas system were specified, but he signed takeover certificates without knowing if they had been conducted.

He said that in signing the takeover certificates he was indicating that the work at the hospital was "virtually complete."

Fiddlesticks

NEW YORK (AP) — The Archbishop of Canterbury, Michael Ramsey, said Wednesday there are genuine demonic powers in the world, but that a wave of claimed cases of possession by the devil is mostly "a lot of fiddlesticks."

"I regret it has been turned into a stunt," he said. "There's an element of superstition in it and an element of morbidity."

First Year in Office—'My Cup Of Tea'

By ISABEL HUGGAN

She and her family have had to make many adjustments in order to stay happy.

She has only one day a week — Sunday - - to call her own.

But Mayor Robin Jeffrey says that her past year in office has suited her perfectly.

"It's just my cup of tea," she says.

With a full nine-to-five daily schedule, and almost every evening taken up by committee work or social events, Mayor Jeffrey and her husband Roy and daughter Alison have had to re-arrange their lives since the days when she was more often at home.

"We share more tasks now," says Mayor Jeffrey," and there is less separation of male and female - - or adult and child - - roles."

Although a cleaning lady helps with the household chores once a week, the rest is left for the family to do.

She still does most of the meal-making, relying on quick foods like back bacon and chicken wings for fast suppers. But everyone helps with the dishes.

"I had thought I'd have time to prepare casseroles on weekends for use during the week," Mayor Jeffrey says, "but I don't even have time for that."

Organizing what time she does have comes easily to her now after her years as alderman and her previous years of teaching and office work. She is prepared to make the sacrifices that public life demands - - like never having time to read for relaxation.

"When I do read, it has to be political material, so that I can keep informed. Fortunately, I find this type of reading interesting - - but I miss getting into biographies."

There are other changes in her life the past year has made. For instance, she has had to extend her wardrobe considerably, now owning several formal gowns. Her daytime wear has not changed in any way since she became mayor - - "my style has always been slightly tailored and uncluttered by jewellery" — but she has had to buy more suits and jacket-dresses for public life.

"No I wouldn't wear pantsuits to work," she says, "but not because I think they're unfeminine. They 'just don't suit me. I'm too short!"

Nonetheless, Mayor Jeffrey says that her role at city hall requires daily make-up so that she looks her best for the public. Probably the only difference there is between a male and female mayor.

"I don't feel that I am treated differently because I'm a woman," she says. "No special favors and no unpleasant discrimination either."

She attributes this to her first few months as alderman, when she ran the gamlet of her fellow aldermen's taunts and jibes.

"I think they were surprised to find I didn't cry when they laughed at me, even more surprised to find that a woman was just as interested in roads and sewers as they were."

Since she gained respect for being a tough-minded politician, she has had no problems with prejudice at city hall.

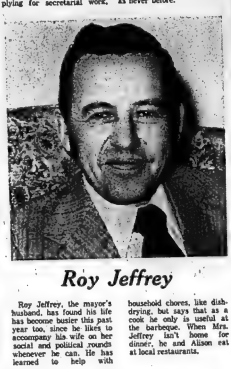
"Oh, I still get some preferential treatment now and again," she says with a smile. "After the last snowfall, one of the men helped me brush off my car. But ordinarily, I am absolutely equal.

"This is the first job I've had where I can say that I feel I am on a level footing with men."

Because the political field has been dominated by men for so long many women are hesitant to enter public office. But Mayor Jeffrey believes that if women have confidence in themselves, they are just as suited to politics.

"I would encourage any woman who has an interest in public work to seek a career in politics. Unfortunately, many women hold themselves back. We have no women department heads at city hall, simply because women don't apply for these positions. They keep on applying for secretarial work, when they are capable of greater responsibility.

"I hope that one of my functions as mayor has been to show by example that a woman is equal to the challenge of political life. Perhaps if women see that I am succeeding - - as I think I am from the support that the community is giving me - - they will be encouraged to run for office too."



Asked if she will run for office again, she says it is too soon to make a statement. But she declares that she's never been happier, that she feel she has found a job that suits her personality and talents.

"It's as if everything in my life led to this," she says. "I look forward to each day as never before."

Mayor Robin Jeffrey

Mayor Jeffrey enjoys a rare evening at home, where she likes to grow flowers, like these pink cyclamen. Although she has less time for hobbies such as raising flowers, she is perfectly happy in her busy life as mayor. She feels that this job is what she was meant for, that a chain of events through her life led her to the chain of office. "I thrive on challenge," she says.

Roy Jeffrey

Roy Jeffrey, the mayor's husband, has found his life has become busier this past year too, since he likes to accompany his wife on her social and political rounds whenever he can. He has learned to help with household chores, like dishdrying, but says that as a cook he only is useful at the barbeque. When Mrs. Jeffrey isn't home for dinner, he and Alison eat at local restaurants.

'We Believe in Equality'

Roy Jeffrey, or"Jeff" as his wife calls him, left the hockey game he was watching on television to talk about what it's like to be husband of a mayor.

If the roles were changed, the wife would be the "first lady", expected to do a lot of entertaining in the mayor's home.

"But this way, with Robin both mayor and wife, she doesn't have time to entertain at home. And in guy job, I'm very often travelling so that we aren't able to have people in for dinner or bridge, the way we'd like to."

Not seeing old friends as often is one of the pleasures the Jeffreys have had to give up. In fact, not seeing each other as much is one of the consequences of Mrs. Jeffrey's position.

However, Mr. Jeffrey says they've learned to live happily within this situation.

"I wouldn't want a wife waiting at home to cater to me anyway," he says with a laugh. "I'm a strong believer in equality."

Mr. Jeffrey has encouraged his wife all the way along her political career. Since he has an interest in politics himself, he has been able to help her issues through by discussion with him at home.

Giving her confidence to run for office was easy; seeing her criticized, much harder. But by now, both the Jeffreys have learned to handle the inevitable critics of the mayor.

"Constructive criticism can only be useful, and the other kind we've learned to forget."

In his role of husband, he is continually supportive of his wife's endeavors, and has no "second fiddle" complex at all.

"Perhaps because we both come from farm families where total equality between the sexes was accepted, neither of us feel that Robin being mayor has disturbed our equality.

Alison Jeffrey

Alison 12-year-old daughter of Roy and Robin Jeffrey is perfectly happy in her role of Roy and Robin Jeffrey, as "the mayor's kid". She says that the advantages to her present life are numerous such as the fact that her vocabulary has improved through greater contact and conversation with the adults she meets through her mother's office.

Get Free Rides

VICTORIA (CP) — Senior citizens have been offered free bus rides on three shopping days and children on one day during December. The municipal affairs department said the free transportation would help solve their Christmas shopping problems.

Salt Water Secret

Saskatoon (CP) — Two Vancouver dentists say more than 95 per cent of tooth decay can be eliminated without using toothpaste. Dr. Ken Neuman and Bud Sipko told the Saskatoon and District Dental Association almost all tooth decay can be stopped by using a correct soft-bristle toothbrush, lukewarm salt water and dental floss for 15 minutes daily.

'She's Still Just My Mom'

Being the mayor's daughter doesn't pose any difficulties for Alison, a poised young lady nearly 13 years old.

In fact, she think it's "pretty neat".

Sometime, early in her mother's term of office, her classmates at Queen Elizabeth School teased her. But by now, they seem to have forgotten about it.

"It might be a disadvantage for an only child who was shy or lonely by nature," says Alison, "since Mom has to be out a good deal. But I'm busy myself with skating and gymnastics after school. And I visit my friends across the street or my Grandma if I'm alone in the evening, if I've already homework to do."

Being in grade 8 means that Alison has a fair amount of studying to do, since she's trying to improve her marks in science, hoping eventually to be a veterinarian.

Her mother would encourage her to go into politics if she were interested, but at this point Alison doesn't think she'd like to be a mayor herself. "Too many speeches to write," she says.

"My Mom really enjoys working at city hall, though. And since she's happy, I'm happy."

"I have to help around the house more than I used to, but maybe that's just because I'm getting older, and being given more responsibility."

Alison says that what she likes best about being the mayor's daughter is the chance to meet interesting people, "like the Governor-General, and even Wayne and Shuster!" She enjoys talking to adults and thrives on the conversations she has with people at city hall. Like her mother, she "just likes people."

Fitness Testing Gears Exercise to Individual

TORONTO (CP) — It's like peppermint flavoring in medicine, if you need exercise, choose an exercise you consider fun and it's easier to take.

Don Payne of the YMCA says most of the people who need to increase exercise need it to improve the work of their cardiovascular systems.

"When you're working, you need oxygen in the muscles you're using. Good circulation is where the crunch is, and that's the work of the heart."

To keep it toned, Mr. Payne says he recommends running, swimming, cross-country skiing, bicycling.

Mr. Payne does fitness testing for the YMCA to help people determine whether they do need exercise, and what sort would benefit them most.

"We tell people, 'These are the things you can do'. We give them precautions about over-doing, suggest how to build in a progression. We suggest how to make exercise enjoyable.

"If you tell someone to exercise, that's fine, if he likes what you tell him to do. If you tell him to run and he doesn't like to run, that's no use to him. He may do it for a few weeks while he's gungho, but then he'll stop.

"A lot of sports haven't the benefit for the cardiovascular system that people think they should. In squash or tennis there's a big effort, then you stop, then another effort. The heart doesn't really get the sustained push it needs.

"If someone does need muscular endurance exercises, we say do a few a day.

"A few we can direct toward exercise groups. The social aspect seems to help people stick with it."

The Y's Toronto fitness testing began about two years ago. Mr. Payne says the number of people coming in on their own or referred by a doctor is increasing steadily. They do 15 tests a week, and he says they are booked a month ahead.

Similar testing programs are done in Ys in Montreal, Edmonton, Ottawa, Winnipeg, Hamilton.

Considerate Husbands Doing Selves A Favor

Dear Ann Landers: May I borrow the largest billboard in the world to get a message across to Mrs. Aretha?

Madame: Does your husband say, "Stay in bed, dear. Don't bother about getting up to fix breakfast. I'll get something downtown." Do you then brag to your neighbors and the bridge club how considerate he is? Well, I have news for you. Chances are better than even that he is thinking of himself.

Go into any Downtown restaurant before working hours and you will see dozens of men contentedly reading their newspapers, but with the fresh memory of tangled hair, puffy eyes, a rasty bathrobe and a pair of house slippers flopping around like two dead animals.

Who wants to face that? It's infinitely more pleasant to urge you to stay in bed while you enjoy your juice and coffee and Ann Landers downtown.—Bob S. of the Sunshine State

Dear Sunshine: I would win any beauty contests in the morning, but I still get up in time to have breakfast with my husband, and so far he hasn't suggested that I stay in bed. Besides, I like to be on hand when my children are awake. He's my severest critic!

Dear Ann Landers: Someone wrote to you recently and asked why in the face of the zooming marriage rate you didn't write more about marriage the way it really is for most people, minus the slapstick. The implication was that you were derelict in your duty. Unfortunately, too many kids come from homes where their parents are separated, divorced or their parents' marriage is nothing to brag about. They look to you for guidelines because they know you tell it like it is.

I was 18 and sure I was in love. I had already accepted a ring. After reading that booklet I realized I wasn't ready for marriage and the guy I was engaged to was even less ready than I was. When I told him how I felt he roughed me up and tore my blouse. He found another girl three weeks later.

Don't be bashful, Ann. Speak up—Grateful in Great Neck.

Dear G.: Me bashful! Since when!

Dear Ann Landers: That man who wrote in and said goats, both nannies and billies, who are well cared for don't smell must either be crazy or he smells like a goat himself and doesn't know the difference.

A few years back I was privileged to watch the changing of the guard at an old fort in Quebec. The mascot was a billy goat. A prettier animal would have been hard to find—lovely white hair, gilded horns and bowed. But it happened to be a stinky day and the spectators were downwind from the billy goat grounds. There was never any doubt as to what that animal was, especially to those of us who had been around goats before.

That expression "to smell like a goat" didn't get into the language by accident. The goat is well-earned and you'd better believe it.—Smiling Breeder

Dear Bonnie: O.K. You win by a nose. I'm a city girl myself, but my farm friends tell me you're right.

Women Engineers: a Little More to Prove

TORONTO (CP) — Anne McCusker, Veronica Herczeg and Brena Ladowski are engineers, part of an ever-growing band of women training for and getting good jobs in a formerly male-dominated field.

"There is no basic reason in terms of innate talent why women should be so underrepresented in engineering," said Bernard Leach, dean of the University of Toronto's mechanical and applied science and engineering.

To encourage more women to consider engineering, the faculty published in 1972 a small pamphlet, Women and Engineering, to distribute to Ontario high school career guidance departments.

According to its authors, 80 per cent of the more than 100 Canadian professional women seen in Ontario, the women can be found in almost any branch of engineering, including metallurgical, chemical, civil, electrical, engineering physics, metallurgical, industrial and mechanical.

Anne McCusker, 29, is a project manager for the Cadillac Development Corp. Ltd. She spends about half her time in her office at company headquarters.

The remainder is spent on the site.

A 1967 graduate in civil engineering from University of Adelaide in Australia, Miss McCusker was the only girl in a class of 180.

"I had a casual relationship with the guys in my class. I think they tended to look on me as a visitor—telling me about problems with their girl friends.

"But I was totally accepted and I find it hard to understand that people get upset about being a woman in a man's field."

She came to Canada in 1970 and worked for a consulting firm in Whitby, Ont. Nearly two years ago she answered an advertisement for her present job.

Brenda Ladowski, 26, graduated in chemical engineering at University of Toronto in 1968. There were four other women in her class.

"We were all just part of the group—not male or female. The only difference was in the chemistry lab where the men helped us carry heavy bottles of acid," she recalled.

Her first taste of job discrimination came when she began to attend university-sponsored job interviews.

One firm flatly said it didn't want women engineers. Another large firm said to Brenda: "You're a nice girl. I love Brenda's younger age. You don't want to be working in my dirty plant."

After graduating, she phoned Imperial Oil Ltd. to ask if they had a job opening. They said no but told her to come in for an interview anyway and three days later she was on staff as a market research her. She now is a financial analyst for Esso Chemical Canada.

"I have no complaints about my job. Any new person has something to prove. If you're a woman I guess you have a little more to prove because people don't expect to see you there."

Veronica Herczeg is senior structural engineer in the subway construction branch of the Toronto Transit Commission (TTC). She joined the TTC almost 17 years ago as a junior engineer—her first job after she, her husband and son fled here from Hungary in 1957.

Mrs. Herczeg graduated in engineering in Hungary in 1951 with nine other women in the class of 300.

"One day you know more than the others and you get promoted," she said.

Her job: designing subway structures and she often goes to the site to make sure everything is as planned.

In Europe, women engineers are more common, she said, and they have no worries about discrimination in the field.

She said that when interviewing engineering applicants to work for her, she sometimes feels "resentment" from older men and women.

"I very seldom meet men who are surprised that I am an engineer but I often meet women who say 'Whatever made you want to be an engineer It must be very difficult.'

This session's undergraduate program in University of Toronto engineering faculty totals 2,330 of which 56 are women.

Italian Libbers Face Long Hard Battle

ROME (Reuter) — After years of inactivity, the Italian women's liberation movement is taking off.

The first issue of Italy's slick, monthly feminist magazine Effe went on sale in November. Editor Adele Cambria says many newsstands, even in conservative southern Italy, reported being sold out within days.

In Maddalena Centre, Rome's first feminist bookshop, a day care shop, an underground theatre and the first editorial office, opened its doors in November.

The cream of Rome's intellectual establishment, including novelist Alberto Moravia, was on hand for the premiere of three one-act feminist plays in Rome in early December. Since then the plays have appeared before packed audiences nightly.

The 40 women of the Rome Feminist Collective are setting up a sex-education centre in a slum area as an experiment. Under Italian law, dissemination of birth control or abortion information is illegal.

Liviana Massaiani has set up an art centre, Les Bobines, where women artists can work "without having to depend on men." So far 20 artists have joined and hold exhibits of their work, poetry readings and playlets.

A Milan women's collective is organizing a feminist Christmas vacation tour to Paris.

Most important of all, say the Italian feminists, is the abortion legislation presented by Socialist deputy Loris Fortuna which is coming before parliament for debate.

Under the Fortuna bill, two doctors would have to sign a certificate authorizing an abortion, permitted when continuation of a pregnancy "could cause a risk to the life of the pregnant woman, or prejudice the physical or psychic health of the woman herself, more so than the interruption of the pregnancy itself."

Under the present penal code, promulgated in Mussolini days, abortion is a crime "against the integrity and the health of the species."

"We have already gathered 20,000 signatures for the abrogation of that bill," says Liliana Ingrao of the Movimento per la Liberazione della Donna, (MLD) the first women's lib group formed in Italy four years ago.

Because of the limitations on birth control information in Italy, control propagandists say that the nation has an exceptionally high rate of abortions. Statistics are hard to come by, but the figure is said to be as high as one million abortions a year—in a nation with a population of 57 million.

The road to liberation for Italian women is still long and hard, however. "Very few women here will take part in any demonstration," reported Eugenia Roccella, 20, of the MLD in Rome. "We ask them to get out and demonstrate, and they reply, 'It's easy for you, you always take such nice photographs in the newspapers'."

Anna Maria Oderisi, an assistant political science professor at the University of Rome, explains: "It's hard to be a feminist in Italy. It's the family pressures, including the economic ties that bind a fil when I cut my hair short. That shows which decade we're in around 1930s."

The old guard of women politicians dislike the feminists. "Feminism is an ugly word," said Nilde Jotti, longtime companion of the late Italian Communist party leader Palmiro Togliatti, and Italy's most prominent woman politician.

In a radio debate on career opportunities for women, housewives accused the telephone said they would not accept surgery by a woman doctor, no matter how expert. "I would be afraid that a woman surgeon would find from all the blood around," said one housewife.

Which Is More Important—Phone Call or Customer?

Dear Doris: I am a druggist. The clerk is out for her "coffee break". I am waiting on a customer; no other clerk on hand. Should I leave the customer I am waiting on (am at the cash register taking her money) and answer the phone, or let it ring ?

I know the M.D. is out of communication. So it is not the doctor. An explanation as to what you would do next would help me the next time. Dear Druggist: Since your customers have had to tide their time while one lone saleslerk takes a telephone order. Yet there are two ways this could be handled:

(1) Excuse yourself, answer the telephone and ask the person on the other end to wait while you finish serving a customer who is in the store. Then take the phone number of the one who is calling, promising to call back later.

(2) Just let the telephone ring and give precedence to the person who is right there. Hope that the telephoner will call back later.

Yet there must be some consideration for such a caller. After all, you are dealing in prescriptions and items that heal. It might just be that your telephone caller is in no physical state to come to the store and needs your help.

What do other readers think about this predicament? I expect we have all experienced it, either as the telephoner or as the customer right at hand. Dear Doris: Could you please give me some further advice on how to go about starting a day care centre? I need to know such things as the amount of room needed, how much to charge, and what kind of playthings to buy, etc.

Thank You.

Dear Thank You: If you are thinking about a Day Care Centre for children, government standards are set up and such matters are carefully inspected.

The amount of room you need depends on the number of children you plan to take and their ages. Naturally, how you plan to operate and the general type of service you have in mind.

Get in touch with your provincial Department of Community and Social Services in Toronto and ask for the Authority on the setting up of day care centres.

Dear Doris: Why is the mother-in-law always singled out as the villain? Are not the father-in-law, son-in-law and daughter-in-law at fault at times, too?

Mother-in Law

Dear Mother-in-Law: You are right. The mother-in-law image is often pretended in a negative light. It shouldn't be. Many inlaw relationships are wonderfully warm and warm.

When they aren't, it is rarely the fault of any person. All concerned need to exercise a little special effort so that the family can get along with as little friction as possible.

Mothers-and-daughters-in-law — yes, and fathers and sons-in-law, too should be tolerant, affectionate, practical, relaxed, never jealous or possessive. It's a tall order, but well worth striving for.

Spring Collections Open to Applause

ROME (AP) — Although stating nothing really new, Renato Balestra closed the first day of the Italian 1974 spring-summer fashion shows Tuesday night to a chorus of bravos.

His lineup of pastel gowns, some backless or with plunging necklines, painted with delicate floral prints and glittering with spangles, were reminiscent of 19th-century ballgowns.

But his bench outfits featured loud color clashes—purple, turquoise, hot pink, tangerine.

For day, Balestra made good use of geometric or abstract printed silk, in slate blues, white, yellows and greens.

He kept skirts an inch or so below the knee. His skirts were flared or top-pleated — and swingy.

Dresses and skirts had matching print or solid jackets, and long flowing scarves added a bold day and night wear.

He employed beads and sequins on his evening wear.

Black lace was extravagantly arrayed over a slim black crepe cocktail dress.

Sailor-type outfits, tunics over pleated skirts, gave a refreshing air.

San Lorenzo was one of the few houses to show trousers. She had several pants suits— wide, front-pleated trousers topped by shirt-type jackets.

Her coup, though, was slinky see-through evening gown in navy blue chiffon. The skirts swirled in red calf from the most transparent of little bodices.

Rabah Is New Outpost In Servicemen's Tales

By PETER BUCKLEY

RABAH, Occupied Sinai (CP) — Rabah doesn't show up on ordinary maps any more. Once a railway station, before the line from the Suez Canal to Gaza became a war casualty, it squats beside a two-lane road among the endlessly undulating sand dunes of the Sinai desert.

Even in midwinter, the temperature at noon is above 80 degrees and the air is bone dry, without a hint of the chill Mediterranean two miles north.

The rusting hulk of a trunk lies beside the driveway. A sturdy fence encloses a group of white-painted wooden huts and rows of khaki tents staked into the sand. The blue-and-white United Nations flag hangs from a spindly radio tower.

Rabah is another of those outposts—like Luluabourg in the Congo, Rafa in the Gaza Strip, Kyrenia in Cyprus—destined to become part of barracks-room memoirs for the Canadian Armed Forces because of UN peacekeeping duties.

For the 50-plus Canadians who provide communications here for other UN forces patrolling the Israeli-Arab ceasefire, Rabah is a place where small events and home-made comforts become important.

Sitting in a tent with a couple of Canadians, there is a soft boom followed by a sharp clap.

"An Israeli jet—that happens regularly twice a day," says WO. Rusty Toole of Calgary, and Master Cpl. Norman Wall of Kingston, Ont., looks up from stirring a pot of tinned stew on the naphta burner to add: "That's our excitement for the day."

It turns out, though, that there are others:

—An Israeli cargo plane which thunders past daily at tree-top level, carrying troops and supplies for the front at the Suez Canal, less than 30 miles to the west.

—The daily courtesy visit of the local Bedouin sheik—expected to have seven wives, 22 children and 300 scattered tribesmen under his sway—and the only non-UN person to walk unchallenged past the gate.

—The discovery of aircraft wreckage from the October war: one Egyptian wreck among the dunes, another shattered near a Bedouin village and an Israeli plane just offshore in the Mediterranean.

—A camel train nodding past on the horizon, a volleyball game with the Irish troops who share the encampment, the recovery of scrap lumber that can be used for shelves in somebody's tent, a trip to Jerusalem and the Holy Places on leave. . . .

For young Canadians, Rabah would seem to be a dead end. But they say they would rather be here than at the main Canadian camp in Cairo.

A group from Calgary gave some of the reasons.

"We're dutifully employed here and we're away from the centralization," explained Master Cpl. Guy Bernier, 30.

"We're just like a big family here, while in Cairo it's all military," Master Cpl. Jack Fullerton, 29, said. And 32-year-old Cpl. Paul Savoie added: "We've had to learn to cope with our lacks. It would take away something vital here if we hadn't had this experience together."

What they miss most are hot showers, regular army kitchens and other advantages that go with permanent quarters. Mail delivery too, has been a problem.

If the men in Rabah think Cairo is too big for comfort, there are some who say the same about Rabah. They are the four men in each of the two detachments based a few miles down a secondary road from Rabah, providing communications from Panamanian and Peruvian battalions back to headquarters.

The Panamanians are the best organized so far.

The Canadians stationed with them—Master Cpl. Al MacConnell, 32, Kingston; Cpl. Jack Perry, 34, Summerside, P.E.I.; Pte. Leo Larochelle, 23, Kingston, and 1 Douglas Blackstock, 20, Ottawa—were enthusiastic.

They share a double tent with one half for sleeping and the other for a common-room. They've dug a deep pit with a sandbagged entrance to provide cold storage for beer and soft drinks. The Panamanians supply them with food.

When not at work, the Canadians are drawn into Panamanian baseball games — where a home run can hit a camel standing on the sidelines—or are challenged at dominoes.

They also have a basin of water and a mirror outside the tent. Pte. Blackstock says he has seen four different kinds of desert birds coming to drink and bathe and quarrel with their reflections in the mirror.

The Peruvian base is just getting established. There's been little time for sports or birthdaits for the Canadians—Master Cpl. Ted Davidson, 30, Stratford, Ont.; Pte. Jim Lusk, 23, London, Ont.; Pte. Rejean Grenier, 20, Cap-de-la-Madeleine, Que., and Pte. Doug Soloid, 20, Halifax.

"We're getting comfortable," Davidson said. "Any place like this is what you make of it."

The afternoon air had become cool: When the sun set, five o'clock, it sucked both light and heat from the desert.

By the time the last of the Canadians turned in for the night, the temperature would be close to freezing and only the lucky ones with naphta space-heaters in their tents would not need Arctic sleeping-bags.

That's the kind of thing they may reminisce about later in the barracks.

Ready for Visitors

Pte. Douglas Blackstock, 20, of Ottawa smooths sand around a makeshift bird-bath set up by the Canadian detachment on UN ceasefire duty in Israeli-occupied Sinai Desert. The water in the dish and the shaving mirror have attracted several species of desert birds. (CP Photo)

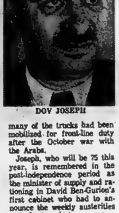
Montrealer in Israel Skeptical About Peace

JERUSALEM (CP) — Let others be taken in by Arab talk about peace with Israel. Dov Joseph won't be.

The former Montrealer's skepticism about Arab intentions is emphasized with verbal exclamation points in his expressive little mustache and thick eyebrows punctuate every comment and words like "poppycock" and "nonsense" are flicked out in a high-pitched voice.

"I know the Arabs' nature, their thinking, their behavioral patterns. I think I know them better than some of these "experts" in the foreign offices and state departments. I say this in all modesty. . . .

"People on the outside say, 'The Arabs are ready to talk with you.' But it really isn't true! They say Israel must be more flexible. What they really mean is, 'Why don't you surrender?' "



Dov Joseph's vehemence is not to be taken lightly. He was one of the central figures in the struggle for Israeli independence.

While he may no longer be an insider in Israel politics, the Dec. 31 general election showed that his hard-line views are shared by many—perhaps most—of his countrymen.

As he received a visitor in the memento-filled library of his substantial home in central Jerusalem, Joseph noted his lack of central heating. A small electric heater struggled to drive the chill from the room as a drenching winter rain fell outside.

"Having been responsible for rationing when the state of Israel began, I like to stick by the rules now," he said.

There was a 10-day delay for fuel delivery because still keeps in touch with political colleagues, Israelis at large are inclined to believe vaguely that he is fit or even dead.

In fact, Dov Joseph proved to be alert and peppery.

He is completely a book about modern Israel's first 25 years which, he says with relish, will displease some former colleagues with their memories. His retirement hasn't tempered his opinions about the Arabs.

Basically, he says, the Arabs are a desert people.

"I don't say this in a derogatory sense. But violence among such people is very, very easy and the desire for revenge is very strong. They can wait for 20 years without forgetting a slight."

And they are taught by the Koran that it is right to lie for a worthy cause, "such as the fight against Israel."

"This is not only a sad thing to contemplate. It is a serious thing for Israel.

"First Nasser, and now Sadat, have said they will destroy us. Naturally, they don't say this to foreign visitors, but it is in their press and on their radio—and we can read their press and listen to their radio."

Despite recognition from the rest of the world of the Jews' right to a homeland, Joseph said, "the Arabs have consistently refused to recognize our right to exist—which I think is one of the most contemptible attitudes possible between human beings. . . .

"They have 19 Arab states and control one-seventh of the world's land surface. We're not entitled to one little-corner!"

Born and raised in Montreal, Joseph came briefly to Palestine in 1918 to help the British end Turkish domination in the Middle East. He went back to Montreal to complete his legal studies as a McGill classmate of two future Liberal cabinet ministers, Brooke Claxton and Douglas Abbott. "I'm he accused for good in Jerusalem in 1921.

He became political and legal adviser to the powerful Jewish Agency for Palestine, bringing him into frequent contact with the highest levels of leadership throughout the Arab world.

In 1946, with developments at the United Nations propelling Israel toward independence, the Arabs laid siege to Jerusalem. Joseph was named governor of the city as essential services collapsed, supplies dwindled and Arab mortar and sniper fire raked the streets.

Ben-Gurion reported in his diary for May 23, 1948: "Dov Joseph is doing an excellent job. If there is any food at all, it is thanks to Dov Joseph."

"It was no easy job," Joseph said. "Their purpose was to starve us to death. . . .

"The people showed great fortitude and courage. And their patience! That was very surprising, for Jews. We are not as easy people to govern."

Nootka Craftsmen First on Vancouver

PORT ALBERNI, B.C. (CP) — Highly-skilled Nootka Indian craftsmen who fashioned razor-sharp microblades from quartz crystal in the Alberni Valley long before the first European explorers set foot on Vancouver Island in the 18th century.

That is one preliminary conclusion from the findings of an archeological excavation conducted last summer that turned up more than 2,500 artifacts, including 50 microblades, on a site across Alberni Inlet from this pulp mill community.

Some of the artifacts are believed to date back as much as 2,000 years.

"We are most excited about what we found," said Denis Ste. Claire, a Victoria school teacher-archeologist who headed the team which painstakingly excavated the two-acre site during a dig lasting 3½ months.

Mr. Ste. Claire said the discovery of so many microblades, most of them complete, was one of the outstanding features of the site.

The blades, forming precision cutting tools when assembled in hafts, are of quartz crystal with bevelled edges and look like glass.

It is believed to be the first time complete microblades have been unearthed at a former site of Nootka Indians, whose area once stretches from Vancouver Island to northwestern Washington state.

Mr. Ste. Claire said a high degree of skill, somewhat akin to that of a diamond cutter's, would have been required to produce the microblades by flaking or chipping the quartz.

From an archeologist's viewpoint, an exciting factor is that discovery of the blades is one indication that early residents of the area may have had a culture divergent from that of other Nootka areas.

A number of chipped stone points, which would have been used as arrowheads or spear points, also were found.

The microblades indicate that the site was abandoned long before the first Europeans arrived in the area. They were not in use when Captain James Cook first set foot on Vancouver Island in 1778.

Other indicators to the site long hundreds of years old are that the dig did not turn up age-large of trade goods such as beads or belt buckles that might have been brought

Tax Tips

Allowance Exempt

For further information, call the District Taxation Office. If you live in a toll area, ask your long-distance operator for ZENITH 0-4000 and your call will be placed without charge.

Q. My employer pays me an allowance to cover my board and room while I am working at distant work sites away from my ordinary place of residence where I support my wife and family. Previously, I was told that this had to be included in income for income tax purposes because I was not a construction worker. I understand that this no longer applies. Is this correct?

A. Yes. This exempting provision now applies to all workers employed at a distant work site providing they meet the other necessary conditions.

Q. I arrived in Canada in April of 1973 and I am told that I have to prorate my $100 standard deduction for medical fees and charitable donations when filing my income tax return. What does this mean?

A. As explained in the Guide which accompanies your tax return, you need report only the income you earned after you arrived in Canada. On the other hand, you are not entitled to claim personal exemptions and the standard deduction for the full year. For example, if you arrived in Canada on April 15 you would have resided here for 260 of the 365 days of 1973 and would be entitled to claim a standard deduction of 260/365 of $100 or $71.23 instead of $100. Your personal exemption would be calculated in a similar way.

Q. Do I have to get receipts for charitable donations?

A. Yes. You have to secure receipts for all claims for charitable donations. You may list your claim on the schedule provided with your income tax return, and you must attach the receipts to the return.

Q. Can a divorced woman claim the equivalent married exemption of $1,600 for a 13-year-old child (no income) in a mental institution, if she pays the expenses such as medical, clothing, etc.

A. No. The child would have to live with the taxpayer in the self-contained domestic establishment maintained by the taxpayer.

Q. I contribute, at my place of employment, to a pension plan. However, I want to have a larger pension when I retire. I have also taken out a retirement savings plan with a trust company. What is the maximum contribution that I can claim on my income tax form for both of them?

A. As an employee you are allowed to deduct your contributions to the pension plan and your registered retirement savings plan up to a combined total of $2,500 or 20 per cent of your earned income if it is less than $17,500.

Q. I am self-employed and I pay into a registered retirement savings plan with an insurance company. I have no salaried income and understand that I can claim for income tax purposes, a maximum of $4,000 for my retirement savings plan. Is this correct?

A. If you are not covered by an employee pension plan you would be entitled to claim amounts paid into a registered retirement savings plan up to $4,000, or 20 per cent of your earned income for the year, whichever is less.

Q. I understand that the employment expense deduction can be claimed to a maximum of $150. Can I still claim my union dues in addition to this claim?

Radiation Is Feared

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP) — Nanoose area residents have voiced concern about radiation leaks from nuclear-powered submarines or the danger of explosions from torpedoes' warheads.

United States nuclear submarines and crews are practising their skills in Canadian waters at Nanoose Bay, 20 miles north of Nanaimo in Vancouver Island.

During a tour of the area, Maj. Vic Keating, Pacific regional information officer for the Canadian Armed Forces, said the range was set up in 1962 as a joint Canadian-American venture under which Canada is responsible for the logistics and the United States for provision of technical equipment, training and range craft.

"There has never been a leak to date, to our knowledge, either in Canadian or U.S. waters," he said. Canadian regulations require a continuous monitoring for radiation leaks and no torpedoes tested at the range are armed with warheads.

One Last Look Before Winter Returns

Billy and Ronnie Ellis, aged 6 and 5, of Trenton, take a last look in the puddle that soon will become a skating rink if weather predictions are correct. After a week of comparatively balmy temperatures the mercury is forecast to dip to the zero mark tonight for the Quinte area.

Other Duties Interfere

Food Dispensing Outlets Not Regularly Inspected

Residential spread continues to fix upswing demand on health inspection service in Hastings and Prince Edward counties.

So much so, the service continues unable to meet suggested provincial government standards in food inspections.

Year-end statistics given the counties' health board by its chief inspector Lloyd Ellenton Wednesday indicate a long-standing situation still stands: Pressure on inspecting sewage waste systems reduces the time available for food inspections.

In 1973, inspections on septic systems jumped to 1,340 from 726 a year earlier, reported Mr. Ellenton. His inspectors were involved with 1,020 land severances -- compared to 815 in 1972.

There are about 600 premises dispensing food throughout the area—from stores to summer camps—and these have been visited by his staff.

Mr. Ellenton said his inspectors would like to visit eating establishments eight times a year, stores, and food factories four times a year.

But even this target is below provincial government suggestions.

"The province recommends we go in once a month," Mr. Ellenton said.

One problem facing his staff is that under present Ontario laws, there is no precise method of ascertaining when new food dispensing premises may come into operation.

Municipal permission systems could be a source of information.

Licensing is a matter of municipal regulation — and choice—but most smaller local governments don't have the necessary licensing bylaws, said Mr. Ellenton.

There also is an absence of land-use bylaws in some areas — a situation that is being tackled by official plan now under consideration in both counties.

Moira Student Carnival Queen

The weather yesterday may have not have been suited for a winter carnival but there was plenty of fun and excitement nonetheless.

Belleville's fifth annual Winter Carnival was officially opened last night at Centennial Secondary School by her worship, Mayor Robin Jeffrey. And 16-year-old Martha Bishop of Moira Secondary School reigns as the Winter Carnival queen for 1974.

But even before that the city's senior citizens celebrated with games of table shuffleboard and cards while a pot luck supper followed these activities at the recreation centre on Pinnacle Street.

The shuffleboard and games took the place of a sleigh ride which was to leave the recreation centre and head to Shannonville and back again. But mild weather with temperatures around the 46-degree mark forced a change in plans.

But the seniors had fun all the same, enthusiastically trying their best to win at shuffleboard and a few hours later after a hot luch supper they were kicking up their heels in an old fashioned square dance.

There was also an open ceribage and euchre tournament held at the Legion Hall.

But the most excitement of the opening day was the winter carnival queen competition at Centennial Secondary School.

A total of 13 young girls from 16 to 19 competed in the event, representing the RCI Albert College, OSD, Ontario Business College, Nicholson and Moira.

After judging was completed by members of the Trenton Kinsmen and Kinette clubs, Martha Bishop was chosen as 1974's Winter Carnival Queen. She sang If Had to be You in the talent competition and is a grade 13 student at Moira Secondary.

She was crowned by last year's queen, Sandy Sory, Kinsmen president, Doug Jackson presented the new queen with her ribbon. Sponsors of this event were the Kinsmen and Kinettes. Chairwoman was Kinette Kay Quirt.

Murray Cole of Coles' Jewellers presented Miss Bishop with her trophy.

First princess was 17-year-old Donna Stewart of the Ontario School for the Deaf. Second princess was Linda Lewis, 17, also a Moira student.

And even though some of the 13 contestants, as well as many who came to support them, couldn't hear the applause and sounds of excitement of the night, words and sound weren't necessary for everyone to have a good time.

Queen and Her Court

A 16-year-old student from Moira Secondary School, Martha Bishop, was crowned Winter Carnival Queen last night. The event was part of the opening day ceremonies at Centennial Secondary School. Flanking the queen are, left, first princess, Donna Stewart from OSD and her princess, Linda Lewis. The girls were chosen from 13 entrants who also had to participate in a talent competition.

Variety Store Robbed

Belleville police are investigating an armed robbery that occured at the Stoppette variety store on West College Street last night around 9:30 p.m.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said that his department received a call from the store's attendant, Mrs. Dorothy Smith, at 9:33 p.m. yesterday informing them that the robbery had taken place.

The police report said that Mrs. Smith had been working in the back of the store when she noticed a youth, estimated to be about 16 years-old, standing beside a coke machine in the front of the store.

The youth approached the front counter and when Mrs. Smith went there to wait on him he told her to open the till.

At first Mrs. Smith refused, police said, but complied with the command after the youth pulled a black metal pistol from his coat pocket.

The youth then grabbed an estimated $150, from the drawer of the cash register and ran onto the street. He was last seen running east along the south side of College Street West.

The robber has been described as being approximately five feet, five inches tall, weighing 110 pounds. He wore a three-quarter length brown coat and had a fair complexion.

Jean Smith Health Unit Chairman

A Belleville woman city councillor has succeeded a Picton-area lawyer as chairman of the Hastings-Prince Edward counties health unit board.

But Alderman Jean Smith and Reeve George Foster of Sophiasburgh township will be working closely on an immediate issue facing the board — contract negotiations with its nursing staff in both counties.

The new chairman and her predecessor were named Wednesday as the board's two-member negotiating committee with the nurses.

The issue is now scheduled for conciliation after a vote taken after two meetings between board and staff representatives were inconclusive, said Reeve Foster.

Alderman Smith was named chairman at the inaugural 1974 meeting of the board which also must find a secretary to replace Carl Bateman, Hastings County administrator.

Mr. Bateman in November informed the board of his intention to resign. He is currently recuperating from heart surgery and his place was taken at the inaugural meeting by his executive assistant, Bonnie Burleigh.

Aids for Deaf To Be Outlined

Services available to the deaf and their families will be outlined at the next meeting of the Quinte Association for Hearing-Handicapped Children The meeting will be held Feb. 6 at 8 p.m. in the Teacher Education Centre, Ontario School for the Deaf.

Herb Montgomery, a rehabilitation counsellor with the Canadian Hearing Society will discuss the services his society provides, including job opportunities and community colleges.

The public is invited.

Slow Learners Workshop Topic

A parents' workshop on learning disabilities will be offered Feb. 13 by the Quinte Chapter of the Association for Children with Learning Disabilities.

The workshop will be held at Bayside Secondary School at 8 p.m. Difficulties in visual perception, auditory preception and speech, motor skills and social development will be discussed. There will be displays and explanations and literature will be distributed.

Machines Loot

Officers at the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police are investigating a break, enter and theft that occurred during the night at Eastern Business Equipment and Supplies, 497 Dundas Street West, just outside the city limits.

Police said that thieves pushed a grocery cart, from the Towers Shopping Plaza across the street, through a plate glass window and entered the building and stole an undisclosed number of business machines.

The break-in occurred around 11:57 p.m.

The manager of Eastern Business Equipment estimated the value of the loot at eight foot broken window to be approximately $200.

Women in Charge

Women took administrative charge of the board at the inaugural meeting Wednesday in Belleville. City councillor Jean Smith, left, was named chairman of the year, and secretarial work is the responsibility of Bonnie Burleigh, executive assistant to Hastings county administrator Carl Bateman.

Fluoridation Program Planned for Counties

A program to supplement fluoridation in rural areas of Hastings and Prince Edward counties is being planned.

The counties' health board was informed of the project Wednesday by Dr. Donnia Warwick, its dental services director.

Full details of the program will be announced shortly when it is finally organized, said Dr. Warwick.

In its preliminary stages it requires testing of wells for fluoride content — more rural wells contain fluoride than cause of heart and blood vessel diseases. Foundation figures indicate 75 per cent of each donated dollar goes toward research. Only 11 per cent is for campaign and administrative expenses. The remainder goes toward education and community programs.

Statistics Canada figures reveal that heart-related diseases resulted in half of all deaths in 1971. Cancer accounted for a fifth of all deaths.,

Through research, funded by voluntary public donations, the foundation hopes to cut down on such figures. It also finances the spread of research results to professional personnel so that patients, in the end, benefit.

In 18 years, the Foundation has pumped more than $30.5 million into heart research.

Most is funded by the February campaign, the remainder is made up from bequests and memorial donations. In Belleville, $7,700 was collected through the door-to-door canvass in 1972 the remainder of the $11,700 was received by cheque.

Speaking of the campaign Belleville canvassers squeeze into the final 10 days of February, Mrs. Brain says, "The larger amount that we can raise by giving voluntarily, the less we have to be taxed. Either we do it voluntarily, or we get taxed to cover the expense of research. It has to be financed somehow. Dollars will have to do the research, and we have to pay for it."

Heart Fund Target $13,000 for City

It's no small sum, but it's no small problem.

With the start of February on Friday, volunteers across Canada will be canvassing homes for $5 million in funds needed to fight one of the country's largest killers — heart and blood vessel diseases.

Volunteers in Ontario have been made responsible for providing $2.3 million by the national organization, the Canadian Heart Foundation.

In Belleville and area, the objective for February — Heart Month — is $13,000 up from $11,900 in 1973.

"We think we should be able to get it this year," said Gwendolyn Brain, Heart Fund campaign chairman, yesterday. "People will give, whatever they can. People will give regardless of the objective. I'm not particularly concerned with it."

The chairman, who is heading the campaign for her third year, expects to have about 250 volunteers canvassing house-to-house (no business canvassing is done) in Belleville, Foxboro, Corbyville and the Elgwood Dr. area.

Add to Heart

Add to Heart take I

Although nationwide promotion of the work of the Canadian Heart Foundation will begin Feb. 1, local volunteers will make the big push for funds starting Feb. 18. The campaign begins with a celebration of Heart Sunday, Feb. 17, in all area churches.

Most of the funds collected in 1973 in the Belleville area went toward research into the

Quinte VD Rate Low

The incidence of venereal disease in Hastings and Prince Edward counties is among the lowest in Ontario — and to date appears stabilized.

Dr. C. R. Lenk, public health officer, told the counties' health board Wednesday the disease in the area "represents one of the smallest in numbers in the province — for some reason or other."

The incidence of gonorrhea was about 65 per 115,000 population in 1973, said Dr. Lenk. The provincial 1972 figure was 172 per 100,000 — and this year probably would be higher..

There was one case of active syphilis during the past years. The provincial average for 1972 was 39 per 100,000, said Dr. Lenk.

PECI Team Wins Again

Prince Edward Collegiate from Picton racked up another win last night on their way to winning the provincial championships of the school safety awareness competition.

The contest is sponsored by the Prince Edward-Hastings section of the Industrial Accident Prevention Association.

Prince Edward took a strong lead over Sydenham High School from the Kingston area in the first half of the competition which involves testing the students' knowledge of safety in all its forms.

With Prince Edward ahead 115-65 over Sydenham in the first half, both teams scored 75 points in the second half to make the final score 190-140 for Prince Edward in his inter-section championship competition.

Prince Edward Collegiate nowgoes on to the divisional championships in Peterborough, February 16. The Picton school defeated Trenton High School in the section championship held earlier this month. Sydenham was the winner of the Napanee-Kingston-Gananoque contest.

Members of the winning team from Picton were Eric Graham, Lee Foster, Don Leslie and Herb Pfiwtschka. Coach was Ray Coostrey.

Making up the Sydenham team were Bill Day, Raymond Clark, Brian Nolan and Kevin Kiley. Coaches were Bob Simpson and Phil Heggery.

Last night's competition was held in the television studios of Loyalist Colegef.

$50 Phony

Another counterfeit $50 bill has turned up in Belleville.

Police report that an attendant at Art's Esso Service Station, 156 North Front Street, received the bill, bearing the serial number B-H 4097708 yesterday afternoon.

The man who gave the attendant the bill was described as being a white male of about 35 to 40 years of age. He was driving a late model blue Oldsmobile with Quebec licence plates.

The counterfeit bill was slightly of shade from the legal tender, Police Chief Crosbie said.

Nixon Coming

Leader of the Ontario Liberal party, Robert Nixon, will be in Belleville Thursday to address the annual district 19 meeting of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation at the Legion Hall. The dinner will be preceded by a social gathering at the Four Seasons Hotel for members of the district executive and Mr. Nixon. District 19 of OSSTF comprises Hastings, Prince Edward and Lennox and Addington counties.

Body English

Shuffleboard is a game that requires a lot of body English. How else can you get those rocks to do what you want them to do without the necessary coaxing and pleading. Vernice Tryan, left, has a look of surprise as the rock she has just throwncomes close to the target. Looking on are her fellow players Ina Robinson, middle and Zella Perry. The event was part of the winter carnival activities for senior citizens taking place at the recreation centre on Pinnacle Street.

Russ Prior, Bev Boys Add Golds

World Record Falls to Wendy Cook

CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z. (CP) — Backstroker Wendy Cook of Vancouver, who had been flirting with world records all week, finally broke one at the Commonwealth Games today.

Swimming the opening leg of the 400-metre medley relay, the 17-year-old high school student covered the 100 metres in one minute 4.78 seconds to wipe out the mark of 1:04.89 set by Ulrike Richter of East Germany last October in the world championships at Belgrade.

Miss Cook's feat spurred the Canadians to victory in the relay, giving her a second gold medal to go with the one she earned individually over the same distance Wednesday.

It was the 20th Canadian gold medal of the Games, equalling the previous high achieved by Canada in the inaugural Games of 1930.

The other two Canadian gold medallists of the day were old hands at the game. Bev Boys of Pickering, Ont., retained the women's tower diving championship she won at Edinburgh four years ago and Russ Prior of Hamilton was a repeat winner in weightlifting.

Another defending champion lost his title when Punch Gunalan of Malaysia, a beaten quarter-finalist four years ago, decisively defeated Jamie Pasion of Toronto in the final of the badminton men's singles.

Eng'and, which had already clinched the other four badminton golds by putting two finalists in each event, won a total of 10 of the day's events, underlining the Australia-Canada battle at the top of the table into a three-way contest.

Australia was still the leader with 23 to Canada's 20 and England's 19.

The English closed the gap by sweeping three cycling races, the men's 4,000-metre singles, the marathon and the women's 100-metre hurdles.

Don Wagstaff of Australia completed his second consecutive diving sweep by adding the tower championship to the springboard title he won Monday. Scott Cranham, the Canadian resident of Grand Rapids, Mich., who was silver medallist in the springboard, added a bronze.

The medley relay result was solace for two consecutive Australia-Canada contests in the pool in which the Aussies barely edged out their opponents.

Two Australians and three Canadians broke the old Games record in the women's 200-metre butterfly with Auste Sendra Yost touching just ahead of Patti Stenhouse of Surrey, B.C., the gold medallist at 2:20.87 for Miss Yost and 2:20.88 for Miss Stenhouse.

Gail Neall of Australia was the bronze medallist in 2:21.66, followed by Leslie Cliff of Vancouver in 2:22.10 and France Letendresse of Pointe Claire, Que., in 2:24.32.

The old mark, set in 1970 by Maren Robinson of Australia, was 2:24.87. ●

Lynn Expects Battle From Friendly Rival

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — Lynn Nightingale says she has two problems—one is the figure segment of the senior women's figure-skating championship and the other is longtime rival Barbara Terpenning of North Vancouver.

"I'm going to have trouble in figures . . . and Barbara is going to be tough to beat," says the 19-year-old Ottawa skater, who, along with Miss Terpenning, is seeking her first senior women's title here at the Canadian figure-skating championships.

Miss Nightingale, the odds-on favorite in the senior women's event, has come a long way from her third-place finish at last year's Canadian Games.

"I have better titude now . . . and I know I can do better. If I make it to the world championships it will be tough," she says.

Miss Nightingale finished first late last year at Skate Canada, Canada's first international figure-skating event. But she finished seventh in the figure segment of the three-part event.

She battled back in the free-skate segment, turning in a brilliant acrobatic performance.

Miss Nightingale and Miss Terpenning take part today in the opening figure round of the senior women's event. The compulsory free-skate event is scheduled for Friday and the free skate, the highlight of all events, is Saturday.

In opening competition Wednesday, Sharon Bailey and Michael de la Peniere, both of St. Thomas, Ont., won the novice dance final.

The young couple were picked first by six of the seven judges to win the competition with nine ordinals and 84.9 points.

Dawn Nairn and Robert Heighington, both of Toronto, finished second with 15 ordinals and 80.2 points.

Ordinals are place ratings by judges. The lowest total is best.

Janet and Mark Hominuke of Calgary won the novice pairs event by one-tenth of a point. The brother-and-sister team squeezed by Brenda Bridgeman and Rick Petit, both of Cambridge, Ont., 82.2 to 82.1.

Both teams received 19 ordinals.

The husband-and-wife team of Louise and Barry Soper of Vancouver, who are seeking their fourth senior dance title, took a strong lead Wednesday night over Barbara Berezowenki of Toronto and David Porter of Port Perry, Ont.

The Sopers received seven ordinals and 45.08 points in the first segment of the three-part event, while the Berezowski-Porter team had 14 ordinals and 43.16 points.

The event continues today.

since last year's final in Vancouver. He finished second to Cranston last year.

Kelly Hume of Toronto was pushed to hospital Wednesday after being injured during a junior pairs practice session.

Miss Hume, 15, received a deep cut in the left leg after she and partner Doug Ogrodnick of Port Perry, Ont., collided with an unidentified pair during practising at the same time.

Former world figure-skating champion Don Jackson said the couple was favored to take the junior pairs event.

More than 140 skaters are taking part in the 63rd annual championships that will decide Canada's representatives at the world championships in March in Ich. West Germany, March 5-10.

The final is broken down into four events—women's, men's, pairs and dance. Each event is divided into three categories—senior, junior and novice.

Canucks in Upset Over Red Wings

By GLENN COLE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Almost everything went as expected in the National Hockey League Wednesday night.

New York Rangers downed Pittsburgh Penguins 4-3 and St. Louis Blues defeated California 6-4, the Golden Seals' 28th loss in 37 games on the road.

The only surprise came when Vancouver Canucks thrashed the Red Wings 7-3 in Detroit.

The Canucks can add the win to their nine losses and one tie in Detroit since joining the league in 1970.

Vancouver, last in the East Division, had a 2-0 first-period lead and put four goals past starting goalie Bill McKenzie in the second.

Jim Rutherford, acquired from Pittsburgh in a trade from month, replaced McKenzie in the final 20 minutes and allowed one goal—Bobby Schmautz's second of the game and 26th of the season.

Don Tannahill, John Gould, Gerry O'Flaherty, Andre Boudrias and Dave Dunn got the other Vancouver goals. Nick Libett, Guy Charron and Red Berenson replied for the Wings.

Rangers 4 Penguins 2

The Penguins played without defenceman Dave Burrows who suffered a partial shoulder separation and torn muscles in his left arm playing for the West team in the league's all-star clash Tuesday night.

Still, Pittsburgh, seventh in the NHL West, stayed even with New York, third in the East, until 9:46 of the third period when Brad Park drilled a 35-foot shot past Penguin's goalie Andy Brown during a New York power play.

Ted Irvine and Rod Seiling had put the Rangers ahead 2-0 in the second period before Jean Pronovost and Lowell MacDonald tied the game.

Jean Ratelle got an insurance goal for New York with a little more than minutes left in the third period.

Blues 6 Golden Seals 4

Garry Unger, voted the most valuable player in Tuesday's all-star game, registered his third three-goal game of the season as St. Louis snapped a three-game winless streak at home.

Pierre Plante, John Wright and Wayne Merrick were the other marksmen for the Blues, who peppered 49 shots at Seals' netminder Gilles Meloche.

Craig Patrick with two, Gary Croteau and Walt McKechnie were the goal getters for the Seals, who now have gone 11 games without a win.

They will try and snap that streak tonight when they visit the Black Hawks in Chicago. In other games, Toronto Maple Leafs are at home to Minnesota North Stars, Los Angeles Kings play host to New York Islanders, Atlanta Flames travel to Boston to meet the Bruins and Buffalo Sabres visit Philadelphia Flyers.

Brad Park—35-footer Wins It

Unionville And Toronto Undefeated

LINDSAY, Ont. (CP) — Peggy Lawrie of Unionville and Toronto Donalda's Alice Evans remained the only undefeated rinks after the third round Wednesday of the Southern Ontario senior women's curling championship and will meet today in the fourth round of the double knockout tournament.

Unionville edged Alice Holt of St. Catharines 7-6 Wednesday and Donalda dumped Harriett Hewitt of Orillia 15-6.

In other third-round play, Marg Schmidt of Kitchener-Waterloo swamped Laurie Gusti of Dundas 14-5, eliminating Dundas. Bea Leet of Brampton eliminated Jane Boles of Toronto Cricket 9-8; Winton's Mary Searle beat Maxine Martin of Goderich 8-7, knocking out Goderich; and Joyce Black of Oshawa downed Kate Hume 9-2, eliminating the Leamington rink.

In other games today, Kitchener-Waterloo meets Winston, Brampton faces Oshawa and Orillia takes on Catharines.

ALL-STAR AGGRAVATIONS

PITTSBURGH (CP) — Dave Burrows, Pittsburgh Penguins defenceman, will be lost to the club a minimum of 10 days after he suffered a partial shoulder separation and torn muscles in his left arm while competing in the first National Hockey League all-star game Tuesday night at Chicago. Burrows' West team beat the East squad 6-4 in the 27th annual contest.

Cougars Improve Playoff Chances

By THE CANADIAN PRESS.

The opposition wore the lemon-colored uniforms but the Vancouver Blazers came up with the sour performance Wednesday night, as Chicago Cougars increased their World Hockey Association playoff chances by doubling the score on the Blazers, 4-2.

In the night's only other game, Houston Aeros battled Cleveland fans as well as the Crusaders as they were bombed 5-1.

The Blazers took penalties when they shouldn't have as they went down to their fourth straight defeat, before a crowd of 9,422 in the Vancouver Coliseum.

The Cougars got goals from Bob Liddington, Rod Sain, Reg Fleming and Ralph Backstrom, who scored into an empty net with 10 seconds left in the game.

Mike Chernoff and Bryan Campbell got the Vancouver goals.

The Cougars lost forward Bobby Whitlock just 49 seconds into the second period. He took a tripping penalty and a misconduct, then shoved referee Bob Kolart and was handed a match misconduct.

In Cleveland, Houston coach Bill Dineen and winger Gordie Howe changed into the stands late in the second period, chasing a fan who had shouted an insult.

One witness said the remark included a reference to "bush leaguers."

"I've never done anything like that before," Dineen said later. "His guy became too abusive."

On the ice, two first-period goals by Ray Clearwater were all the Crusaders needed. Other Cleveland goals came from Russ Walker, Paul Andrea and Jim Watson.

It was 3-0 before Murray Hall ended the night's scoring with a Houston goal at 16:04 of the second period.

The victory in Vancouver was a key one for Chicago, which escaped last place in the Eastern Division and now trails fourth-place Quebec by only four points in a battle for the last playoff spot.

ROBINSON — In loving memory of our dear husband, father and grandfather, Harry Robinson, who passed away Jan. 31, 1969.

God has her in His keeping, We have her in our hearts.
—Lovingly remembered and loved by Mona, Eleanor, Nieces and nephew Alva and Robert.

ROBINSON — In loving memory of our dear father, who passed away Jan. 31st, 1973.

Though we cannot see you, We know you are near.
Always missed, loved, and very dear.
—Lovingly remembered, Dad and Mom.

ROBINSON, Gary — In loving memory of a dear brother who passed away January 31, 1973.
There is nothing so treasured nor so much to prize,
As the love that a brother and sister can share,
Through joy and true laughter, Through sorrow and tears.
Through smiles and closeness, That grows through the years.
The love that they share, Is a treasure so rare,
It's a wonderful thing indeed,
That can never be broken, It has a very special bond,
Dear Gary when I lost you, God broke that bond and gave her custody, Cheryl.

ROBINSON — In loving memory of our dear brother and uncle, Gary Robinson who passed away January 31, 1973.
Though his smile is now forever still,
And his hand we cannot touch,
Still his memory we treasure,
And the love we have so much.
His memory is our keepsake,
With which we'll never part,
God has him in His keeping,
We have him in our hearts.
—Lovingly remembered and sadly missed, Geoff, Donna and Julie.

ROBINSON — In memory of our dear brother and uncle, Gary, who passed away January 31, 1973.
Times we feel most deeply,
Are not those we show,
But those hidden, we bring to you,
In a very special way.
If we could have lifetime wish,
One dream that could come true,
We'd have you for a year,
Not for
For yesterday and you,
—Always loved and deeply missed, Greg and Pam.

Guelph Spring Festival Residue of Centennial

TORONTO (CP) — The Guelph Spring Festival is one of the few residues of Canada's Centennial celebrations in 1967. But as it prepares for its seventh anniversary in late April and early May, it is clear that the festival has become not only the most significant musical event in Canada, but also has succeeded in providing a platform from which Canadian musicians can perform alongside the world's best.

The balance of international and home-grown talent has been, in essence, the reason behind the success of the festival, says its artistic director Nicholas Goldschmidt. Over the years the festival has given Canadian musicians and Canadian works a rare opportunity "to show their mettle," he said.

Since the last war, Goldschmidt has been one of the major forces behind opera in Canada and has artistic direction of several Canadian opera companies from fragile beginnings to international status.

Goldschmidt, with $4 million to play with, organized Festival Canada, the performing arts festivities of Canada's Centennial, and following the success of many of these musical events that turned out the country, put together the first Guelph Spring Festival at the invitation of the Edward Johnson Music Foundation in 1966.

As Dr. M. H. M. MacKinnon, president of the foundation, said, the concept of the Guelph Spring Festival is to preserve the idea of a music festival in Canada."

However, Dr. MacKinnon said, the Guelph festival had its beginnings much earlier. Its seeds were sown in 1939 when the Guelph Music Festival Association was formed out of the Presto Club, a local body whose membership included many distinguished musicians at the time.

Edward Johnson, the great operatic tenor who was born in Guelph, gave active support to the idea of establishing a permanent music base in the city where festivals would be held every year to give promising young musicians a chance of recognition, backed by scholarships from interested businessmen.

In 1939, Johnson gave a concert performance which was to become the forerunner of the spring festival concerts. But the years of the Depression hampered the development of his idea until 1958 when the foundation under his name was established which, 10 years later, initiated the festival.

Today, the festival stands as a creditable achievement to both Johnson and Gold Smith who, in fashioned its development over the years into a major national and international event of the performing musical arts.

The impact on Canadian music has been significant.

Since the festival's inauguration, 12 new works by Canadian composers have been commissioned. One of this year's highlights is a composition for violin by Harry Somers. It will be played by Yehudi Menuhin.

Among the Canadian musical groups performing at the 1974 festival will be the Toronto Mendelssohn Choir and the Orford Quartet. A performance by the Toronto Dance Theatre and a recital by the National Arts Centre Orchestra, with Mario Bernardi as conductor and piano soloist, will also be featured.

For the youngsters, there is a Canadian Puppet Festival, including the Pinocchio story, and a Film Festival of Laughter featuring some of the classics of Buster Keaton, Charlie Quinte and the Marx Brothers, among others.

All this alongside the Yehudi Menuhin concerts and three performances of the Rape of Lucretia with Jon Vickers, the internationally renowned Canadian-born heldentenor leading all Canadian cast directed by Colin Graham, best known for his brilliant work with the English Opera Group, Sadler's Wells and Covent Garden.

While the budget for the Guelph Spring Festival has risen from $21,000 for the first year to $100,000 for the 1974 presentation, the influence of festival made its debut along the lines of the Guelph festival and in other parts of the province, long-abandoned opera houses are being refurbished in an effort to promote the rising popularity of the performing arts which Guelph has sparked.

But Goldschmidt, born in Czechoslovakia of Belgian and Austrian parents and a resident of the Victoria State Academy, is not blind to the development of more contemporary and popular music. Previous Guelph festivals have included pop singers and at one Ravi Shankar gave a sitar performance.

"I would have taken the Beatles if our budget permitted even esoteric programs had been big enough," he said.

Epidemic Worsens

ATLANTA (CP) — Gonorrhea, already an epidemic in the United States, may prove even more serious when 1973 statistics are compiled, says Dr. J. D. Miller of the Centre for Disease Control. Last year, there were at least 2.5 million cases and indications are that there could be almost 3 million in 1973, he said. There were fewer than 250,000 reported cases in 1956 as a steady climb upward began.

Jakarta Fun Palace Underway

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Few promoters in their wildest dreams could have come up with anything like the multimillion-dollar Garden of Fantasies that is rising on the shores of Jakarta harbor.

In size, scope and cost, it will be the biggest, brassiest and weirdest fun palace in the East.

Built on 338 acres along the shores of Tanjong Priok, about four miles from downtown Jakarta, Jaya Ancol, as it is known in Indonesian, will have everything from hamburgers to jai alai.

Planned, built or under construction are: a 4,000-seat jai alai stadium; a 40-lane bowling center; an 850-seat drive-in movie theatre; a motor racing circuit; a 18-hole golf course; a swimming pool with man-made waves for surf-riding; a 25-pool aquarium and a 2,000-seat oceanarium; a yacht club; a re-run of a massive pirates steam baths, bars, casinos and all-night restaurants; trade fair and children's amusement park.

The total cost is a secret between Lt.Gen. Ali Sadikin, governor of Jakarta and one of the main movers, and the investment. One hint, once a mangrove swamp, belongs to the Jakarta development corp.

The aquarium alone will cost 16 million. Its huge 10 salt-water and 18 fresh-water pools will contain a complete collection of Indonesian marine flora and fauna.

Modern apartment blocks, supermarkets and a 320-room hotel are planned. At the western end, adjoining the Jakarta docks, a 100-acre industrial estate and a boning project are under construction.

A waterline graveyard of Dutch and Indonesian soldiers killed by Japanese will be moved to make room for the amusement centre.

Indonesia is after the tourist dollar and the Garden of Fantasies is expected to be a reality by June, 1974, when some 2-000 travel agents invade Jakarta for their Pacific Area Travel Association conference.

Theatre Managers To Select Best

TORONTO: "For outstanding achievement as a Canadian theatre manager..." Food Prices Are Expected To Level Off for Summer

By JEAN SHARP
CP Women's Editor

Experts are predicting a leveling off of food prices by summer and a drop in beef prices in February.

Federal government farm economists have released an economic report that says a majority of most farm products in Canada should catch up with demand and stabilize food prices.

But for the next five months, the 17-per-cent rise in food costs built up since this time last year will continue to climb.

Charles Gracey of the Canadian Cattlemen's association has said there is already a backlog of cattle on feed lots. He says operators probably have been trying to fill up their pens, which are relatively low. But he says they expect to sell forever, and prices should show a slight drop.

A survey by the Canadian Press of food prices in 10 cities indicates a trend of what would be welcome. Prices in most cities have shown a downward upward. The price of sugar has gone up sharply in most areas and coffee prices are also up in several cities.

The survey is not intended to compare prices among cities.

It is based on a market basket of 17, common items bought in supermarkets. For the first survey, in May, the lowest regular price was taken for an item in each category, each month the same item or the nearest comparable item is priced for comparison.

The basket includes one pound each of sirloin-tip roast of beef, all-beef wieners, centre-cut loin roast of pork, fresh-grade chicken, ground chuck, frozen cod fillets, tomatoes, frozen green peas, McIntosh apples, first-grade butter, and coffee.

It also includes one dozen medium eggs, one quarter whole milk, 24-ounce loaf sliced white bread, 10 pounds of first grade potatoes, 24-ounce can first-grade halved pears, five pounds white granulated sugar.

TORONTO—Almost everything rose. Chicken cost 69 cents in December, 75 cents a pound in January. A pound of ground chuck moved to $1.32 from $1.22, frozen cod to $1.14 from $1.06, and bread, to 43 cents from 39. Market basket total: $14.50.

REGINA—Sugar increased in January to $1.29 for five pounds from 95 cents in December. Wieners rose to $1.07 a pound from 99 cents and ground chuck was up 10 cents to $1.28. Coffee rose to $1.09 a pound from $1.02. Only chickens showed much of a drop, to 69 cents a pound from 78 cents. Market basket total $14.98.

VANCOUVER—Sugar in Vancouver rose to $1.29 for five pounds from 83 cents in a month. Coffee was $1.13 a pound in December, but rose to $1.19 in January. Ground chuck went up 20 cents to $1.19 a pound and frozen cod rose to $1.35 a pound from $1.29. Market basket total:$14.83.

EDMONTON—Two items dropped in price. Wieners were $1.05 a pound in December, 99 cents in January. Chicken dropped to 79 cents from 82. A pound of ground chuck moved up to $1.05 a pound from 99 cents, and frozen cod to $1.25 from $1.20. Sugar rose 40 cents, to $1.35 for five pounds in January from 95 cents in December. Market basket total: $14.62.

MONTREAL—Both coffee and sugar showed sharp price increases in a month. Coffee, at $1.17 a pound in December, was $1.31 in January. Five pounds of sugar went to $1.14 from $1.05. Bread was up two cents to 3 cents. Weiners, which cost $1.06 in December, were $1.15 a month later. The price of frozen cod dropped to 88 cents a pound from $1.05 and eggs 78 cents a dozen from 86. Market basket total: $14.98.

CHARLOTTETOWN—Sugar rose to $1.35 in January from $1.06 for five pounds in December. While some prices did not change, ground chuck went up to $1.38 from $1.29 a pound, frozen cod rose to $1.25 from 99 cents and wieners dropped to 99 cents from $1.05. Market basket total was $15.94.

CBC Accenting Youth

OTTAWA (CP) — A shuffle in top management of the English services division of the CBC announced last week is intended to put younger blood in command, says a CBC headquarter information.

The shuffle, to take effect of April 1, replaces Eugene Hallman, 53, with Don MacPherson, 41, as vice-president and general manager of the English radio and TV services. It also brings Denis Harvey, 44, from Montreal as deputy assistant general manager from the post of chief television news editor.

Mr. Hallman, who has been head of the English Services for almost five years, is expected to retire later this year after 25 years' service.

The moves were announced as the CBC prepares to go before the Canadian Radio-Television Commission (CRTC) next month to seek a five-year renewal of all its radio and TV broadcasting licenses. But a spokesman for the corporation said the shuffle is not likely to be discussed before the CRTC since the regulatory body generally steers clear of internal management questions.

Mr. MacPherson has been director of television in the Toronto region since 1971, and is a former film director and producer. He also was director of public affairs for the CTV Network, which now has been bought by the CBC and by the Global Television Network as the CBC's competition.

Mr. Harvey, a former newspaper executive editor became chief editor of CBC-TV news a year ago.

None of the principals in the executive shuffle would comment on the switching roles.

The posts involved are senior to the two main operating branches of CBC hierarchy, which remain headed by Knowlton Nash in news and information programs and by Thom Benson in entertainment programs.

NFL Teams Draft Jackson, Harvey And Munroe Eley

NEW YORK (AP) — The 26 National Football League clubs were staggering through the 17th and final round of their two-day draft.

The top prospects were long gone and it was the perfect time for a little paternal pride.

But Washington owner George Allen, who shuns most draft choices for proven veterans, handed off his quarterback son, George Jr. of Virginia, to Baltimore.

Allen swapped his final 1974 choice and running back George Nock to the Colts for guard Covey Johnson and Baltimore's final choice in the 1975 draft.

On Tuesday, Washington bargained three draft picks to San Diego for guard Walt Sweney.

Then Allen struck three times Wednesday, swapping a ninth-round choice to Los Angeles for wide receiver Joe Sweet, and a 13th-round pick to Baltimore for linebacker Ed Mooney, before completing his final-round swap with the Colts. Allen finished the draft with only 11 picks.

Among the draft picks were Edmonton native Bill Stevenson and three Canadian Football League players—Munroe Eley, John Harvey and Noah Jackson.

By Mrs. Richard Alden Knight

The schedule of Solunar Periods, as printed below, has been taken from Mrs. Richard Alden Knight's Solunar Tables. Plan your days so that you will be fishing in good territory or hunting in good cover during these times, if you wish to find the best sport that each day has to offer.

The Major Periods are shown in boldface type. These begin at the times shown and last for an hour and a half or two hours thereafter. The Minor Periods are shown in regular type, are of somewhat shorter duration.

The Eastern Standard Time.

February 2 - 10.

Day	Minor	Major	Minor	Major

Saturday	7.25	1.35	7.45	2.05
Sunday	8.20	2.30	8.40	2.55

A six-foot five-inch defensive tackle at Drake University, Stevenson was picked by Miami with the fifth round.

The 200-pounder is one of two Edmonton-area players exempted from the Canadian college draft, Edmonton Eskimos' own CFL rights to his services.

Eley, Harvey and Jackson became eligible when their college classes graduated.

Eley, a running back with British Columbia Lions, was taken in the fifth round by Atlanta Falcons. In the seventh round Los Angeles Rams chose Harvey, a running back for Montreal Alouettes, and Baltimore Colts claimed Jackson, a guard for Toronto Argonauts.

The draft dragged through 32 hours and six minutes with 442 players chosen. The new World Football League's six-round draft took less than two hours last week.

Three of the players picked in the first round — Wake Forest's Kermit Johnson of Southern California, Ken Ellis of Mississippi and Kermit Johnson of Southern California, Ken Ellis of Mississippi and UCLA and offensive tackle Booker Brown of USC, were signed by clubs of the NFL's grab bag by the new league's Southern California club, but that didn't scare off the NFL.

McAllister went to Oakland and Brown to Houston in the sixth round and San Francisco took Johnson on the seventh round.

Art Johnson, assistant to vice-president Lou Spadia, explained the logic of drafting players already signed by the other league, saying:

"We're thinking of the future. There's always an end to a contract."

When the draft was over, 269 offensive players had been chosen compared to 168 defensive players and 77 running backs making that the favorite position in the draft.

There were 47 wide receivers picked, none on the first two rounds.

There were 47 wide receivers picked, including Baltimore's last-round choice of Massachusetts' Tony Berra, son of baseball Hall of Famer Yogi Berra. UCLA had 12 players picked, most of any school.

A'S SIGN DAVALILLO

OAKLAND (AP) — Oakland Athletics announced Wednesday the signing of outfielder-first baseman Vic Davalillo to a 1974 contract, bringing to 10 the number of players signed for the coming season with the Baseball League club. It will be Davalillo's 12th major league season.

Hounds And '67s In Brawl

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — It took 30 minutes to complete the final three minutes of play Wednesday but when it was all over Ottawa 67s and Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds were deadlocked at 5-5 in the only Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A game.

The delay came after a series of minor penalties to the Sault because of use of illegal sticks plus a major and seconds later play resumed.

With 29 seconds remaining to be played, the league's leading scorer, Jack Valiquette, scored for the Greyhounds to tie the game. It was Valiquette's second goal in the last 19 minutes of the game.

Cary Farelli, Paul Woods and Reed Bailey scored the other Greyhound goals. Ottawa marksmen were Tom McDonell, Jamie Masters, Tim Young, Peter Lee and Jim Roberts.

At 16:15 of the third period, with the score tied 4-4, the 67s asked for stick measurement on three of the Greyhound players and the Greyhounds were assessed three minor penalties. Ottawa picked up one penalty for a similar infraction.

At 16:27, Ottawa took a 5-4 lead on a power-play goal by Young and just four seconds later both benches emptied.

Doug McKinnon and Ottawa captain Derek Smith began the fighting from the face-off after the go-ahead goal. From there goalie and all got into it.

Lee and Smith, both of Ottawa, and McKinnon of the Sault were given major penalties for fighting while Ottawa's Young and Tom Price and the Greyhounds' Charlie Simmer, goaltender Billy Thompson and Mike Boland were all given game misconducts.

Pre-trial Conference Today

Two NHL Governors Don't Approve Terms

MONTREAL (CP) — Lawyers for the National Hockey League and World Hockey Association will face Judge A. Leon Higginbotham in pre-trial conference today as the NHL governors failed to give unanimous consent to a set of terms that would have brought peace and an end to litigation between the two leagues.

Judge Higginbotham of the U.S. district court in Philadelphia had given both sides until today to reach an out-of-court settlement in a series of lawsuits that had been lumped under his jurisdiction. Litigation that saw the WHA suing the established NHL for a sum in excess of $60 million.

Earlier, lawyers for both sides had reached a tentative agreement that would have seen the WHA drop its anti-trust litigation against the NHL for several concessions and compromises by the NHL of the $1.5-million bill for legal fees incurred by the WHA.

Judge Higginbotham has set a trial date of March 28.

NHL president Clarence Campbell said late Wednesday night that he had not received unanimous approval from all 16 league clubs in support of the proposed agreement.

"It was learned here that two clubs, from the United States, still had not advised NHL headquarters of their decision. However, Campbell refused to identify the two teams.

Campbell said "negotiations can continue up until March 28 and even after that if the trial is in progress."

"But once you get to this stage, settlement becomes more difficult," he said.

The WHA trustees had approved the proposed agreement between the two leagues shortly after lawyers for both sides met earlier this month.

Tentative terms of the pact included a scheme for 15 exhibition games between WHA and NHL teams next September. Also to be agreed was the fact that each league would recognize the other's contracts and permit inter-league trading of players who are waived out of their league.

The WHA also agreed not to challenge the NHL's new players' contract writ, the one-year option clause that was adopted by the league last December over the protests of the National Hockey League Players Association (NHLPA).

Alan Eagleson of Toronto, executive director of the NHLPA, said in Chicago Tuesday he had instructed the association's lawyers in Philadelphia, Marvin Miller of New York — to send a letter to Judge Higginbotham outlining the association's opposition to the proposed agreement.

Eagleson said the letter asked the judge to make terms of the agreement known to the association and to grant the players' request a 30-day waiting period before making the agreement final.

The players association maintained in its letter the 30-day waiting period is time to make its objections known to the judge.

Artis Gilmore Answers Critics

Artis Gilmore of Kentucky Colonels answered some of his critics Wednesday night, spearheading the East to a 128-112 win over the West in the American Basketball Association all-star game at Norfolk, Va.

The seven-foot, two-inch centre, often accused of not playing up to his potential, responded the game's most valuable player.

The 24-year-old Gilmore scored 18 points, led the East with 13 rebounds and topped Louie Dampier in blocked shots with four.

In Wednesday's NBA games, Boston Celtics beat Cleveland Cavaliers 120-108, Detroit Pistons downed Buffalo Braves 111-96, New York Knicks whipped Kansas City-Omaha Kings 116-96 and Seattle SuperSonics captured Bullets 103-94 and Golden State Warriors dropped Atlanta Hawks 129-122.
